HEAD-ON FATAL TO TWO

Spectators view two cars which collided head-on on Grove Avenue near Merrill Avenue in the Chino area in which two persons were killed. One driver reportedly slashed his wrists after the accident in an apparent suicide attempt, said highway patrolmen. The two men killed were state employes.

Young Upland cyclist dies in bike spill

Three persons were killed Wednesday in two Pomona Valley area traffic accidents. One involved a two-car head-on collision, and the second an Upland motorcyclist who struck a dirt embankment.

Both were investigated by the California Highway Patrol.

Two state employes died from injuries received when their sedan collided with another car on Grove Avenue near Merrill Avenue in the Chino area. The accident occurred about 2:30 p.m.

They are Hufford Allen, 62, of Calimesa, a field safety engineer for the State Division of Industrial Safety, and William Newell Merritt, 56, of 4932 El Monlino St., Riverside, district representative for the State Department of Housing and Community Development.

Both were riding in Allen's own vehicle. They were pronounced dead at Chino Community Hospital.

The second driver, Jim Boschma, 17, of 1340 Adam Park Drive, Covina, was treated at the Chino hospital and later transferred to the San Bernardino County Hospital.

In the cycle accident, Steven Darryl Jordan, 18, of 276 Benson Ave., Upland, suffered fatal injuries when his motorcycle hit a dirt embankment on Mt. Baldy Road near Shinn Road in the Mt. Baldy area. The accident occurred about 5:40 p.m.

He was driving south on Mt. Baldy Road and attempted to pass another cycle on a curve when his motorcyle went down on its right side, skidded off the roadway and across a dirt "turnout" before hitting the embankment, said officers.

He was transported to Pomona Valley Community Hospital, where doctors pronounced him dead.

Richard Duarte, rider of the other cycle, said he and Jordan were riding their cycles when Jordan attempted to pass him on the right.

Duarte said he glanced over in time to see Jordan sliding on his side.

Boschma was driving north on Grove and started to pass another car when he saw Allen's vehicle coming toward him in the opposing direction, said officers.

Boschma swerved back into the northbound lane, where his car struck the rear of an auto operated by Donald Harold German, 19, of 6691 Riverside Drive, Chino, patrolmen reported.

The collision caused Boschma's vehicle to veer back into the southbound lane, where it collided with Allen's auto, said officers.

Two passengers in Boschma's auto received minor cuts and bruises. Christopher Copeland, 16, and Thomas

Leads police to graves

Bible-toting sailor held in slaying of 3 teen-age girls in South Carolina

FOLLY BEACH, S.C. (UPI— A Bible-toting sailor was charged late Wednesday night with the murder of three teen-age girls whose bodies were buried in sand dunes near this quiet resort town.

Police said Richard R. Valenti, 30, led officers to the graves of two of the girls about a block from the house where he lived with his wife and three small children.

Valenti, stationed aboard the submarine tender USS Petrel at the Charleston Naval Base, was charged in nine counts, including three for murder and one for assault. Charleston County Police Chief Paul F. Hartline said Valenti made a statement to police after being picked up on the assault charge Wednesday afternoon.

Hartline said Valenti then led police, carrying lanterns and flashlights, to the grave sites Wednesday night. A search uncovered the bodies under two feet of sand, about 30 feet above the Atlantic Ocean's high tide mark.

Officers said Valenti asked to be allowed to return home to pick up his Bibles before he was taken to jail, and he carried two of them with him to his cell. Police said Valenti was from Massachusetts, but no hometown was immediately available. He had been in Charleston about two years.

Two of the bodies were in the same grave, a few feet from where the body of Mary Earline Bunch was found Tuesday. She was the 16-year-old daughter of former Folly Beach Police Chief Julian Bunch.

The two girls were identified tentatively as Alexis Ann Latimer, 13, and Sherri Jan Clark, 14, missing since May 23, 1973. Both were bound with rope, as was the Bunch girl, who was found after a resident told police his dog acted strangely whenever it passed a stretch of dunes on the eastern end of Folly Beach.

After the Bunch girl was found, police suspected more bodies might be in the dunes and brought in bulldozers, which dug into the sand all Wednesday without success.

Good or bad news?

Researcher sees 'pill' for men within 5 years

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — For those interested in sex, there's good news and bad news today.

Good news for men who are waiting and can wait a little longer, for your PILL.

Bad news for parents of teen-agers.

Dr. C. Alvin Paulsen, a researcher from the University of Washington, said at a national meeting of doctors on planned parenthood and world population Wednesday that "the pill" may be ready for men within five years.

And along came a government official, Dr. Louis M. Hellman, who warned American moms and dads they had better join in "realization that we live now with an openly and actively sexual generation of teen-agers."

"Sure, sex is a family matter," the deputy assistant secretary for population affairs in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare added in a news conference.

"Parents are rightfully concerned about the furor over sex education in schools and such. But do they want their children to learn sex in the gutter? Can they do it alone?"

Hellman said the public should get away from "the old feeling that fear and ignorance of sex has kept women from being sexually active."

Paulsen, 50, is a professor of internal medicine who has been testing 100 volunteer males with a combination of the male potency hormone testosterone and the artificial hormone danazol via injections and orally since mid-1973.

Paulsen said that "a reversible method of male contraception" has not been perfected yet.

"I hope we can have something within five years. Some want the pill. Some might prefer injections. We would like to have lots of options," he told UPI.

"We started the first administration of the combinations last March," he said. "The men are married and unmarried, between 19 and 35 years old, and the ones who tested out 'safe' have not impregnated any women."

He said that one of the brightest parts of his research is that although the combination tested so far does cause one to put on some weight, it does not carry even the minute chance of blood clots which have cut into use of the female pill.

Admiral opposed involvement

Ellsberg overruled him on Vietnam issue, says Zumwalt

MEDFORD, Mass. (UPI) — Adm. Elmo Zumwalt says he opposed involvement of U.S. ground troops in Vietnam in the early '60s but was overruled by Daniel Ellsberg.

Zumwalt, chief of naval operations, said Wednesday that when he was a lower echelon naval officer in late 1963 he wrote a report stating "our national interest would not be served by becoming militarily involved" in Vietnam.

"The superior that overruled my recommendation was named Daniel Ellsberg," Zumwalt told an audience at Tufts University. The admiral said Ellsberg wrote a report of his own recommending that U.S. ground forces be committed to Vietnam.

Zumwalt said he wrote that if the United States did become involved more deeply anyway, he recommended "massive bombing" of military-related targets in North Vietnam and limitation of ground troops to advisers.

Ellsberg joined the Defense Department in 1964, working on decision-making involving Vietnam. An early supporter of the war, he later grew disenchanted and he made the famous Pentagon Papers public in 1971.

Zumwalt said one negative result of the Vietnam war was the development of an antimilitaristic spirit in the U.S. which resulted in the reduction of the percentage of the federal budget for military purposes.

Also, he said, while the United States was spending "up to $30 billion" a year to wage war in Vietnam, the Soviet Union was spending money on developing new weapons. He said the Soviet Navy now has four times as many ships as does the U.S. Navy.

Zumwalt also said U.S. sailors had proved "remarkably adept" in turning over their military duties to the South Vietnamese. He said the Soviets had not learned a similar lesson, as shown by their "heavy-handed" efforts to help the Egyptians in the Middle East.

Lottery winner had strong hunch, quit job before he won

BOSTON (UPI) — Louis M. Reny had a winning feeling about the $1 million Massachusetts lottery.

The feeling got stronger as the day of the drawing approached, and Reny, 54' became so confident that he told his supervisor at the Monsanto Co. of Springfield, Mass., where he has worked for 15 years, he was quitting.

He showed up at the Sheraton-Boston Hotel, where the winning lottery tickets were drawn Tuesday night, with a horseshoe in one pocket and two sets of Catholic Rosary beads in the other, and left with the $1 million grand prize.

Prof says new math all talk, no action

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Too many children who learn the "new math" do poorly in the real world, a university professor said Wednesday.

Dr. Roy Dubisch, professor of mathematics at the University of Washington, said too many "poorly trained teachers" think it is important to talk about math, as opposed to having pupils practice working math problems like the real ones they will encounter later in life.

Nixon avoids Watergate in DAR address

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon said today that America must regain its sense of national destiny and lead the world's search for peace.

In a patriotic type speech to 4,500 members of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) at their "Continental Congress" in colorful, flag-bedecked Constitution Hall, the President recounted the wars of this century, and said the nation must meet the challenge "to provide the leadership so the next generation can be the first generation in a century that does not have a war."

The President spoke for 25 minutes, concentrating entirely on the nation's leadership in world peace efforts. He did not refer to Watergate, the House impeachment investigation or domestic politics.

"There is no other nation in the free world today, among the industrial powers that can assume the leadership," he said. "The peace of the world is in our hands."

Hearst: Saxbe speechmaking

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Randolph A. Hearst says Attorney General William B. Saxbe has a right to his opinion, but when Saxbe calls the newspaperman's kidnaped daughter one of a group of "common criminals," it is no more than "speechmaking."

"As far as I'm concerned, it's speculation at this point," said Hearst, president and editor of The San Francisco Examiner, whose daughter, Patricia, was identified by the FBI as among nine robbers who took $10,960 from a bank branch Monday.

"It's speechmaking," Hearst said Wednesday. "Saxbe has the right to think what he thinks, and I also have the right."

Saxbe told a Washington, D.C., news conference earlier in the day he felt Miss Hearst was an active participant in the holdup. "This group we're talking about are common criminals," he said, including Miss Hearst "as part of it."

ACLU files lawsuit on jail conditions

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — About 6,000 prisoners in county jails in New Jersey are living "under truly brutal circumstances," the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) has charged in a lawsuit filed in behalf of the inmates.

A hearing has been set for May 3.

The ACLU said Wednesday the grievances include censorship of mail, sparse diets, violations of the health code, overcrowding, rats in the jails, and religious and racial discrimination.

Workers' pension bill falters in committee

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Barraged by a phalanx of labor and business lobbyists, "reform" legislation to regulate the $20 billion private pension industry has faltered in a Senate committee.

The bill, aimed at guaranteeing workers they will receive the pensions have earned, encountered stiff opposition Wednesday during a more than three-hour hearing in the Business and Professions Committee.

Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, author of the measure, decided to delay a vote for two weeks in order to firm up support for the proposal.

Warning that thousands of persons have already experienced "frustration, bitterness and tragedy" when pension expectations did materialize, Deukmejian said additional "thousands of California workers may never collect one cent from their pension plans."

Sen. Alfred H. Song, D-Monterey Park, added, "The employer can get away with murder today."

The labor union and business representatives argued the bill would lead to reduced benefits for retired workers by increasing the costs of pension plans. They also said the problem of pension abuses should be left to the federal government.

Among other things, the bill (SB1800) would require partial vesting after three years and full vesting after 10. Vesting means that person would receive at least some pension.

Participants in a pension plan would have to be informed annually of their retirement status. "Full funding" of the plan's liabilities would be required to insure payment of promised benefits.

The bill would also require beneficiaries of a pension plan to be told all the details of the plan in "easy to understand" language.

Supported by the Reagan administration, the measure would affect about 3 million workers and pension plans holding $20 billion in workers' funds, Deukmejian said.

He introduced the bill after seven hearings around the state last year. The senator said the hearings brought out the case of one man who quit in a salary dispute after 24 years with a firm but lost all his retirement benefits.

Hosts of similar cases were cited in a 41-page report stemming from the hearings. The report was released earlier this year.

Leading the labor opposition to the measure was the California Federation of Labor, AFL-CIO.

Speaking on behalf of the group, Richard Mansfield estimated the bill would increase the cost of pension plans by 30 to 50 per cent.

If contributions were not increased, he said there then would have to be a reduction in benefits.

Also opposing the bill were the painters, hodcarriers, carpenters and laborers unions and the California Bankers Association, the California Builders Council and Pacific Telephone.

The only labor union in support Wednesday was the United Auto workers Union. Other support came from the California Rural Legal Assistance group, the Western Center on Law and Poverty and the National Senior Citizens Law Center, both of Los Angeles.

The labor groups said they preferred to wait for a federal pension bill. Two such measures have been stalled in a conference committee since January.

'We mean business,' says Rodino; want those tapes

WASHINGTON (UPI) Rep. Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said today "we mean business" in demanding tape recordings of 42 presidential conversations. A refusal to fully honor the panel's subpoena could be considered an impeachable offense, he said.

The committee, which Rodino said will begin hearing evidence in its impeachment probe about May 7, issued a subpoena last week giving the White House until April 25 to turn over taped conversations between President Nixon and various top aides in Feburary, March and April of last year.

The White House has promised to supply a "conclusive and comprehensive" answer by early next week, but some aides have indicated that conversations dealing with national security and non-Watergate matters would be screened out.

Rodino was asked during an interview on the NBC-TV Today Show if the reported White House editing strategy was satisfactory to the committee.

"No," he replied. "This would mean that the White House would be making the final determination. This could not be a proper inquiry, a comprehensive inquiry unless we were to make the determination as to what is necessary. The committee in the last instance is the determing factor. That's the way it's going to be."

Asked what kind of message the committee was attempting to give the White House, Rodino replied:

"We have to indicate quite strongly that we mean business and that the House has given us this authority and therefore this would be a refusal not only to comply with the request of the committee but with the House of Representatives as the sole power to inquire in impeachment proceedings."

He asserted: "We have issued a subponea. It's neccessary that the White House comply because it's in the interest of answering a nagging question that is before the American people. Unless this is done, it is going to be considered by the committee as a refusal on the part of the White House and could be considered as a possible crime of impeachment."

Rodino said "the only way that the committee inquiry can be satisfied" is if it has a hand in screening out irrelevant material in the tapes.

Rodino would not speculate on what action the committee might take if the White House did not fully comply with the subponea. Some other committee members have noted however that the committee has no real power to enforce the subpoena.

Stans denies all at trial; talks of wife's illness

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans testified today that "on my oath I never did anything to help Robert Vesco in any way and I never asked anyone to do anything to help Robert Vesco."

He flatly denied that he had conspired with former Attorney General John N. Mitchell to impede a federal investigation of the international financier in return for a $200,000 cash contribution by Vesco to the 1972 Nixon campaign.

He also denied lying to the grand jury that indicted the two former Nixon cabinet members.

Testifying calmly but emphatically in a soft voice as the end of the Mitchell-Stans trial neared, the former Midwestern accountant and self-made millionaire also told the jury of the critical illness of his wife, Kathleen, during much of the time covered by the indictment, detailing how he had restricted his work schedule in order to spend all weekends and all evenings except Monday and Tuesday with her in Walter Reed Hospital in Washington.

Mrs. Stans contracted a rare blood disease in August, 1972, and was near death at times until mid-December.

She returned to the hospital in January 1973 with hepatitis and returned again in May with another form of hepatitis.

Federal judge Lee P. Gagliardi informed the nine-man, three-woman jury that he was admitting the testimony about Mrs. Stans "solely as indicating his (Stans') state of mind at the time." Defense attorney Walter J. Bonner also had said he wanted the testimony presented to show that Stans was preoccupied with his wife's illness when he testified to the grand jury in March and April of 1973.

Looking for Zebra suspect

A face in S.F. crowds

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Mayor Joseph L. Alioto, calling it an "extraordinary situation," said police will stop many citizens today for questioning in a rash of random street killings.

"We are going to be stopping people in San Francisco who have a certain profile. We're going to stop a lot of people," Alioto said Wednesday after police issued composite drawings of a man suspected in the slaying of 12 persons since last November.

"This is an extraordinary situation and it calls for extreme measures," the mayor added.

All of the victims —12 dead and six wounded —have been white and their assailants have been described by witnesses as black.

"We ask the cooperation of citizens and we want to assure them that we will be mindful of their constitutional rights," Alioto said. He said police have "blanketed this town with auto patrols and walking patrols" to carry out what is known as "Operation Zebra."

Police Chief Donald Scott said that only persons who match the description in the police drawings will be stopped. The pictures depicted a black, thin-faced man in a knit cap, 20 to 30 years old and between five feet, nine inches, and six feet tall.

Alioto said it was "a police action without parallel in San Francisco history" and was necessary to end the string of apparently motiveless killings.

"I want the people of San Francisco to understand that this is not a racial issue," Alioto said, "but it is a blunt fact that the victims are white and our description says the suspect is black.

"With this police action, as with other things, all we are trying to do in this life is hold tragedy to a minimum."

Police Capt. Mortimer McInerney, chief of the bureau of inspectors, said that three or four men —"although it could go higher than that" —might have been responsible for the killings.

The latest fatal victim was Nelson T. Shields IV, 23, Greenville, Del., who was shot three times in the back Tuesday night in the Ingleside District near San Francisco State University.

Police said they were sure Shields was the victim of the Zebra attackers because shell casings found at the scene matched those found in the areas where the others were shot.

McInerney warned city residents to avoid "taking after dinner strolls in any part of the city.

"I'm not saying they should stay home—we don't want a ghost town between seven and 10 o'clock—but, if they have to go out, it should be for a reason, and they should try to be with one or two other people."

The officer said the attacks occurred generally before 10 p.m.

Three killed...

Luerton, 16, both of Covina, were treated at Chino hospital.

Following the accident, Boschma slashed his wrists at the scene in an apparent suicide attempt, said investigators. They restrained him and sent him to the hospital.

German, whose car continued in the northbound lane after the initial collision, wasn't seriously hurt.

He told officers he had talked to those in Boschma's auto and driven north on Grove. He later looked in his rear view mirror and saw Boschma coming behind him.

"He tried to pass me and the next thing I know, I'm crawling out of my car," he added.

Vets announce plans for 2nd bonus march

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The American Veterans Movement, which staged a three-week sit-in at a U.S. senator's office, Wednesday announced plans for a second "bonus march" on Washington like the one that brought on clashes between veterans and Army troops in 1932.

"Just as in 1932, when our fathers and grandfathers marched for their rights into Washington, D.C., we must march again," Ron Kovic, spokesman for the group, told a news conference.

He appealed to veterans throughout the nation, of all ages from all wars, to join the march, which he said would begin on Flag Day, June 14, and end with a rally in Washington July 4.

Ehrlichman says report not true

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — John Ehrlichman has termed "false" and "silly" a newspaper report that he is disenchanted with President Nixon, less friendly with H.R. Haldeman and plans to settle for a guilty plea to reduced charges in his Watergate-related court cases.

At his first news conference since last August, the President's former domestic adviser read a statement denying the report in Wednesday's Los Angeles Times, which quoted a "person who has been close" to Ehrlichman as saying he might settle for reduced charges and testify for the prosecution.

Nixon outlines 'new dialogue' for Latin American ministers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon Wednesday night outlined for the foreign ministers of 24 Latin American nations his administration's view of the hemisphere's "new dialogue," initiated in Mexico City earlier this year.

"The agenda for the new dialogue is peace, political freedom and economic growth," Nixon said at the black-tie dinner at the White House.

He also reaffirmed an earlier pledge that the United States will not intervene in the domestic affairs of other hemispheric nations and promised continued U.S. support in trade matters, economic aid, science and technology and energy.

"Our friendships with Latin America are a center pillar in the structure of peace we are trying to build," Nixon said.

The future role of the Castro regime in Cuba within the hemisphere did not come up during the first day of meetings.

The only remaining point on today's agenda, "General Panorama of the Relations between the United States and Latin America," is vague enough for almost any outstanding issue, including Cuba, to be raised.

That happened at the previous meeting in Mexico City two months ago. It may happen again today and will surely occur when Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and the other foreign ministers reconvene in Atlanta Friday as the Fourth General Assembly of the Organization of American States.

The ministers dealt with five of the six points on the agenda during the first three-hour working session Wednesday afternoon.

At the Treasury

Change in style, but little change in policy expected

WASHINGTON (UPI — The staid, drab Treasury Department may be in for a change in style as energy chief William E. Simon takes over as treasury secretary from George P. Shultz.

But little change in philosophy is expected. Both Shultz, who is returning to private life, and Simos, who was nominated by President Nixon Wednesday to replace him, are staunch freemarketeers. Both favor the smallest possible government intrusion in the economy.

Nixon named Simon's deputy, John C. Sawhill, to succeed him as head of the Federal Energy Office (FEO.

Like Shultz, Simon sees the upward spiral in the cost of living as the biggest economic problem facing the nation.

"It's going to be our number one avenue of concentration," Simon told UPI.

But Simon, who has gained the reputation of a hardcharging administrator with a quick temper and penchant for publicity, will bring a different flavor to the job than the softspoken, academic Shultz.

"There are obviously going to be differences in style," Simon acknowledged. "There has to be between two people."

The new secretary, assuming he is confirmed by the Senate, will inherit only a portion of Shultz's vast duties as chief economic policy maker. A White House announcement said Nixon will himself assume chairmanship of the Council on Economic Policy, which Shultz headed.

Simon indicated that suits him fine. "There was too much on the plate of the Treasury Department," he said.

Simon, now 46, was making millions as a Wall Street investment banker when he was appointed undersecretary of the treasury in January, 1973. He kept that title after he became energy chief in December. He was Shultz' personal choice to succeed as treasury secretary.

Shultz, former business school dean at the University of Chicago, announced several weeks ago he would leave in May. He is the last holdover from Nixon's original cabinet, which he joined as labor secretary in 1969.

Sawhill, 37, a former college professor with a doctorate in economics, told reporters he will give the President a blueprint before next November on how the United States can become self-sufficient in energy by the 1980s.

Pope is concerned

VATICAN CITY (UPI — Pope Paul VI expressed concern Wednesday over civil strife in Northern Ireland and Cambodia.

The 76-year-old pontiff made his remarks to pilgrims from those two countries who attended his weekly general audience.

The Vatican did not release the text of his remarks, but participants in the audience said he told visitors from St. Patrick's Grammar School in Belfast he was very sensitive to conditions in their city and prayed "that peace may console in prosperity the land called Ulster."

Rocky, Nixon meet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller held an unannounced 90-minute meeting with President Nixon Wednesday in the Oval Office, the White House said.

Tom DeCair, a press assistant, said that Rockefeller discussed with Nixon the progress of his work on the National Commission on Critical Choices.

"He comes in periodically to talk about this," said DeCair. He was unable to say whether politics and Michigan's 8th district defeat were discussed.

Tirade in court

LONDON (UPI) — Singer Janie Jones was hustled out of court Wednesday when she shouted abuse at the judge.

"This is not a court of law, it's a joke!" Miss Jones shouted. "You are a biased judge."

Judge Allan K. Hamilton was just about to begin his summing up in the case against Miss Jones, being tried on 10 charges of controlling prostitutes. The charges resulted from an alleged payola scandal involving payments of sex and money to British Broadcasting Corp. (BBC), executives to persuade them to play certain phonograph records.

Humpty Dumpty

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — Sen. James Buckley, R-N.Y., told a Hofstra University student audience Wdnesday that he does not believe President Nixon will ever be able to regain his pre-Watergate popularity.

"I don't believe that you can put Humpty Dumpty back together again," Buckley said.

Buckley said that he has been reecently receiving more support for his suggestion that Nixon resign.

Originally, he said the mail he received was about "four-to-one" in opposition to his call for resignation, but the letters are now running about "fifty-fifty."

Burton in hospital

HOLLYWOOD (UPI — Richard Burton is reported doing well and should be out of a hospital "in a week or 10 days," a spokesman for the actor said.

Burton is being treated for influenza and tracheo-bronchitis at St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica.

A spokesman for the actor said he completed his film role in "The Klansman" on location in Oroville, Calif., during the weekend and entered the hospital Sunday.

"Richard is doing well and should be out of the hospital in a week or 10 days," the spokesman said.

Industry decision postponed

San Dimas planners bow to citizen fight for park

By LENORE WALLACE
P-B Staff Writer

SAN DIMAS — The planning staff Wednesday night took the steam out of a protest hearing by offering to give residents around San Dimas Elementary School what they want for the neighborhood.

This includes the use of the entire five-acre school site for a park and the rezoning of industrial land in the neighborhood to residential.

The park plan got the unanimous approval of the Planning Commission but members were unable to reach a decision about the change from industrial zoning to residential zoning which would mean the removal of two industries in the neighborhood, one that has been in existence since 1948.

The commission decided to hold over for additional study this area that is bounded by Commerical Street between Cataract Avenue and Monte Vista Avenue and south of Railway Street. The commission will meet May 7 at 6 p.m. for a field trip to the site. The public hearing on the issue was reopened and testimony will again be heard on the subject at 8 that same night at City Hall before the commission arrives at a decision.

Residents near the two industrial plants, Cornett Manufacturing Co., a company that manufactures sawdust collection systems from sheet metal, and Greyhound Storage Warehouse complained that the two industrial uses were not compatible with the residential neighborhood and also declared that they did not want any more industrial uses in their neighborhood in the future.

They cited noise pollution as the biggest problem with Cornett Manufacturing and said large trucks loading items blocked the sidewalk in front of the Greyhound Warehouse Storage.

Planning Director Mark Goldberg explained that the two industries would have 25 years to discontinue the use and relocate but that they could not expand either plants during this period.

Those protesting the industrial land use included Joe Shepherd, Wes Edmundson and William Coulter.

Speaking in favor of the continued use of industrial land designation in the Commercial Street area included Mr. and Mrs. Mike Cornett, E. C. Hartman and former San Dimas Mayor Stanley Plummer.

Mr. and Mrs. Cornett said they were trying to improve the problems that annoy nearby residents. A new building is now under construction at the site that will eliminate the noise and will screen the operation from neighbors, they said.

Plummer said he felt industrial use is appropriate for the neighborhood because of the three railroads that are adjacent to the properties. He also pointed out that the houses near the plants are more than 50 years old.

Questioned by a neighborhood resident in the audience, Plummer said he had no immediate plans to expand his lumber company that is located one block east of the special planned development area and is located in the creative growth zone.

Covina home looted of stamps and coins

COVINA — Burglars, entering through an open bedroom window, burglarized a Covina home during the day Wednesday and escaped with over $14,000 in collector's items and jewelry.

The thieves entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald E. Gourley, 20540 Exbury Place, while the residents were at work, said sheriff's deputies.

Among the more than 60 items taken from the home were collections of coins and medals, and stamps valued at about $10,000. Also taken were television sets, radios, cameras and a handgun.

Detectives investigating the case were able to obtain only a vague description of a man seen outside the house by a neighbor.

Fire bomb damages store in Ontario

ONTARIO — Two molotov cocktails were thrown at the rear exit of the Stockwell and Binney Office Products store at 114 N. Euclid Ave. Wednesday night, causing a fire and thousands of dollars damage to the building and its contents.

Police and firemen Wednesday night said they found an unexploded molotov cocktail fashioned out of a gallon wine bottle and a wick lying in the alley outside of the rear exit. They also found evidence of another which was thrown at the building.

Police reported that the owner of the building, Benjamin L. Cutter, 65, who lives in an upstairs apartment, discovered that someone, just prior to the fire, had soldered shut his car door and padlocks on two chain fences in an adjacent parking lot.

Police and firemen were called to the fire at 8:49 p.m. Fire Capt. Norman Stolz said when his engine company arrived it found the rear hallway in the building completely engulfed in flames. The fire had worked its way down into the basement flooring and the large building was filled with smoke.

Cutter told firemen that he was watching television in his apartment when he heard the fire units arriving. He went outside and was informed that the building was on fire.

Cutter said he tried to move his car from the adjacent parking lot and found that the doors had been soldered shut. Police and firemen asked Cutter to unlock the chain fence in the parking lot so fire units could pass. The padlocks on the chain fences had also been soldered, and firemen had to cut the chain.

Police and firemen reported that Cutter had been the victim of numerous acts of vandalism in the past, and had been forced to block off the parking lot on the corner of Euclid Avenue and Holt Boulevard at night with chain fences. Police and firemen said they were uncertain if there was a relationship between Wednesday night's vandalism on Cutter's car and fences and the fire in his building.

Firemen reported that the fire caused an estimated $3,000 damage to the building and an as yet unknown amount of damage to the contents of the store.

Ontario man struck by hammer, robbed

UPLAND — A 31-year-old Ontario man was struck over the head several times with a hammer and robbed by two men early Tuesday morning remained hospitalized today.

Wearing Brown of 210 N. Fern Ave., Ontario, a cook at the Mt. Baldy Lodge, was listed in satisfactory condition this morning at San Bernardino County Hospital with head injuries. Brown wandered into a yard seeking help from an Upland resident on 20th Street about 9:30 a.m., Tuesday and later told police that he was hit over the head with a hammer and robbed about 2:30 a.m.

Brown said he was at an Ontario bar Monday night. When the bar closed on Tuesday morning he said he asked two men, both described as Caucasians with long blond hair, to drive him to Mt. Baldy Lodge so he could go to work. He said he gave the men $3 for the ride and they left the bar.

Brown said en route to Mt. Baldy, one of the men suddenly produced a hammer and began hitting him on the head. He said he lost consciousness, but could remember the men taking his wallet and pushing him out of the car and into a wash near 20th Street and Campus Avenue in Upland.

Both of Brown's assailants were further described as being in their early 20s, one about 6 feet tall, 165 pounds, wearing a blue shirt and Levis, and the other about 5 feet 10, 125 to 130 pounds wearing a blue denim outfit. Brown said the men were driving a 1966 or 1967 white Chevrolet with a red interior.

When care means everything

There are times when care, and care alone, means everything. That's why at Rose Hills we are not just another mortuary. We stress the importance of care and understanding above all else.

It was a care for beauty that led to the creation, more than a half century ago, of the world's most naturally beautiful memorial park.

It was an understanding of people's needs that led us to establish a mortuary. We offer every needed service — mortuary, cemetery, chapels, flower shops, mausoleums and crematory — all at one convenient location.

Care . . . and understanding. At Rose Hills, we think they mean a lot.

Biggest opportunities in white collar jobs

Million and a half jobs expected to open up in California by end of 1975

By JOHN R. BALZAR

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Clerical and other types of white collar jobs will offer the greatest employment opportunities for Californians during the next three years, according to a new government report.

A total of 1.45 million jobs are expected to open up between now and 1975, 350,000 because of employment expansion and 900,000 due to workers leaving their jobs. Nearly a third of the total was for clerks.

The report was prepared by the Employment Development Department and released Tuesday to help educators, counselors and economists "make decisions" about the economy and employment opportunities.

It said the number of white collar job openings during the next three years will be more than double the opportunities in blue collar work. The biggest single category was clerical and related employment with 378,000 openings anticipated.

White collar opportunities as a whole are expected to total 902,000 job openings. Blue collar work was forecast to provide 299,000 jobs, followed by openings for service workers totalling 224,000.

The comprehensive, 125-page study was based on 1970 census figures and contained projections from 1972 through 1975. During that period employment in the state was expected to climb from 8.2 million persons to 8.75 million.

Generally, the report concluded, the best job opportunities will be in "traditional occupations," such as secretarial and kindred jobs, with "exciting" and "appealing" vocations offering few openings.

"Many occupations which are very appealing to students in search of interesting careers may continue to have very limited labor market value for an indefinite future," said the report. Typical examples were marine biologists and environmental pollution specialists.

Besides general projections, the report, titled "California Manpower," gave job-by-job breakdowns on opportunities for about 400 separate occupations, ranging from airline stewardsses to stone cutters and a classification called "hucksters and peddlers."

In many instances, it offered salary averages for specific jobs, based on 1969 figures. Dentists were among the highest paid category, earning an average of more than $15,000 a year, while janitors and secretaries averaged something over $6,000.

Other white collar openings were forecast this way:

Professional and technical workers, 252,000 new openings; managers, 132,000 openings; and sales workers, 140,000 openings.

In the blue collar field, craftsmen, 111,000 openings; machine operators, 157,000 openings, mostly for those handling precision machinery, and non-farm laborers, 31,000 openings.

An expected 16,000 openings were forecast for farmers and farm workers.

The report suggested the need for 529 actors; 5,171 hucksters and peddlers; 3,085 reporters and editors, 37 stone cutters; 4 lumberjacks, and 2,052 airline stewardesses.

CHP gasoline consumption is down 10%

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The California Highway Patrol has reduced use of gasoline in its vehicles by 10 per cent because of the high cost of the fuel, according to Commissioner Walter Pudinski.

Pudinsky said he has instituted gas-conserving practices to cut CHP gasoline useage from 1 million gallons a month to 900,000 gallons.

He said the increased costs would force the CHP to exceed its budget by $1.44 million during the last six months of the current fiscal year ending June 30 unless its gas consumption was cut.

The CHP commissioner ordered these gas-saving practices:

—Patrolmen are cruising at lower speeds, about 5 miles and hour lower than the recently reduced speed limit of 55 m.p.h.

—Patrolmen are shutting off their vehicle engine while sitting in them along highways to make out accident reports. Previously, they were leaving the engine running to prevent stalling if they had to respond quickly to an emergency call.

—Internal useage of vehicles by civilian personnel in the CHP department is being reduced.

A CHP spokesman said that until last Dec. 31, the patrol was paying 24 cents a gallon for gasoline under a state contract with oil firms.

But since then the patrol has been paying prevailing pump rates because no oil firm is willing to contract with it to provide gasoline in 1974.

To meet the additional costs, Pudinski said he also has cancelled a planned $700,000 purchase of radio equipment and delayed one class at the Highway Patrol Academy.

Michigan starts business service

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — The Michigan Department of Commerce has begun a special service for businessmen who need answers to questions about taxation, environmental laws, labor situations or other areas in which government can help.

The service is designed to eliminate some of the "mutual suspicion" between government and business. It is available to all businesses, including those considering moving intoMichigan from another state, free of charge.

White House to host Latin dinner

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon will reaffirm his administration's policy of "mature partnership" with Western Hemisphere nations at a White House dinner tonight for Latin American and Caribbean foreign ministers, sources said.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is to open two days of closed-door meetings with the ministers today to review the economic and political issues discussed at a similar meeting in Mexico City seven weeks ago.

The meetings are part of a process initiated in Mexico City, which in turn resulted from a suggestion by Kissinger that the United States and Latin America should begin a "new dialogue".

Looking for ways to alter situation

Russ fear increasing U.S. gains, own loss in Mideast

LONDON (UPI) — A ranking Communist diplomat said today the Soviet Union's anger over increasing U.S. influence in the Middle East has tured to outright fear that it will lose its hard-won foothold there. He said the Kremlin is determined to retain its position, at considerable cost, if necessary.

The diplomat, an East European who visited Moscow and Cairo, warned that the Russians mean business because fundamental strategic interests are at stake as well as the prestige of the key leadership.

"The Americans would be well advised to be a little less successful in the Middle East," he said.

"The disengagement agreement arranged by (U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger with Egypt and his growing friendship with Cairo have aroused anger, suspicion and lately outright fear among the Russian leadership for their damaging impact on the Soviet Middle East position."

The Russians apparently let Kissinger do the running in the beginning because they had no influence in Israel. But they did not anticipate a developing friendship between Kissinger asd Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

The informant said the way the Soviets see the position is that where the Soviet military were in virtual supreme control not long ago, American businessmen are now discussing major deals in Cairo while the American Navy is on the strategic Suez Canal in clearing operations.

The hardliners in the Kremlin were said to have been uttering some "pretty tough things." But the desire for continuing detente —the policy of coexistence and cooperation between the super powers —has prevailed so far.

But Moscow is watching closely developments in the Middle East and seems determined to do everything possible to stage a comeback in the region, the informant said.

This it is doing by using the Syrians and urging them to take a tough negotiating position, so as to counterbalance the American success with the Egyptians. Moscow also can be expected to use the Palestinians next by playing the part of the guardians of the Arab cause.

The Russians, according to the source, see the lifting of the oil embargo a major American success toward future longterm cooperation with Arab nations. They fear the penetration of American political influence, economic assistance and knowhow in an area where the Kremlin invested between 6 and $7 billion in arms and aid in the past few years.

Moscow, according to the sources considers Sadat as the key problem, and while resenting Kissinger's success, Sadat is blamed as the man who made it possible.

Younger: Will block free food in new kidnaps

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Attorney General Evelle Younger, criticizing law enforcement in the abduction of Patricia Hearst, has promised to block any attempts by other kidnapers to obtain free food ransom.

Younger said authorities had been "timid" in dealing with the Symbionese Liberation Army kidnapers of the girl.

"If the FBI thinks a shootout is indicated and wants our help, we will help them," Younger told reporters.

Randolph A. Hearst, father of Patricia, has urged repeatedly that nothing be done to jeopardize her safety, and FBI Agent in Charge Charles Bates has said Hearst's wishes were being respected.

Younger said he himself had been afraid he would "do something to get Miss Hearst killed."

He said future political kidnapings in California will be dealt with differently.

"Should we allow a small band of extortionists to dictate our welfare policies?" he asked.

He said it is time for law enforcement to re-examine its approach in kidnapings.

"We have traditionally responded to kidnapings for ransom by doing nothing which would jeopardize the safety of the victim," he said.

"But we have learned that our approach to a political kidnaping should not be the same. Extortion under the guise of altruistic purposes cannot be permitted again."

"In the future we intend to ... prosecute under existing law and to stop any food distribution plans designed to meet extortion demands of kidnapers," he said.

Oyster growers dread sawdust

NEWPORT, Ore. (UPI) — For oyster growers along the Yaquina River, which empties into the ocean near here, there is something they dread more than an oil spill. It is a sawdust spill.

They say that when wood chips or sawdust from pulp and paper plants get into the river, the oysters generally die trying to ingest the wood residue.

Vaudeville song, dance star Blossom Seeley dies at 82

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Blossom Seeley, a song and dance star of vaudeville, died Wednesday at the age of 82.

Miss Seeley, who was born in San Francisco in 1891, was already performing at the age of 10 as "The Little Blossom." When she appeared on Broadway in 1911 in "Henpecks," she stopped the show with the song, "The 'Frisco Toddler."

She was billed during the vaudeville years as "The Hottest Girl in Town," with her renditions of such songs as "Somebody Loves Me," "Jealous" and "I Cried for You."

Miss Seeley's last public appearance was in 1966 on the Ed Sullivan television show. She performed for many years with her husband, the late Benny Fields. They were known for their theme songs "Melancholy Baby" and "Lullaby of Broadway."

Miss Seeley was first married to Joseph Kane, a theatrical manager. The union ended in 1913, when she married Richard "Rube" Marquard, a major league baseball pitcher with whom she had appeared on the stage.

That marriage also ended in divorce and Miss Seeley married Fields in 1922.

Candidate visits political adversary

POMONA — The visitor to Rep. Victor Veysey's downtown Pomona Mall office Wednesday morning couldn't have received a more cordial welcome.

He was ushered into the congressman's office, offered a seat by a charming secretary and asked to wait until the congressman could be free to chat with him.

The visitor spent 10 minutes or so making small talk with the secretary until the door to the congressman's office opened and it was his turn. The visitor then rushed from his chair, into the office and proceeded to lambast his host.

The visitor was Jim Lloyd, Democratic candidate in the 35th Congressional District. He explained that he was there to protest the congressman's "Drop-in Day" for area voters in the newly formed 35th Congressional District.

"You are not the congressman for the 35th District," Lloyd declared. He pointed out that Rep. Charles Wiggins or Rep. Jerry Pettis are representatives of the people in the area presently.

Almost in what appeared to be the same continuing sentence Lloyd told the congressman that he felt he should resign as the representative from the 43rd District in Imperial Valley to seek the Republican nomination in the new 35th District.

A smiling Veysey took the outburst with good humor and told Lloyd "I can't blame you for being wrong," speaking of Lloyd's charge that Veysey is deceiving voters by representing himself as their congressman.

Lloyd then relaxed and spent the next 10 or so minutes chatting in a friendly manner with the congressman about the race and political issues which included the expansion of Ontario Airport, which both men favored, and possible solutions to the abandoned housing problems in the Pomona Valley.

Both men agreed that they do agree on some issues, shook hands in a friendly manner and parted.

These Are the Men and Their Chances:

The Presidency in '76

"Political forecasts made more than two years in advance rarely, if ever, are perfect. . . . Yet the record shows that candidates who lead in the opinion polls two years before the nominating conventions usually win the presidential nominations. . . . But there are so many imponderables — the midterm elections, 25 or 26 primaries, Watergate — who can say 1976 will be a usual year?"

For a probing essay on the potential principals in the Summer-of-'76 political maneuvering that will lead to the selection of presidential nominees for both major parties, Jack W. Germond, nationally known political writer for the Washington (D.C.) Star, has investigated and rated each man for party support, image, experience and campaign ability. Here's your opportunity to start "keeping score." Match your choices against the experts' in "Who Will Run for President in 1976?"

NOBODY WANTS HER — JoJo Tolar, 29, is five feet tall and weighs 200 pounds. 'I'm too damn fat," she says, so she has had her teeth wired together to keep her from eating. She wants to make it down to 130 pounds so she can rejoin the motorcycle club which rejected her because she was too fat.

Wires up mouth so she can lose weight

CHICAGO (UPI) — JoJo Tolar, ex-member of the D.C. Eagles Motorcycle Club, says she lost the right to wear the club's colors because she is "just too fat." So she had her teeth wired together to lose weight.

After two weeks she has lost 22 pounds, down from 200 to 178. Her goal is 130.

"I'm an ex-Eagles girl and I want to get back." the 5-foot-tall waitress from Chicago's North Side said. "I want to ride again and I'm just too fat."

JoJo Tolar has spent close to half her 29 years with the club. She was so caught up in those leather jackets and roaring bursts of speed she even had the club's emblem tatooed on her right arm.

It was her boyfriend Spider who arranged for her to wear the club's colors and it was through Spider that she lost the right to wear them.

"A girl gets her colors from a guy," she said.

According to JoJo, Spider "is the dude I pack (ride) with," but they broke up about 18 months ago because Spider was tired of riding "a hog," a big motorcycle, and she was too fat for a "chopper," one of the smaller models.

She said she tried a drastic diet, lost 80 pounds, but regained it and more, sending her weight skyrockehing to 200.

"I just have no will power so I had my mouth wired shut," she said. "I love to eat."

It took a dentist seven weeks to complete the job and cost $200, JoJo said.

"I feel pretty good now that I'm used to it," she said. "They call me 'Wirejaws.' That's my new nickname."

JoJo said she carries a pair of wire cutters with her just in case, but said she is determined to cut her weight and again sport the colors of the D.C. Eagles.

Revolutionary says lawyer helped him escape from prison

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A former revolutionary convict has testified before a state senate subcommittee that a lawyer and others helped him escape from prison.

The statements came in secret testimony released by the Senate Subcommittee on Civil Disorders headed by Sen. Dennis E. Carpenter, R-Newport Beach, a former FBI agent.

The witness, only identified as Witness No. 6 to protect him from reprisals, said that the lawyer in question—a National Lawyers Guild member—allegedly brought him hacksaw blades in prison.

The panel said the lawyer is under investigation by the California Bar Association. The lawyer's name was deleted from the transcript of testimony taken in a closed hearing before the committee last month.

The convict —who escaped but is now back in custody — testified, "He smuggled communications for me to the persons involved. He brought hacksaw blades to me in prison in case our plans didn't work and I had to saw my way out."

The prisoner said the main objective of his escape was to set up a training camp to train small teams of Venceremos revolutionariers and escaped convicts in the art of kidnaping, assassinations, sabotage and robberies.

"We were actually preparing then a manual of what we had done" in making bombs, hot-wiring cars and getting around burglar alarms.

The convict testified that the Venceremos differs from the Symbiones Liberation Army in name only.

"In fact," he said, "I feel I can say this. The events since their action with Patty Hearst is practically out of the manuel we wrote. They are just six months behind schedule."

He said the plans of the Venceremos was to train 10-men squads each 60 to 90 days for specific missions.

Asked if there might be a union between Verceremos and the SLA, he answered.

"I am sure that there is now, to my knowledge, Vencermos elements involved in the Symbionese Liberation Army. I know this for a fact."

Brazil lottery pays $2,291,000

BRASILIA (UPI) — Someone, as yet unidentified, in the northeastern state of Bahia has won what is believed to be the world's largest lottery prize - $2,291,000.

The Federal Sports Lottery managed by the Brazilian Finance Ministry, announced Monday that only one person in the entire country chose correctly the results of 13 soccer games played throughout Brazil this weekend.

Although the name of the winner was not immediately revealed it was known that the bet was made in Bahia.

The Federal Sports Lottery said 8,853,391 bets were made last weekend.

The government will not announce the name of the winner until the money has been delivered.

The previous single largest jackpot was won in November 1972 by Mario Alberto Ronconi of the state of Espiritu Santo who won $2,187,943. He divided the money among 17 of his friends.

1974 'pretty fair year' for Chrysler

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lynn Townsend assured stockholders at the company's annual meeting that 1974 will be "a pretty fair year" for the No. 3 automaker.

Townsend said despite forecasts of some security analysts, first quarter earnings would be in the black, although he did not indicate actual figures for 1974.

"It was a very rough quarter for the industry, and you are not going to find that any of the four companies did very well in the first quarter," he said.

In a prepared report, President John J. Riccardo said despite efforts to control rising costs, "There will be substantial price increases on our 1975 models." He did not indicate how large the hikes might be, but after the meeting Vice President Tom Killefer told newsmen there might be further price boosts later in the 1974 model year.

"We keep reviewing our pricing," Killefer said. "We plan to do what we can" to get relief from continuing rising costs.

Following the session, the board of directors met and declared a regular quarterly dividend of 35 cents a share, payable June 10 to owners of record May 10.

The only major dissent at the stockholders meeting came from Robert Kemichick, a product design engineer for Chrysler, who criticized the company's lack of a domestic-built subcompact car.

Agnew novel set in 1984, but wait 'till '77

NEW YORK (UPI) — In Spiro Agnew's still uncompleted novel, A Very Special Relationship, the vice president of the United States in 1983 has some decidedly critical thoughts about his president.

It is unfair to judge the book by the few thousand words from Chapter 3 that appear in the May issue of Ladies Home Journal. This glimpse reveals no tantalizing state or political secrets, but there are some interesting insights into Agnew himself.

In an accompanying article the former vice president said he was not writing fictionalized autobiography, but admitted that some of himself must naturally come into the book. Summarizing the plot, he wrote:

"Briefly, it concerns a vice-president of the United States (in 1983-1984) who becomes the dupe of Iranian militants who want to cause an all-out confrontation between the United States and the Soviet Union. The militants mistakenly believe that Russia is planning to take over Afghanistan. Fearing that Iran will be the next country to be overrun by the Soviets, the militants plot the Soviet-U.S. facedown by heating up the Arab-Israeli conflict..."

In the magazine excerpt, which includes a brief portion of a cabinet meeting and a White House dinner for the charismatic Soviet chairman, the protagonist-vice president, Porter Newton Canfield, thinks that President Walter Hurley fails to catch onto a not very thinly veiled barb tossed out by the Russian and later thinks to himself:

"The line between deference and obsequiousness is blurred by the habits of international diplomacy but Canfield felt that others would agree with him that the president went beyond graciousness."

The time setting of the novel itself is interesting—1983-1984, as in George Orwell's chilling look into the future in the novel titled 1984. At one point Canfield looks at the Soviet foreign minister and thinks:

"This was the tough negotiator who carved out the big bargains at SALT VI and VII in Geneva—the agreements that left the U.S. on the fork in the road that led to eventual mediocrity."

While the title of the book refers to the very special relationship between a vice president and president, there also is a very special relationship between Agnew's unhappily married hero and the alluring woman secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

In the article that accompanies the excerpt, Agnew said that writing love scenes "frightens me to death" and that he won't attempt to make them "superheated." He added, "I have to admit that I won't always be writing from my own experience; I'm not a man of great experience in this area."

At the end of the excerpt, Agnew has Canfield wondering whether to embrace the HEW secretary for the first time at the door of her apartment. Instead, "Canfield reached out whimsically and chucked her under the chin."

While it is reported that the Ladies' Home Journal has agreed to pay Agnew $100,000 to serialize his novel once it is written, and that Playboy Press has advanced an estimated $50,000 to $250,000 for hardcover rights, Agnew insists that critical acclaim is more important to him than financial success.

He wrote that he is "far too bitter" to write a nonfliction account of his vice presidency, but added:

"My serious book, the book about my own experiences, will be written—but not until after the Nixon Administration leaves office."

Nixon bill seen as knife in heart of freedom of press

ATLANTA (UPI) — The executive editor of the Washington Post said today a bill introduced by the Nixon administration would emasculate freedom of the press and prevent disclosure by the media of such government scandals as the Watergate affair.

Ben Bradlee, speaking at the annual Dirks newspaper forum, said the Criminal Code Reform Act of 1973, if passed, "will simply emasculate freedom of the press and end for all time the noble art of investigative reporting."

Bradlee warned that the press was doing a poor job of informing the public of the importance of press freedoms at a time when the media was under direct attack.

"In fact, every president is the last 40 years has an easy to document record of public hostility to journalists," he said.

"The proposed legislation would make it a crime to reveal any classified information, however wisely or unwisely classified, military or nonmilitary, true or false."

"In short, it would prevent publication of any information the administration did not want published. This is the goal and practice of dictatorships, not democracies."

Bradlee cited an instance in which he said an administration official told a Post reporter the newspaper company might be forced to sell its broadcast properties if it persisted in printing the Pentagon papers.

He said Richard Kleindienst, then a deputy attorney general, asked a Post reporter if publisher Katherine Graham fully understood the law involving ownership of television stations.

"Specifically, the law preveted convicted felons from owning broadcastt property," Bradlee said. "If we persisted in publishing the Petagon papers, the attorney general went on, and if we refused to turn them over to the Justice Department, we were laying ourselves wide open to criminal prosecution under the espionage acts."

He said the conversation "sounded then, as now, a little like blackmail."

Bradlee also cited as apparent evidence of administration attacks on the Post the challenge to the Post company's two Florida television stations' license renewals last year.

"Only the two Post-owned stations in Florida were challenged and four different challenges were filed against them," he said.

He said the challenges involved a general counsel of the National Committee for the Re-election of the President, the chairman of the finance committee of the Florida Committee for the Re-election of the President, a Miami businessman who was Vice President Agnew's host at the Republican National Convention, and one of the President's major financial contributors and supporters in Florida.

Concerning the Post decision to publish the Pentagon papers, Bradlee said it was made after "a careful examination of the material convinced us it was pure history, and so had no impact on current national security."

Cal Poly expert advises Arabians on their horses

By PATRICK SPENCER
P-B Staff Writer

POMONA — When it comes to Arabian horse know-how, Americans needn't take a back seat to anyone —not even the Arabs.

Norm Dunn, director of Cal Poly's W. K. Kellogg Arabian Horse Center, proved that point recently when he spent 12 days in Saudi Arabia advising the Ministry of Agriculture and Water on its Arabian horse development program.

While he's somewhat reluctant to praise American horse breeding techniques over those of the original Arabian horse breeders, he admits that the 60 or so Saudi government Arabians "need attention at this time."

Dunn, who has headed the Cal Poly horse program since 1964, said horse management in Saudi Arabia "is much less regimented and modernized" than in the United States. "We do it in a more businesslike fashion."

Part of the problem, he said, is that over the years the maintenance of the government herd has been a hit and miss affair, with some Saudi leaders lavishing attention on the desert horses and some ignoring them.

The present government, under King Faisal, is one of the more concerned administrations. Seeing the need for redirecting the management program to perpetuate and upgrade basic stock, officials sought to find someone with suitable expertise to assist them.

Through the auspices of a large American agricultural consulting firm in Saudi Arabia, Dunn was selected for the job on the basis of recommendations from Arabian horse breeders in Texas and Arizona.

Since this was his initial visit, Dunn said he tried to be practical. His main concern was the evaluation of the quality of the horses, the government's stable facilities and the management and operational program.

Some of Dunn's major recommendations included increasing the amount of feed given to horses, more effort in controlling and eliminating internal parasites, and more attention to the general management of the stables.

He also recommended that perhaps a dozen head of American Arabian stock be imported to help improve the native herd.

Dunn said he had no thought of sending any of the Cal Poly horses over, but he believes they should come from Texas or California because of the similarity in weather conditions.

If his suggestions are adopted, Dunn said he might very well be considered for long-term consulting work with the Saudi government.

That could lead the way for some of the government officials to come to Cal Poly to attend the university's classes in animal science and work at the new horse center.

From the Saudis' reaction to Dunn's slide program on the university's Arabian program, it shouldn't be difficult to attract volunteer students.

"They really liked the facilities," Dunn said. The center's recently opened $1 million stables and show ring complex "impressed them the most," he said.

Councilmen to decide cultural center issue

Proposal asks that theater be renovated

POMONA — The City Council on April 29 will consider a Cultural Arts Commission resolution recommending that the council enter into negotiations for the lease of the vacant United Artists threater with option to purchase.

The resolution further asks that the negotiations not be finalized until a close examination has been made by engineers on the building's structural soundness and electrical and mechanical repairs needed.

United Artists is being proposed for use as a community theater for the performing arts by a group of citizens who believe such a facility is urgently needed now and that the prospects of building a new civic auditorium appear to be slim in the future.

A commission subcommittee has come up with a proposal to reopen the theater involving city government, wide citizen participation, donations of funds, time and labor.

The council is being asked for an allocation of $36,000 for the first 12 months of operation.

United Artists was affiliated with RFD Productions which specialized in the showing of films from Mexico before closing in 1972.

The theater on Third street was built in 1923 as the California, was completely remodeled in 1936, and following its purchase by the United Artists Theater Circuit, was renovated, modernized, reequipped and reopened in 1949 as the United Artists theater.

RFD Production took over operation in 1970.

The resolution won support Wednesday night from the Pomona Bicentennial Committee and Tuesday was discussed at a joint meeting between Mayor Ray J. Lepire, Councilman Ben Ochoa Sr. and Commissioners Robert L. Davis, Philip Browne, Mrs. Paul Hoblit, Mrs. Fran Livingston, James Popovich and Mrs. Robert C. Leimbach.

Lepire told the commissioners that in his view "I feel you have made a good recommendation," explaining that action would have to await consideration by the entire council.

Mrs. Leimbach, head of the subcommittee, said she had received commitments for donations of funds for the Founders Circle and the seat endowment fund and for other donations from trade unions.

The mayor said a lot of money would have to be committed for the first year's period just to fix up the building, even though the project might be discontinued before the second year of operation.

Mrs. Livingston noted that a recent community attitude survey indicated citizens were desirable of a cultural center and said the reopened theater "would be a good proving ground" to see how much public support there actually is.

Mrs. Livingston saw the theater project as a "perfect tie-in" to the celebrations next year of the Pomona centennial and in 1976 of the country's bicentennial.

City Administrator Jerrold Gonce said the $20,000 listed in the subcommittee's report for refurbishing and bringing the theater up to building standards did not appear "to be enough to get the doors open."

Gonce said the proposed city budget now in the preparation stage provided for cultural arts "program" activites, but not for capital expenditures.

The tentative budget proposal includes $9,181 for the Pomona Concert Band, $1,200 for the Pomona Community Chorus, $3,700 for the Valley Community Theater and $4,185 for the Valley Concert Theater.

Mrs. Livingston said she did not believe it was the commission's job of cutting the budgets for those groups.

Lepire explained that in adoption of the budget, the council looks first at high priority items, such as the public safety department, and moves on down the line in committing funds.

"I have very strong feelings the cultural arts belong in one of the high priorities in this city, especially this city," said Browne.

"I feel minority groups, performing groups need a place to perform", he said.

CANCER CRUSADE

Mrs. Virginia Krogh, Mrs. Georgia Grove and Mrs. Joanne Krebs, from left, prepare to show an American Cancer Society educational film to volunteer residential workers in the Neighborhood Cancer Crusade. Volunteers will be seeking donations from local residents during April to be used in the society's fight against cancer. Mrs. Krogh and Mrs. Krebs are neighborhood chairmen in the campaign and will coordinate the Pomona crusade. Mrs. Grove was the hostess for a neighborhood chairman's meeting.

Extradition sought against Claremonter in bonds case

CLAREMONT — A Claremont man accused of interstate transportation of over $200,000 in stolen government bonds will face extradition proceedings April 30 before a U. S. magistrate in Los Angeles.

Jack Walker Wright, 56, of 607 S. Indian Hill Blvd. was arrested early Sunday morning at his Claremont apartment by police after the Federal Bureau of Investigation sought assistance from local authorities in his apprehension.

Wright, who is also known as Robert Morgan, is under indictment by a federal grand jury in Dallas, Tex. The indictment, handed down April 11, accuses Wright of transporting $203,875 worth of stolen U.S. Savings Bonds from Los Angeles to Dallas in November of 1971.

Claremont police arrested Wright after officers spotted two cars belonging to Wright outside the Claremont apartment where he was living with his wife and three children.

Wright is currently free on $25,000 bail. It is not known whether he intends to fight extradition through the courts.

City Chamber of Commerce enlists 55 new members

POMONA — Fifty-five new members were enlisted for the Pomona Chamber of Commerce during a recent membership drive.

This increased the chamber's roster to 550 member firms.

Some 25 chamber members contacted hundreds of area businessmen during the three day "blitz." The 55 enrolled represents over $5,000 in new investments.

For the first time, contacts were made by telephone rather than personal visits. This was done to conserve gasoline, make volunteers' time more effective, and to contact more businesses.

The membership committee was headed by Joe Gendron, editor of the Progress Bulletin. Others who served included Florence Minto, Pomona Travel Agency; Fran Love, Home Savings and Loan Association; Eileen Marrow, Home Savings and Loan Association; Jay Colvin, General Dynamics; Werner Hess, Alad Corp.; Les Mann, attorney; Gene Russell, Atlantic Finance Co.; Dr. Robert Chaney, physician; Peggy Vick, Odom Realty.

Expansion in research, machinery

FMC plant here will be modernized

POMONA — FMC Corp., with Wayne sweeper and industrial brush plants in Pomona, will make capital expenditures of approximately $200 million in 1974.

The 1974 plans for the Pomona plant include a modernization program with an expansion of research and development facilties and sizeable investments in new machinery and tools.

This, according to Helen Ziervers, assistant manager of public relations at Pomona, will increase the productive capacities of the plant.

Robert H. Malott, board chairman and president, said from Chicago, Ill., that the 1974 expenditues will be two-thirds greater than the firm's $120 million capital expenditure in 1973.

"In allocating our capital for plant expansions, improvements and facility replacements during 1974," Malott explained, "we have projected expenditures of $60 million for the machinery group, representing an increase of 15 per cent over expenditures in 1973 of $52 million; and expenditures of $140 million for the chemical group, an increase of 106 per cent over expenditures last year of $68 million."

Candidate ratings, home decor in P-B supplement

An opportunity to start "keeping score" on potential presidential candidates, beautifying your home—indoors or out—meal-in-a-dish soup and an answer to "Do your clothes talk?" are all to be found in Sunday's issue of the Progress Bulletin supplement, Family Weekly.

Jack W. Germond, nationally known political writer for the Washington Star, has investigated and rated politicians aspiring for the presidential nomination of their party in 1976. Each candidate is rated for party support, image, experience and campaign ability.

Plants, their care and preparation, are examined in two separate articles.

Joanne Carson's instant decorating secrets, step-by-step instructions for a Family Weekly kitchen-tested recipe, and a "People Quiz" dealing with the image projected by clothes fill out the issue.

Russia profits by arms limits?

Russia's Leonid Brezhnev has Dr. Henry Kissinger over a barrel — almost.

The momentum of Soviet military research and the breadth of Soviet intercontinental missile programs are so great Brezhnev is in no mood to make any deal which effectively hampers this Russian drive toward superiority. Or so it would appear from cables reaching the State and Defense Department in recent days.

The United States is well ahead technicaly as of now — and likely to stay in the lead for the next five to seven years. American negotiators have been attempting to convince the Russians that Moscow's stubborn insistence on pushing ahead militarily with no meaningful restrictions may lead to an arms race the United States would most certainly win. The result, they've been telling Brezhnev, would be as in the moon race or in economic growth. In the long stretch, the superiority of our research and development would overwhelm the best the USSR would be able to offer.

The Russians, however, have been buoyed by their recent breakthroughs which have come more rapidly than American technical men anticipated and by the effectiveness of their newest conventional weapons in the Arab-Israeli war. So they have not been buying this argument.

They know, and they know that U.S. analysts know, that Soviet military technological progress now threatens U.S. superiority. They could see for themselves, as American military research men admit in private talks, that the improvement in Soviet conventional weapons has been astounding — particularly as compared with the lack of effectiveness of Russian weaponry displayed in the Vietnam war.

The Soviet Union unquestionably has some very serious military weaknesses at the moment — in computers, electronics and communications. But Soviet negotiators apparently believe they will solve these problems through unclassified commercial arrangements with American companies. The Soviet Union may not, in the end, be able to buy this know-how as easily as the Russians seem to believe. But the evidence today is that what they require will be supplied them, either directly by the United States or indirectly through the Europeans.

It also appears abundantly clear to the Russians that the United States is not, and has not for some time, been prepared to spend the extra hundreds of millions in research and development which would guarantee continued American superiority.

The Russians know the United States came from behind to win the moon race because we were willing to put $3 to $5 billion a year into this very limited drive. They know the United States spend many billions on research which leads directly and indirectly to industrial and economic advances. They are also aware of the relatively limited size of the American defense research budget and the relatively modest effort in this area over the past four to five years, a time when the Soviet Union has been expanding such research with vigor.

The Russians also know that Congress would be most reluctant to finance an arms race with the Soviet Union.

All and all the evidence of the official cables is that the Russian negotiators are being very tough indeed, and of late have not been inclined to the compromise that is the essence of any reasonable arms agreement.

Mills and a new Congress

The actions of Rep. Wilbur Mills in urging the resignation of President Nixon and hinting broadly at devastating new personal tax scandals, has caused even the very liberal press, which by no stretch of the imagination supports the President, to protest.

The New York Times has called it "manifestly unfair." The Washington Post says Mills, being privy to information because of his position, "should refrain from making unsupported and unspecified charges of such monumental gravity."

What goes with Wilbur Mills, asks Nick Thimmesch in a column making the above observations. Perhaps the Wall Street Journal has an answer.

Pointing to the fact that liberal Democrats especially are becoming more and more hopeful of an anti-Nixon landslide election in November because it could give them a "veto-proof" Congress for the last two years of the present administration, the Journal makes an interesting observation.

The essence of it is that Mills, Senator James Buckley, Representative Ashbrook and other 'resignationists" want no part of a veto-proof Congress. As the Journal puts it, "Each surely is panicked with the vision of a government run, even for two years, by George Meany, Edward M. Kennedy and Vance Hartke.' These are the proponets of a $179 billion health-insurance scheme, a $5,500 guaranteed-income plan and a neo-isolationist trade bill."

The Mills-Buckley Ashbrook rationale, obviously is that if Nixon is out of the picture by election time the Demo gains, while substantial, would not guarantee a far-left economic spree that inevitably would boomerang against the Congress in 1976.

Connally probe reaches oval office

WASHINGTON — The Watergate prosecutors are pushing their investigation of former Treasury Secretary John Connally right into the White House oval office. They have asked the White House for tapes of conversations between President Nixon and Connally on milk matters.

In secret statements to the Watergate prosecutors, dairy lobbyist Jake Jacobsen has said he delivered $10,000 to Connally at the Treasury Department. Jacobsen alleged that Connally pocketed the money and returned it only after the dairy lobby came under investigation.

The forceful Connally, once a power in the Nixon cabinet and still a presidential contender, told us in a lengthy telephone conversation from Texas that he had been offered the $10,000 but had rejected it. "I have told the prosecutors the truth," he declared emphatically.

The prosecutors, meanwhile, are eager to learn what the President and Connally said to one another about the dairy industry's push for higher price supports in 1971 and 1972.

Both men attended a White House meeting on March 23, 1972, to discuss the dairy leaders' requests. The White House account of the meeting acknowledges that Connally said the dairy industry "had political funds which would be distributed among House and Senate candidates in the coming election."

The dairymen also promised financial support for the President's own reelection campaign.

The following day, the White House ordered a subsidy increase worth $500 million a year to the dairy industry.

The prosecutors are particularly interested in Nixon-Connally conversations during the 30-day period preceding the White House meeting. Sources close to the case tell us that one tape is thought to be "extremely sensitive." This reportedly gives the President's responses, as picked up by the White House recording system, during a crucial telephone talk with Connally.

Our sources say the prosecutors are also interested in the President's conversations with former Attorney General John Mitchell on the milk case. This may indicate that the prosecutors are investigating Nixon's own role in the milk scandal.

Jacobsen has told the prosecutors, meanwhile, that Connally returned the $10,000 not once but twice. The former Treasury secretary allegedly became worried that the first batch of bills could be traced.

Jacobsen and Connally also got together on a cover story. Jacobsen promised to say he had never delivered the $10,000 to Connally but had kept it in a safe deposit box. Jacobsen has now been indicted for perjury for telling this story under oath to a grand jury.

His belated confession has been checked out by FBI agents who have confirmed from available records and witnesses many of the details, according to FBI sources.

OPPRESSED MINERS: Two giant mining companies have been allowed to deduct from their U.S. taxes the money they pay to South Africa from the fabulous Tsumeb mines, which American churchmen charge are worked by oppressed blacks. The churchmen tell us the working conditions are "inhuman."

The mines are located in the vast southwest African region of Namibia, which was ordered free in 1966 by the United Nations. Both the World Court and the U.S. Government backed up the ruling. Yet South Africa refused to leave, holding Namibia by force.

On reason was that the South African government is raking in millions from the Tsumeb mines. The money is paid primarily by two American mining companies, Newmont and America Metal Climax. Although South Africa is holding Namibia illegally, the U.S. Government has permitted the companies to write off the taxes they pay to South Africa.

In 1971, a desperate wildcat strike of 13,000 blacks brought some reforms. Terms in the mines were cut from two years to six months and mattresses were provided to cover the workers' two-decker cement bunks. But the men were still barred from living with their families.

Blacks, no matter how well qualified, are never put over a white worker. The whites average $685 a month, the blacks $65. By contrast, Newmont's president, Plato Malozemoff, collects well over $20,000 a month, plus a $120,000-a-year retirement plan.

So outraged are some Newmont stockholders that they are waging a proxy fight and a showdown is almost certain at the annual meeting May 22. The revolt is led by the United Church of Christ, which owns $2 million in Newmont stock.

FOOTNOTE: Malozemoff firmly defended his company, saying the separation of families is forced on him by the South African government. The company has no choice, he said, but to pay South African taxes. American Metal Climax, whose head Ian MacGregor is also chairman of "Religion in American Life," conceded: "There is much progress to be made."

PAUL HARVEY

If it were 'President Humphrey'

Had it been Humphrey instead of Nixon in the White House would we still have a national scandal, demands for impeachment? Robert Maheu was Howard Hughes' representative in Nevada in 1968. Under oath, Maheu testified that he personally delivered an attache case full of folding money to Hubert Humphrey in July of 1968.

Humphrey, in a deposition, swears that he did not accept the money personally but concedes that such a donation might have been accepted in his behalf. If "President Hubert Humphrey" were now in the White House would the accusation, whether true or false, justify a nationwide hue and cry for "impeachment!"?

You Judge. Maheu swears that on that day, July 29, 1968, Hubert Humphrey, then a senator, and his wife sat in a limousine in front of the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles.

By prearrangement, Maheu approached the limousine and handed to Humphrey an attache case containing $50,000 in cash with these words: "Here's the material on the AEC."

Maheu explains that AEC referred to the Atomic Energy Commission, that Mr. Hughes had been trying to get the AEC to discontinue underground nuclear explosions in Nevada, explosions, which he, Hughes, considered hazardous to his investments in the area.

The implication is of a $50,000 payoff to a U.S. senator to influence federal government policy in behalf of a private interest.

Sen. Humphrey does remember meeting Maheu in front of the hotel at that time but denies recovering the $50,000-cash donation personally.

He concedes that he cannot be sure the donation was not accepted by one of his assistants. There are striking similarities in this accusation and response to the testimony at the Mitchell-Stans trial where the alleged campaign contributor was Robert Vesco who, similarly, was seeking a personal favor. or.

There is a resemblance to some of the accusations against former Vice President Spiro Agnew. There is a parallel conflict between who did what in whose behalf in the Nixon - Dean contradictions.

Those challenging President Nixon's fitness for the office insists that the law must be equitable to all, great and small. Yet I see no indication in the national news media that Sen. Humphrey is not being given the benefit of all doubt.

So one cannot help conjecturing. If it were now "President Hubert Humphrey," would "campaign contributions" be subjected to a similar intensity of scrutiny?

Or might The New York Times and The Washington Post and other New York-based news media be prejudiced for Humphrey as they are against Nixon? Their quantitative coverage of the two cases so indicates.

And one thing more: "If it were "President Humphrey," there'd surely be at least twice as many "tapes."

LETTERS FROM P-B READERS

As others see it . . . letters

A foul event

Reflecting on the letter response concerning the rock concert held recently at the Ontario Motor Speedway, there is some clear evidence that many people in the West End are not going to idly sit by waiting for another similar "attraction" to be cooked up by Jim Cook and other members of the speedway management. This is the foulest kind of event that Southern Californians should be made to put up with.

The windstrewn debris, which escaped the hands of cleanup crews, has been scattered across the countryside and can still be seen for those who pass by; plus broken bottles reflecting in the sunlight along the adjoining roadways.

Furthermore, our police personnel were placed under the stress and frustrating situation of protecting 200,000 vagabonds gathered together for hardly any civilized cause except to possibly escape the city in a stolen vehicle, blow a little grass, rape a few unsuspecting, and throw off as much clothing as possible, maybe throwing a nude scene here and there — to the beat of some mind-blowing drumhead on stage.

Police Lt. Luther Franks briefly stated that he felt these (concert-goers) came for a big bash — sex and dope. I think Lt. Franks knows more about what these rock concerts are for than the money-makers who promote them are willing to confess.

This is a hodgepodge of an "attraction" that will destroy the traditional values of our communities. Let's not kid ourselves thinking things will be better next time. — Steve Huddlestun, Ontario.

Gossip for today

Did you know —

— that in Sebastopol you can rent an apple tree under which you can sit and play Adam and Eve for as little as $25 a year?

— that in Philadelphia it is possible to rent temporary parents for your children for only $24 a day while you take a brat-free vacation?

— that in the United States we first started licking postage stamps in the year 1847?

— that time passed at a much slower pace in the good old days? The first clocks didn't have minute hands.

— that the world's first recorded graffiti appears in the Bible in the Book of Daniel? It was the original handwriting on the wall that read "MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSON." As translated by Daniel, that scrawl on the wall said a kingdom would fall.

— that the population trend is now reversing itself? The number of small towns in the United States has doubled during the last 20 years.

BRUCE BIOSSAT

Hospitality also a Japanese custom

TOKYO — Well, I went to visit the Yamada family here in a district not far from the city's celebrated glittering Ginza, and it was some kind of time.

Tokyo has a "home visit system" under which families volunteer for visits like mine, in the interest of "better international understanding."

I was primed with questions about the family's living costs under galloping inflation, fuel and other shortages, their taxes, etc. I got them asked, but the real thing was that the evening quickly dissolved into such a small festival of fun that when we parted, we felt like old friends.

My hostess, Mrs. Etsuyo Yamada, her son Masami, and a young girl who is a family friend, drove me in their station wagon to their home in the Taikto-ku district. It was on a commercial street, with entry through a slender sliding door panel.

One look and you could see that the house and a small shop (it turned out to be a specialized sort of drug store) merged as one. We doffed our shoes in Japanese custom, and sat down around a brightly lit dining table, nibbling at seaweed-covered rice cakes and quaffing a bit of beer. (Rice prices are controlled, but food costs generally are up at the little stores where the family stocks its larder).

The Yamada family and its prior generations have lived at the same site for 120 years. An earlier house burned to the ground in the 1923 earthquake. I suspect it happened again in the massive March, 1945, fire-bombing by United States' B-29s, but the family was too gracious to mention that. The present house is of wood and wallboard, cramped and small, warmed by an electric heater. Tight quarters but somehow comfortable.

The father, Seibei Yamada, a longtime pharmacist, was described as "retired" and was not present.

Mrs. Yamada, a beautiful woman of 66, has many interests. She is general president of a cluster of 50 clubs doing social welfare and education work in the Taito-ku district, where 220 000 people live. She also runs a small plant in Kyoto which makes things from richly-colored, gold-threaded brocade. She gave me a lady's tiny coin purse as a gift.

Masami told me on the way out, in his excellent English, that he was the family black sheep, since his older brother is now the pharmacist and his divorced sister runs the drug shop. She is licensed to practice Chinese medicine, which seems to involve things like herbs and chlorophyll, and demands of "patients" that they follow rigid health rules. Business comes by word of mouth and evidently is brisk. With house and shop, the family pays $500 a year in real estate taxes.

The fun began when I asked Masami how old he was. The young family friend, Akiko Honjo, an architecture student at Tokyo university, laughed hard. The joke was he is older than he looks and doesn't like to admit it. He finally confessed to 36. When I said I hadn't married until I was 37, he gave a happy shout, and grasped my hand firmly as if two strayed souls had made bond.

But Masami is not all that lost. He is accredited from Tokyo university's graduate school of arts, paints at a seaside studio south of Tokyo, has two big plant-and-flower murals on the family walls, designed a wrapping for his mother's boxed products, runs a ski club in Japan's mountains west and north of Tokyo and once appeared in a television film in Europe while joining in a long, high-Alpine ski run from France to Switzerland.

He's the one who can talk fuel shortage, with his runs to his studio and to a small family farm to the west near the Japan Sea. He sketches there a lot. Masami says gasoline prices are higher today in a ratio of 8 to 5 over September, and in the first panic of December-January he was limited in the amounts he could buy.

Expansive, smiling, he suddenly broke out a small guitar and began singing familiar, if old, American popular songs like "Springtime in the Rockies" and "Red River Valley." I joined in, and so did Akiko, who lived a while in Detroit.

And, oh yes, Kuniko, daughter of Masami's sister. Just 7, she showed me her arithmetic book stamped with five red circles for excellence. An example of her work in shodo (brush-writing) is on exhibit at the Tokyo Metropolitan Art Museum. Inflation and the family? Sure, sure, tough. But what I remember is Kuniko running alongside the car, smiling and waving, as I left.

Library slates no-fines week

Patrons of the La Verne and San Dimas branches of the Los Angeles County Library may return overdue books during next week without penalty.

It is hoped that residents will search through their homes to find books which they have forgotten they have or may have had a long time and do not wish to pay the fines which would be required.

When the library is closed, books may be returned through the book slot at the right of the door.

San Dimas offering instruction in golf

SAN DIMAS — The San Dimas Recreation Department will offer golf instruction for adults only beginning Tuesday at the San Dimas Canyon Golf Course.

The first lesson is scheduled at 10 a.m. The course will continue on Tuesdays for seven weeks. The series will cost $12.

Registration for the series may be completed by calling City Hall at 599-6713.

Bonita joins group to benefit schools

SAN DIMAS — Bonita Unified School District has joined the Association of Low Wealth Schools, an organization formed to aid in the passage of legislation which would favorably affect low-wealth districts.

The organization also works to oppose legislation which would have an adverse effects on low-wealth school districts.

Membership and payments of $1,000 dues to the organization were approved by the local district's board of trustees.

New $275,000 city hall proposed by L.V. manager

LA VERNE — The City Council has been asked to consider the construction of a new city hall — twice as large as the present one — at an estimated cost of $275,000.

If the proposal is approved, the police department will take over both floors of the existing city hall.

Plans for the 10,000-square-foot building were unveiled Monday night by City Manager George Caswell. They call for construction on city-owned property between the present City Hall and the fire station.

The project would be financed by revenue sharing funds which Caswell estimated would amount to about $425,000 by 1976.

He told the council that if the city doesn't decide on what to do with the first year's allocation by June 30, it will lose it.

The council took his recommendations under advisement and scheduled discussion or action on it in two weeks.

The present city hall was built in 1938. The wing on the west was added in 1956. Caswell told the council the staff has outgrown the floor space.

He proposes to relocate the entire administrative section as well as the council chambers. He said that by such a move the police department can more than double its present quarters.

In the new building the council chambers would be larger and would be located on the first floor. The reception area, now only 121 square feet large, would be increased to 750 square feet. Provisions also would be made for a larger conference room.

"It is not necessary to spend large amounts of money to construct monuments in the name of civic pride," Caswell maintained. "La Verne has typically operated on a conservative financial level, and we can continue to do this with new construction."

Councilman Harrison Sanborn said he was not ready to act on Caswell's proposal at this time because "we have not even selected our priorities as to how we will use the revenue sharing allotments."

He said that before consideration is given to a new city hall, the council should approve the construction of a new fire station on the northside, "something we promised to the people there four years ago."

Councilman Frank Johnson then called on the council to come up with suggestions for a list of priorities by the next meeting.

Hillcrest Homes group will see display of iris

LA VERNE — The Hillcrest Homes Auxiliary will meet at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the east lounge.

The program will feature floral arrangements created by Mrs. Phyllis Sievers, using iris from the gardens of Mr. and Mrs. Harwood Tracy, residents of the homes. He is a retired botanist and has continued his hobby of growing unusual iris in his garden at Hillcrest.

Mrs. Ellis Jenkins, president of the auxiliary, will conduct a business session.

The auxiliary is the supportive organization for Woods Memorial Hospital, the nursing center for Hillcrest Homes.

Visiting in Texas

LA VERNE — Mrs. Tom Pagliuso flew to Houston, Tex., to spend three weeks with her son and family.

Air Force Staff Sgt. Eugene Pagliuso, formerly of La Verne, is stationed there.

Golf tournament is planned by La Verne and San Dimas

SAN DIMAS — The recreation departments of La Verne and San Dimas will stage the fourth annual "90-10," Shotgun Golf Tournament at 11:30 a.m. April 26, at the San Dimas Golf Course.

The entry fee is $10 per player and this includes green fees, electric cart, dinner and hospitality bar before dinner. Additional dinner tickets are $5 per person for the awards dinner that will be held at 7 p.m. in the Stanley Plummer Community Building after the tournament.

The "90-10" term refers to the City of San Dimas' ownership of 90 per cent of the golf course and to the City of La Verne's 10 per cent of the course. The two cities bought the course in a joint powers agreement. The tournament has been an annual event since the purchase was completed.

Reservations may be made by calling 599-6713 in San Dimas or in La Verne at 593-4571.

No more smog alerts--they're episodes

No more "smog alerts" will be called in Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties. But there may be an increased number of "air pollution episodes."

This is due to changes in the counties' Air Pollution Control District (APCD) rules and regulations, required by the State Air Resources Board.

Among the changes is the dropping of the term "smog alert." This is replaced by "air pollution episodes." And these episodes will be called at substantially lower pollution levels than the old alert.

All measurements are made in parts per million of oxidant since this is the only pollutant which currently approaches harmful levels, said officials.

Under the new order, first stage episodes will be called at .20 parts per million; second stage at .40 parts per million; and third stage at .60 parts per million.

This compares to "smog alerts" of .35 at communinity alert; .50, first stage; 1.00, second stage; and 1.50, third stage.

Alerts were previously called immediately when the oxidant reached the given level. Under new regulations the episode is based on a one-hour average since medical experts believe the duration to be an important factor on community health.

The new regulations have a prime objective of predicting air pollution episodes the day before they are anticipated. Thus appropriate action can be maken to reduce the pollution level before it occurs.

At the first stage episode level, the APCD requests that persons — especially children, elderly and those with respiratory problems — remain indoors and that unnecessary driving be curtailed.

At the second stage level, all persons should discontinue outdoor activity and avoid the use of cars. The third stage episode is condidered an air pollution emergency.

For the Pomona Valley area the APCD expects 130 first stage episodes per year, five or six second stage episodes and probably no third stage episodes.

When a first stage episode is predicted for the following day, th APCD will request that unnecessary driving be curtailed and car pools be utilized to the maximum extent possible.

When a second or third stage episode is expected, the APCD emergency action committee — consisting of scientists, doctors, industrial representatives, law enforcement personnel and public members — will be called into session to recommend appropriate action to the counties boards of supervisors.

Under the new regulations this could, but need not necessarily, mean the implementing of contingency plans to reduce pollution by decreasing industrial and vehicle activity.

Included is any industrial plant which emits 100 tons or more per year of a specified air contaminant; shopping centers with 1,000 or more parking places; government agencies, industries, recreation facilities or commercial businesses with at least 100 employes; businesses, agencies or commercial establishments with 10 or more vehicles; and any other operations as directed by th APCD control officer.

Any operation falling in one or more of these categories will be required to develop a contingency plan for temporarily suspending operations if deemed necessary by the boards of supervisors.

Episodes will be declared or predicted for only those local areas where the problem exists or is expected to occur. Implementing the contingency plans would require consideration of the resources area or that area where the pollution originates, rather than where the episode occurs, said officials.

European troop slashes mulled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon is seriously considering reducing the force of 320,000 American GIs in Europe, says Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger.

Schlesinger told a group of visiting West German parliamentarians that the cuts as contemplated would be among noncombat forces and that fighting units would be left untouched.

He gave no figure on how many troops might be withdrawn. The administration has been under growing congressional pressure to cut American forces abroad.

Betty Hutton finds true happiness

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Former film star Betty Hutton has run out of money, converted to Catholicism and is currently working as a housekeeper and cook for St. Anthony's Rectory in Portsmouth, according to a copyrighted story in the Providence Visitor-Diocesent.

The leading lady of "Annie Get Your Gun," "The Greatest Show on Earth" and "Happy Go Lucky" back in the 1940s and 1950s, Miss Hutton was quoted as saying she hopes to become active in church work.

At 53, the former actress reflects on her life, "I've had all the other stuff. I've had money, I've had fame, but I was miserable." She said, "I was broken, down and out, without a dime to my name."

"I left Hollywood and landed in New England where I quite accidentally met Father Peter Maguire, pastor of St. Anthony's who was kind enough to take me in," she was quoted as saying.

In the story Miss Hutton said she earned as much as $150,000 a week up until 10 years ago.

"I was raking in the dough hand over fist," she said. "Money was no problem, but love was a problem. Nobody loved me unless I bought them, so I bought everybody. It wasn't until I came here and experienced the concerns of the priests and the simplicity and devotion of the parishioners that I discovered true love actually exists."

The paper quotes Miss Hutton as saying, "Nothing has brought me true happiness until I discovered Catholicism."

Ava to return

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Ava Gardner, who hasn't worked in a Hollywood movie in several years, returns to the film capital to co-star with Charlton Heston in "Earthquake" at Universal.

Prof to study perception of cold, warmth

CLAREMONT — The way people perceive warmth and cold is still a mystery to scientists, but a Pomona College faculty member hopes to solve the puzzle.

Dr. William P. Banks, an assistant psychology professor, has been awarded a $5,000 grant from the National Institute of Mental Health to conduct research into the sensory system that converts temperatures into perceptions and how warmth and cold are perceived.

Banks, with the aid of student volunteers, seeks to produce basic facts about the body's ability to adapt to warmth and cold and to answer the question of whether there is more than one physiological system involved in sensing or perceiving warmth and cold.

It is unclear, he points, out, whether hot and cold are two separate senses, like vision or hearing; or whether they are part of the same sense.

Banks, who has been on the Pomona faculty since 1969, conducted research on various facets of perception at Yale University during the past several summers.

New library chief chosen for colleges

CLAREMONT — Patrick Barkey, currently library director at the University of Toledo, has been selected as the new director of the libraries of the Claremont Colleges.

Barkey, 51, a 1948 Pomona College alumnus, was chosen for the position following a 10-month national search. In addition to his experience as a library administrator, he is well-known as a library planner, having developed two major libraries at the University of Toledo.

"Library development is one of Claremont's most urgent needs," Provost Howard Brooks said in announcing the appointment. "Patrick Barkey's experience in planning and developing libraries, both buildings asd collections, as well as in making modern technogical improvements, will be critical factors in the next period of Claremont's history."

In his new position, Barkey will supervise the college's four major libraries, Honnold, Seeley Mudd, Sprague and Denison, as well as several smaller technical and scientific collections located on the individual campuses.

Stephens vows fight on massage parlors

POMONA — Clyde Stephens, candidate for the Republican nomination in the 65th Assembly District, has promised campaign supporters that he will continue his fight against the operation of massage parlors if elected.

Stephens, at an appreciation dinner held in Chino, said "according to police reports, 10 or 14 massage parlors operating within the City of Pomona are little more than houses of prostitution."

"This type of vice and lawlessness is bad for a city and it's bad for the state. I will continue to fight against it as a planning commissioner or as an assemblyman for the state of California," the candidate said.

Speaking on the energy crisis, Stephens said "it should never have happened and should never happen again because there are so many alternate sources of energy available. As an a assemblyman, I will push for the necessary research to provide these sources."

Pioneer finds pie in the sky

I was delighted, as I always am at successful space achievements, with the spectacular performance of Mariner 10 in photographing Mercury recently, and amused, as I always am, by statements of the scientific fraternity on what it all means.

Mercury, as you know, is the smallest planet in our solar system and the closest to the sun. From earth it looks like a golf ball, and one of the photos returned from Mariner 10 last week distinctly showed the words "Kro-Flite" stamped in the northeastern quadrant.

Our doughty little interplanetary spy passed within 400 miles of Mercury, a good 3-wood and a long iron for Jack Nicklaus. It has been taking snapshots like a grandmother at Thanksgiving, and the resultant photos, relayed to the earth by magic, are indistinguishable from the grandchildren.

So what have we learned from our extraterrestial Kodakry?

Donald E. Gault, one of the scientists monitoring the Mariner data at NASA's Jet Propulsion Lab in Pasadena, summed it up nicely.

"It's like the moon and it isn't," he said. Any questions?

Mercury, like the other planets, was discovered to have many craters, which one observer likened to "giant pie pans." Actually they ARE giant pie pans, and we'd better not arouse any of those giants by snooping around their pantry.

One of the questions that continually titillates astronomers and sc-fi writers is whether lifeasweknowit exists on our neighboring planets—if you can call something 93 million miles away a neighbor.

When we send off our Pioneers and our Mariners, all we think about is what we are going to discover about the other globs that make up our solar system. We give little heed to what other (shudder) forms of life on these planets are going to discover about US. If you are tossing the baseball with your Little Leaguer and that upshoot-outdrop that made you the talk of the college campus gets away and crashes through a neighbor's picture window, he is sure as Koufax going to come out to see whodunit.

Our gleaming little Mariner 10, flashing through the Mercurian sky, might set off the whole Mercury Nuclear Interplanetary Space Force, not only shooting down the space probe but sweeping out on a search-and-destroy mission for the Jet Propulsion Lab. (Stay out of Pasadena for a few weeks.)

Or the little visitor from outer space might evoke the same response their's do on planet earth.

"Hello, Mercury Police Precinct 62, Sgt. Mulrooney. Who's this? You saw what? A flashing light in the sky?" (Covering mouthpiece) "Hey, Eddie, get on the extension. It's that nut from Crater 614." (Into phone) "Yest sir, you saw this UFO zooming across your crater? It was what? Taking pictures? Probably a meteor. Or a weather balloon. Oh? Silver globe with letters on the side? They said what? National Aeronautics and Space Administration? I see. No, I'm not laughing—I have a cough, and that's the way it affects me. Yes sir, we'll look into it. Thanks for calling." (Hangs up).

"Some nut, huh, Eddie? Probably thinks its a space probe from planet earth. Must think there's lifeasweknowit down there. I'd hate to have that guy's liquor bill."

Disease of the cannibals

That disease known as kuru looks something like multiple sclerosis. Hits the brain. Causes hysteria, body tremor, coma and death. Only place you find it among the Fore tribesmen of New Guinea. They're cannibals. Or were. The new anti-cannibal laws thereabouts appear to be eliminating the disease. It's definitely due to diet, allright. Let's not talk about it anymore.

At last report three ou of every 20 people geting tatoos were women . . . Not a single page of Chopin's considerable musical output is without the piano . . . Did I tell you the average woman uses up approximately her height in lipstick every five years? . . . Figure just about 27 per cent of the available grouse are knocked down yearly by hunters . . . It's a fact, too, that even severe stammerers can swear a blue streak without missing a syllable.

"It's harder for a man to see a blonde in a red dress out of the corner of his eye than a brunette in a white dress," contends old Cedric Adams. His readers scoffed. But the Better Vision Institute backed him up. It reported you can perceive colors best when you look straight at them, but they don't show up nearly as well as blacks and whites when focused off center of the retina.

Q. "How frequently does one bolt of lightning hit more than one person?"

A. In three out of 10 strikes that hit somebody, more than one somebody gets hit each strike.

Q. "What was the first of the household detergents?"

A. Dreft.

How do you feel about parties? That they're dandy? Likewise. But is it not true that you frequently feel a marked letdown afterwards? Again, likewise, Depression. Mental experts contend it's just about a universal experience — the after-the-party blues. No doubt they're right, because their claim jibes with the observation of E. E. Strange, the sage of Waco, who has said: "Anything that'll make you high will make you low."

It's commonly reported that rodeo originated hereabouts. Re-originated maybe. But the old Greeks, bear in mind, comthe U.S. Department of Justice.

Experts who should know report that prostitutes in this country earn about 10 times as much as the yearly budget of the U.S. Department of Justice.

Officials claim now is this is growing timber 60 per cent faster than it's using it. Excellent, if true.

For Friday, April 19

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's best you keep opinions to yourself today, since you're apt to judge others too harshly without knowing all the facts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An irritating situation will arise because of a friend's unreasonable demands. Make yourself scarce when you see the warning signals.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is one of those days when you'll feel you're a target for others to take a potshot at. Try not to give them the ammunition.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Another feels just as strongly about his opinions as you do. If you try to overpower him, he'll erupt hostilely.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You tend to be possessive today and somewhat jealous. This attitude will create needless tensions in an unstable relationship.

FORTUNE KOOKIES

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is not a good day for you to try to make deals or tie down an agreement. Wait till all parties are more amiable and calm.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be very careful if you're working with tools. Keep your mind on what you're doing. Don't try to do two things at once.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Take a back seat in any social involvement today. If you're aggressive you'll make waves and a nasty situation will result.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Yesterday where peace prevailed domestically, conditions have done an about-face. Do all you can to minimize friction at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't put your signature to anything binding unless you're absolutely sure you understand it to the letter.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Financial matters have to be taken seriously today. Impulsive moves or poor judgment will put you in the red.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Risky or speculative situations will backfire if you involve yourself in them today. Don't do anything chancey.

Your Birthday

Much opportunity will be offered you this year. However, it carries with it certain conditions that warn you not to be wasteful or to take things for granted.

Model remarks on style shows

By ERMA BOMBECK

I've never been really crazy for style shows.

To begin with, it's hard for me to identify with women who can hook their handbags on their hipbones while they slip out of their coats. And secondly, the nostalgia in clothes these days is getting on my nerves. I didn't mind looking back as long as I couldn't remember it.

However, I am glad I attended a style show the other morning with my neighbors. For the first time I realized why my clothes do not look the same as when they are worn by models.

I don't walk right.

It's true. I walk across the floor with the self-consciousness of a poodle who just missed the paper. There's so much to remember . . . hold my stomach rigid, tuck in my backside, hold my arms away from my body so they won't flatten out, and stand up straight so waiters won't call me "sir." By the time I remember all of that my legs become stiff and I march across the floor with all the grace of the German army marching into Poland.

Models don't seem to have that trouble. The confidence they exhibit seems to come right out of their pores. The first model eased onto the runway, her body slanted at an 90-degree angle, her hand impaled on her hip. She walked like a woman who had just sneezed after surgery. Beautiful.

The next one was a petite little thing who walked in a series of jerks and small steps like maybe she had a rash. Her head pivoted from side to side and her eyes darted back and forth nervously. Fantastic.

A tall model was next. She wore a coat with large pockets and as she stepped onto the runway, she jammed her hands into her pockets and stood with her legs apart. When she walked her steps were firm and deliberate and when she turned completely around, her head never changed directions. Unreal.

I sat there in the darkness for over two hours while the models twirled and pivoted, their faces masks of boredom and detachment.

When the lights went up I said to myself, "Who are you kidding? If you leaned that far backward when you walked your tummy control panel would split. Or if you ever walked with those little baby steps, your legs would sound like a group.

I put the whole thing out of my mind until yesterday in the supermarket. The girl in front of me was slouching along like the "Little Match girl." Her hair was under a scarf and she wore white socks with her tennis shoes. She didn't walk too good either. It was the model with the 90-degree angled body. Incredible.

"Requiem" (Verdi) will be performed at Bridges Hall of Music, at 8:15 p.m., featuring the Pomona College Choir and Orchestra, Giora Bernstein, conducting; Linda Sandusky, '74, soprano; Claudine Carlson, contralto; Val Stuart, tenor; and Harold Enns, bass.

Aussies may ship more beef to U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American consumers may soon be getting increased supplies of Australian beef because Britons and Japanese are buying less, the Agriculture Department reports.

Department trade specialists said today that U.S. beef imports, which come chiefly from Australia and New Zealand, dipped sharply in February and were 2 per cent below a year earlier for the first two months of this year.

But they said that although American offering prices for Australian beef have declined, Australian shippers may soon be trying to increase sales to this country because of problems in other major markets. Japan, normally a big buyer of Australian meat, currently has suspended imports, and orders from the United Kingdom are also down, a report said.

The Agriculture Department's Foreign Agricultural Service said shipping lines report Australian meat producers have begun planning for early May refrigerated shipments instead of the usual late June movement.

Merlin keeps the old magic

By Oswald & James Jacoby

When Merlin the magician played in the bridge games at King Arthur's court, there was a special rule for him. He could not shuffle, deal or even cut the cards. This didn't keep Merlin from making some really astounding plays.

There was nothing astounding about his king of diamonds lead against three no-trump. Anyone likes to lead from king-queen-jack-10.

Opening lead—♦K

Lancelot ducked. Merlin continued the suit and Lancelot had to win. He promptly played the ace of clubs and continued with the jack.

Now Merlin went into a trance. When he came out of the trance he had figured out what to do. He went up with his king and led a heart.

This line of play was the only way to defeat the contract. It showed that Merlin had figured out exactly what Lancelot was trying to do or had seen the peerless knight's hand in his trance.

Had Merlin ducked the second club, a third club lead would have set up two tricks in dummy. Had he cashed his diamonds, Lancelot would have discarded his queen of clubs and unblocked the suit for dummy.

Thins have advantages

By JEAN ADAMS

FAT: Q: I want to go out with girls, but I don't know if they would go out with a fat person.

Please don't tell me to go on a diet. Just tell me, if you were a girl and a fat guy asked you for a date, would you accept?—No Girl Friends in New Jersey

A: Yes, girls go out with fat guys. Being overweight won't keep you from dating girls, especially if you are friendly and cheerful.

But there are so many advantages, now and in the future, to controlling one's weight that I urge you to consider a diet.

FIGTHS: Q: I'm having trouble with my brother. We're always fighting. He cuts me down so far at school in front of my friends that I have to run away. At home he starts a fight every time my parents leave.

Last week he hit me in the nose. It swelled up. I had to tell my parents a lie because my brother said if I told on him it would be worse next time. How can I stop this? He is 16. I am 14, and a girl. Bruises make me look awful.—Bruised in Florida

A: No matter what your brother says, report all this to your parents. Tell them about the threats and about what happens at school and at home in their absence. This is a disciplinary problem. You can't work it out but they can.

Foreign competition hurts marijuana dealer in Kansas

By FRANK T. COOK

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — Archer is a 25-year-old executive whose business is slipping badly. A few years ago he made $30,000 a year, untaxed.

Today, higher labor costs and foreign competition have hit him hard.

He is a marijuana wholesaler, one of the largest in the Midwest and an original member of a group called the "Kaw Valley Hemp Pickers Association."

He put himself through college working in the illegal trade and he'll soon turn in his blue denim shirt for a white collar. He's making only $17,000 a year now in the marijuana business.

Archer, who shall not be further identified here, employs a crew of four. They toil in backwoods fields and can usually harvest a ton of wild Kansas marijuana from mid-August to early October. They work about 12 nights from dusk to dawn and each crew member gets $125 a night.

No Income Tax

Only one problem bothers Archer.

"I'm a little worried about the Internal Revenue Service," he said, pushing his long black hair out of his eyes. "I've never paid any income tax.

"It's a business, it's just like anything else. Labor costs have gone up and the government hasn't helped much."

In better times, tons of Kansas marijuana were trafficked around this university town to both coasts and often beyond.

"The biggest problem has been foreign competition and the inability of the government to control it. Six years ago marijuana was marijuana and nobody knew the difference between good stuff and bad. But the consumers are much more sophisticated now. Most have tried Columbian and Mexican grass and know it's a lot better than ours.

"The government hasn't done much to stop reefer coming across the border."

Archer said one of the few times the price of domestic marijuana had risen was back to its peak of $50 per pound was a couple of years ago when the government was running its "Operation Intercept" crackdown.

Effective Program

"That was a pretty effective program" said Archer. "It took a couple of months but after a while the supply of foreign grass dried up and the price of our staff was rising."

Importers figured how to get around the blockade however, and foreign grass started flowing into the United States again. The foreign supply has seriously hurt the domestic market, he said, but it is a problem compounded by amateurs and costly labor.

"Kids who don't know if the plant is mature, if it's ready for harvest, go out and start picking. They don't process it right and they dump it on the market almost right after they've dried it."

The result is textbook economy. The market is flooded, demand goes down with the availability of supply, the price drops out. "And nobody makes any money."

Controls flow

After the harvest, Archer starts clearing his supply in late November, controlling the flow to hold the market price steady at about $15 per pound.

Like other industries faced with labor costs and competition, the Kansas marijuana business has turned to technology for help—but Archer thinks it is too late.

One new device is a picker, operated by hand, that strips leaves from the marijuana stalk faster, quieter and more efficiently. Another new item is a portable compact press that will dry up to 10 pounds of weed in an hour.

The press was developed to eliminate open air drying of the product. Marijuana drying in the sun emits an odor detectable a half-mile away, a definite hazard in an illegal business.

Another project is the development of a hybrid plant, a cross between Columbian and Kansas reefer.

"The first generation grows up like the parent," said Archer." Pretty good stuff. But after that it deteriorates back to pure Kansas."

Vice president's wife is chronic latecomer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Betty Ford, wife of Vice President Gerald R. Ford, cannot understand why her husband gets so irritated with her chronic lateness for Washington social events, according to the May issue of McCalls.

Mrs. Ford defended her lateness at numerous social occasions in an interview with writer Trude B. Feldman. "I don't know why he complains so much," Mrs. Ford commented innocently. "Heaven knows he was late for our own wedding.

"As a matter of fact, he was so late that I'd just about decided that if he didn't show up soon, I might as well go down and marry the best man. When Jerry did appear, he apologized profusely —he had been out campaigning in a farm area.

"We finally bowed our heads to take the vows, and it was then I noticed that with his neat gray flannel suit, he was wearing dusty brown shoes. He had been in such a hurry to change his suit that he had simply forgotten to change his shoes."

The article said Mrs. Ford's habit of lateness continually angers her husband, especially since their social schedule increased so markedly after Ford assumed the vice presidency. To trick his wife into being on time, McCalls reported, Ford has resorted to such devices as telling her an 8 o'clock dinner engagement begins at 7 o'clock.

Betty Ford also believes that regardless of the political pressures her husband will remain "his own man."

"Jerry wouldn't hesitate to make an appointment with the President and say, 'I think you're off the beam on this or that.' Jerry and the President haven't always agreed. Jerry voted against bills the President wanted put through because he's always been his own man," Mrs. Ford told McCalls.

For the past nine years, Mrs. Ford has suffered from a pinched nerve that has forced her to give up skiing, dancing and golf. The pain comes and goes, requiring her to take traction equipment with her whenever she travels.

The pain apparently is aggravated by tension, and Mrs. Ford has been treated by a psychiatrist in an effort to relieve it. Her doctor, William R. Felts, said Ford did not hesitate to agree to the psychiatric treatment.

Yale students stop Shockley from speaking

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — Yale University President Kingman Brewster said Tuesday he was sickened to see students shouting down William Shockley, who tried to speak on his theory that Negroes are genetically inferior to whites.

"It makes me sick that even a small majority of Yale students would use storm trooper tactics in reference to freedom of speech," Brewster said.

About a third of the 300 students gathered for the debate between Nobel prizewinning physicist Shockley and conservative publisher William Rusher began heckling and catcalling as soon as the pair appeared on stage Monday night.

At one point during the shouting, Shockley walked to the podium, but when the heckling rose, he went instead to a large blackboard where he wrote, "Pity on Yale."

Shockley and Rusher finally left the stage after enduring about an hour of the shouting.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The first Easter egg roll in the United States was held on the Capitol grounds in Washington, D.C. on April 2, 1877, during President Rutherford B. Hayes' administration, The World Almanac recalls. The custom was practiced by later presidents but was discontinued in 1942. Easter egg rolling was started again on April 6, 1953, during President Dwight D. Eisenhower's administration.

Worst African drought shifting to Ethiopia

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — The focus of the worst drought in Africa's recorded history has shifted to southern Ethiopia where hundreds of thousands of peasants are threatened with starvation and death, according to relief workers.

Ethiopia was just beginning to come to grips with a devastating famine in the north when the dimensions of the new catastrophe in the south began to filter back to the centralgovernment here.

A report by the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) said as many as 100,000 persons died in the northern provinces of Tegre and Wallo last year. Some officials said this figure was conservative.

The new crisis threatens to dwarf even this.

The government has estimated 200,000 persons in the south face starvation this spring. West European and American relief workers in the area said the total couid reach 500,000.

The Norwegian Church Relief Organization reported recently that "the situation in the south is serious with many people starving, living on roots, the seed for the new growing season having been eaten, and cattle dying."

Because of the failure of the long rains a year ago and below average rainfall during the short rains in October, crops failed across the country, and there has been no water or grass for the cattle and cxen that have been dying in even greater numbers than humans.

One relief survey showed in six villages in Gamu Gofa province only 15 of 397 families had any grain early this year.

The Norwegian organization reported that in another village near the Kenyan border, 62 persons—more than half the population—had been found dead recently.

Such statistics conjure up a repeat of last year's horrific northern situation where one relief worker counted 179 bodies lining a road outside the town of Dessye.

The stricken southern area is a series of massive plateaus isolated from each other and the rest of the country by deep impenetrable valleys.

A third of the country's 26 million people live more than 20 miles from the nearest road. This is especially true in the south.

The dimensions of the crisis began to reach Addis only when peasants from the interior journeyed from their remote stockades on foot to the nearest towns in search of food. Their oxen had died, and some of the peasants had auctioned off their goats, then their seed grain and finally their land for as little as $250.

It has been virtually impossible to reach some settlements perched precariously at the tips of sheer, brick red plateaus which stretch for mile after mile to the horizon.

Food must be trucked in by small but sturdy trucks.

Relief agencies estimate a quarter of a million tons of imported grain will be needed in the next few months to feed the starving. Less than half this figure has been committed.

Much of the land in a country where 85 per cent of the population works in agriculture may never recover.

A government report entitled "The Drought Problem in Ethiopia" said:

"Throughout Tigre and good parts of Wallo (provinces) and elsewhere, the ecological balance has been seriously disturbed."

It suggested a large resettlement program because even with modern technological methods "it would still not be possible for all the rural population to be gainfully employed in these regions."

First benefits

Miss Ida Fuller of Ludlow, Vermont, a retired legal secretary, received the first benefits under the Social Security Act. Her initial check, for $22.54, was dated Jan. 31, 1940.

Almanac

By United Press International

Today is Thursday, Apri 18, the 108th day of 1974 with 257 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase.

The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Mars and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aries.

Famed symphony conductor Leopold Stokowski was born April 18, 1882.

On this day in history:

In 1775, American patriot Paul Revere began his famed ride through the Massachusetts countryside calling out "...The British are coming!"

In 1906, the San Francisco earthquake began. When it was over three days later, almost 500 persons were dead and more than a quarter of a million left homeless.

In 1942, Lt. Col. James Doolittle and a squadron of 16 B25s bombed Japan for the first time in World War II.

In 1964, 17 servicemen were killed when two U.S. troop planes collided over Ohio.

A thought for the day: British stateman John Selden said, "They that govern the most make the least noise."

Largest park site

The largest site in the national park system is Glacier Bay National Monument in Alaska covering 2,803,840 acres.

Hamster's peculiar attacks are normal

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Scurry, my hamster, worries me. She's had several of these strange trance-like attacks now. To describe: She seems to sort of get completely rigid. Her back gets stiff, her tail becomes erect and stiff, her ears perk up and stay that way, and she just stares straight ahead. Sometimes this lasts for five minutes, sometimes for ten. It's all very strange and sort of frightening. It even makes Blacky, my dog, nervous. Blacky's mother had epilepsy but it was never like that. What would it be, exactly? —D.O.

Dear D.O.: Scurry's trance-like states aren't really all that strange. Certainly they would be to another hamster, particularly a male. Scurry's display is actually an indication of her willingness to mate. At about this same time, and just in case any male hamster in the area might not be looking her way, the typical female hamster will also send up ultra high-pitched sounds, a sort of miniaturized, high-pitched, wolf signal in reverse, so she can catch if not the eye, then the ear, of any meandering male. Blacky may be picking up on Scurry's sound signals and perhaps even your apprehension.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Sherman and Tigre, my salamanders, are set up in a large terrarium and they seem to like it. The only problem is the terrarium plants aren't doing too well. The terrarium never gets any sun, so maybe that's the reason. Can those plants grow without it? How much light do they need? —A.C.

Dear A.C.: Two 40-watt fluorescent tubes used for 12 to 16 hours a day should provide excellent lighting for your plants. There are now even special fluorescent tubes to duplicate natural lighting conditions which can do even more toward stimulating plant growth.

DEAR DR. MILLER: It was terrible. But I am writing so others won't do the same. My dog started to get very sick. He vomited several times and I thought he might have picked up a poison. I was going to take him into the doctor but then he snapped out of it and seemed all right the rest of the day so I didn't bother. The next morning he was dying. I rushed him in but the doctor couldn't save him. Please tell people if they think their dog has been poisoned to always have him checked even if he seems all right afterward. —D.E.

COMMENT: You just did. Thank you and you're quite right.

Angels, Dodgers setting hot pace

Oliver, Robby hit homers

By BILL LANGLEY
P-B sports Editor

ANAHEIM — Inspired by his California Angel teammates, Bob Oliver has joined the parade of power hitters.

Oliver, who had not hit a home run in the Angels' first 11 games despite enjoying a .308 batting average, belted two round trippers Wednesday night to help give the Halos a 5-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins at Anaheim Stadium to restore the Angels' two-game lead in the American League West.

"It's encouraging to see the others hitting so well," Oliver told the writers. "It inspires me. I figure if they can do it, I can do it too."

Besides Oliver's pair of homers off Minnesota starter Dick Woodson, slugger Frank Robinson connected for his fourth of the campaign and 556th of his career to tie the score in the sixth inning.

The Angels took advantage of a key Minnesota error to score two unearned runs in the seventh inning to enjoy their eighth win in 11 games.

"We have a tough batting lineup from (Mickey) Rivers leading off to the bottom," Angel manager Bobby Winkles said."It's tough to pitch around us, especially if (Mike) Epstein starts coming around. I'm glad to see Oliver bust out of it and Robinson showed his strength. You know he hit that home run off the end of the bat."

Besides the solo blasts in the second and fourth inning, Oliver also helped the Angel cause with a couple of sparkling plays at third base.

The most spectacular was when he threw out speedster Sergio Ferrer in the third inning after diving for the ball and throwing while on his knees.

Tight defense, strong pitching and improved power has carried the Angels to the top of the West standings. Thanks to Oliver, Robinson, Lee Stanton, Joe Lahoud and Epstein, the Halos have already hit 13 home runs this season to only seven at the same point last year.

Winkles was delighted with the pitching Wednesday.

Despite being knocked out in the fifth inning, newcomer Bill Stoneman impressed Winkles. Reliever Dave Sells, making his first appearance of the season, blanked the Twins the rest of the way to prove there are some good arms in the bullpen.

"I'm happy with Stoneman," Winkles said."He pitched well until he ran out of gas. This is probably the longest (4 1-3 innings) he has pitched since last July or August. And Sells was simply outstanding."

The Angels purchased Stoneman, a former Mt. San Antonio College pitcher, on April 5 from the Montreal Expos. Stoneman pitched two no-hitters for the Expos but suffered a rough season last year because of a variety of arm ailments.

Minnesota scored two runs on four hits in the fourth inning and added a third tally in the fifth when Rod Carew singled to score Ferrer for a temporary 3-2 lead.

Sells allowed three harmless singles the rest of the way.

"I've been trying to throw every day in the bullpen," Sells said about his first outing since spring training. "I had to get the guys to stand up there and simulate a real game."

The Angels scored their winning runs in the seventh after Ellie Rodriquez and Dave Chalk singled to knock Woodson from the game. Reliever Tom Burgmeier got Rivers to hit a pop-up in short left field but shortstop Ferrer dropped the ball to enable Rodriquez to score. Bobby Valentine's sacrifice fly brought Chalk home for an insurance tally.

ANGEL ANGLES— Ray Corbin (1-0) was a last-minute substitute for Bert Blyleven for the Twins in today's 1 p.m. game against Angel rookie Frank Tanana (2-0). Blyleven, Minnesota's ace, was scratched because of a stiffness in his shoulder . . .

After today's game, the Angels depart for an 11-game trip to Oakland, Baltimore, Cleveland and Boston. The games from Oakland will be televised on Channel 5 at 8 p.m. Friday and 1:30 p.m. Saturday but not on Sunday . . .

Robinson added five total bases Wednesday night to raise his career total to 5,104 to surpass Tris Speaker for sixth place on the all-time list behind Hank Aaron, Stan Musial, Willie Mays, Babe Ruth and Ty Cobb. Robby also stole his 200th base . . .

Oliver has hit 39 homers for the Angels, the 10th highest total in the club's history . . .

Catcher Rodriquez threw out Carew trying to steal in the third inning for his fifth this season. The opposition has only been successful once.

Pomona's Darrell Huntley (left) takes a blow to the body, but scored a unanimous decision over Grant Belcher in the novice 165-pound semifinals of the AAU Regionals at the fairgrounds Wednesday.

Garvey, Wynn lead Dodgers to 14-1 romp

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Steve Garvey refers to his winding up a Los Angeles Dodger player as "one of the great nostalgia stories of baseball."

Garvey's dad is a bus driver and has chauffered the Dodgers around the Florida Grapefruit League since Steve was six years old.

'Gil Hodges, Carl Furillo and all the other Dodger players of that era were my heroes," recalled Garvey Wednesday night.

After Garvey's sophomore year at Michigan State he was drafted as a free agent by the Dodgers.

"Just think. The odds on that happening were 24-1," said Steve after his two homers and one by Jimmy Wynn led the Dodgers to a 14-1 victory and a sweep of a two-game series with the Cincinnati Reds.

There's a new look about Wynn this season and it's not just because he has exchanged a Houston Astro uniform for that of the Dodgers.

The former Cincinnati Taft High School athlete is supporting a mustache and a beard this season.

"But that's not the reason for the six homers and the 17 RBI's I already have," said a laughing Wynn. "I am no Samson. I've just got the mustache and the beard because my wife likes them."

"Six homers and 17 RBI's," mused Garvey, "that's a good season for some guys."

Garvey deserves a pat on the back himself. After 12 games his statistics are almost as impressive as those of Wynn.

Garvey's homers Wednesday night were his third and fourth of the season. He added a single and drove home four runs to boost his total to 11.

Lefthander Doug Rau and Mike Marshall teamed up to limit the Reds to four hits, one a homer by George Foster, as the Dodgers completed the sweep.

Altogether the Dodgers tatooed Roger Nelson and his three successors for 17 hits.

"That was a 2-1 ballgame until the 7th inning," muttered Reds' Manager Sparky Anderson.

Memory of the Dodgers scoring four runs in each of the last three innings made Sparky wince.

The Reds had to wince remembering that Wynn was plucked out of their organization in the minor league draft back in 1962 by the Houston Astros for a measly $8,000.

Wynn had just completed his first year of pro baseball, batting .290 for the Tampa, Fla., farm club. The Reds had left him unprotected, but obviously hadn't crossed their fingers for good luck.

At the time Wynn was unhappy about being drafted.

"Later I realized it was a break for me because if I had stayed with the Reds I would have never gotten to the majors as quickly as I did. They had Frank Robinson, Vada Pinson and Tommy Harper in those days."

The Reds tried to get Wynn back from the Astros in the winter of 1965, offering Robinson as bait.

"I was aware of the proposed trade," said Wynn. "And I was real flattered when Houston didn't trade me because at the time I wasn't an established player and Robinson had been doing his thing for years and years."

City boxers win in semis

By MIKE RAWLINSON
P-B Staff Writer

POMONA — Two young city boxers fought their way into the finals of the Southern Pacific Association's (AAU) Regional Boxing Championships at the L.A. County Fairgrounds Saturday in semifinals Wednesday night.

Four Pomonans in all will be battling for berths in the AAU National Championships at Knoxville, Tenn. in June. A fifth Pomona fighter, Albert Sandoval, a freshman at Cal Poly University, and the defending regional and national 106-pound champion, advanced to this year's nationals by default.

Coach Tony Cerda said Sandoval was unable to find opponents for the opening and semifinal rounds of the regionals at the fairgrounds, but may fight an exhibition with an as yet unnamed opponent in Saturday's finals.

All five Pomonans fight out of the Sacred Heart Athletic Club and are coached by Cerda.

Darrell Huntley, a 165-pound novice, opened the show Wednesday with a unanimous decision over Grant Belcher of Buena Park's Stanton Athletic Club. Huntley will fight Bert Hunter of National City for the 165-pound title Saturday night.

Chip Larson followed Huntley's victory with an impressive showing in the open 132-pound class, knocking Arturo Reyes of San Diego down three times before the referee stopped the fight in the third and final round, awarding Larson a technical knockout. Larson will battle Juan Segura of Gardena for the 132-pound title Saturday.

In other semifinal matches Wednesday, Martin Yniquez of Riverside scored a split decision over John Staggs of Modesto in the 139-pound open class. Yniquez will square off with Chris Carrillo of Los Angeles in Saturday's finals. Carrillo outpointed Rafael Presiado to score a split decision Wednesday.

In the 178-pound class, Reginald Phillips of Los Angeles scored a unanimous decision over Hawthorne's Eugene Meira. Phillips will tangle with Monsour Sarfaroz for the 178-pound title in the finals.

Four novice titles were also decided Wednesday in the 125, 139, 147 and 156-pound classes. The four winners advance to the nationals.

Sammy Yniguez of Riverside won the 125-pound class with a unanimous decision over Sammy Hernandez of Placentia. In the 139-pound class it was Bobby Serna winning on a split decision over Danny Lira of Los Angeles. The 147-pound title went to Alfred Gonzalez of Santa Ana on a split decision over Felix Maldonado of Hawthorne. In the 156-pound class Alvaro Lopez of Los Angeles won the crown on a split decision over Leo Banuelos.

Tickets for Saturday's finals, which get underway at 8 p.m. in building 7A at the fairgrounds are on sale today and Friday from 3-7 p.m. at the main gate.

Tickets are scaled at $5 for reserved ringside seats and $3 for general admission. Youngsters under 16 may purchase ringside and general admission tickets for half price.

Rangers can eliminate Canadiens from playoffs

By United Press International

The New York Rangers, given up for dead by their fans just a few days ago, can eliminate the defending Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens tonight while Boston is host to Chicago in the opener of their semifinal round.

The Rangers, who have gone 34 years since last winning the Cup, appeared to be out of the running again last Sunday afternoon when they were down in games, 2-1, and were trailing Montreal 3-1 in the fourth contest. But they rallied for a 6-4 victory in the nationally televised contest, then won, 3-2, in an overtime thriller at Montreal Tuesday night.

This gave New York a 3-2 advantage in games and a chance to move into the semifinals against Philadelphia with just one more victory over the Canadiens. New York will have the home ice advantage tonight but if the Canadiens win, the series will shift back to Montreal for the seventh game Saturday night.

Boston and Chicago, meanwhile, had fairly easy passage into the semis. The Bruins wiped out Toronto in four games in their opening set and the Black Hawks disposed of Los Angeles in five. The Flyers also enjoyed a four-game sweep against Atlanta.

Bruce MacGregor and Ron Harris have been the unexpected heroes for the Rangers. MacGregor scored the tying goal with only 16 seconds left to play in regulation time on Tuesday night—his fifth goal of the series—and Harris' gamewinner was his second goal in as many games, equalling his entire season's output.

Boston, after sitting around since Sunday, is happy about returning to action tonight.

"If we had to wait around until maybe Sunday, it wouldn't have been so good," said the Bruins' Ken Hodge. "After a while you worry about losing momentum."

Erving shows his talent

By United Press International

If the Kentucky Colonels had any doubts about Julius Erving's right to the American Basketball Association's Most Valuable Player Award this year, they were put to rest Wednesday night.

Erving pulled up and fired in an off-balanced 20-foot jumpshot at the buzzer to give the New York Nets an 89-87 victory over the Colonels and a 3-0 lead in their ABA Eastern Division championship playoff series.

The game-winning basket climaxed a brilliant clutch performance by Erving as he scored eight of the Nets' last 12 points, including a driving stuff shot that put them ahead for the first time at 83-81. He finished with a game-high 30 points, the third straight playoff game in which he has been high scorer, and 14 rebounds.

While the Nets pulled to a 3-0 lead over Kentucky, Utah gained a similar advantage over Indiana in the Western title playoff by scoring eight straight points early in the fourth period to break open a close game and earn a 99-90 victory.

Indiana, the defending ABA champion, played without highscoring forward Roger Brown, out with a leg injury.

Muniz fights Marco Gerardo

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Busy Los Angeles welterweight Armando Muniz will face Mexico's Marco Gerardo in a 10-rounder at the Olympic Auditorium tonight.

Muniz goes into the bout with a 31-6-1 record, including 21 knockouts.

He hopes to get a rematch with another Mexican welterweight, Zovek Barajas. Barajas scored a split decision win over Muniz last year.

Top women golfers eye richest purse

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Perennial moneywinning leader Kathy Whitworth and 50 other top pros set out today after the richest prize in women's golf history in the LPGA's $200,000 Colgate-Dinah Shore Winners Circle championship.

The 72-hole tournament over the 6,240-yard, par-72 Mission Hills Golf and Country Club course concludes Sunday.

In what is sometimes called the Women's Masters, the tourney features women who have placed third or better in an LPGA event the last three years, winners of the past 10 years, and members of the LPGA Hall of Fame.

Defending champion Mickey Wright, recovering from a foot operation, has guaranteed a new titleholder this year by her absence. She beat Joyce Kazmierski last year with a 25-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole.

Miss Whitworth, a pro since 1958 and the No. 1 moneywinner on the LPGA tour in eight of the last nine seasons, heads a field which also includes Jane Blalock, Carol Mann, Sandra Palmer, Miss Kazmierski, Donna Caponi Young, Judy Rankin, Sandra Haynie and 18-year-old hopeful Laura Baugh.

Miss Blalock captured the event the previous two years while Miss Mann is the current money leader this season, having been the only player to win two tournaments of the seven that have been played.

The winner will earn $32,000 and a new car. Second place is worth $21,000 and third $14,000.

Tuesday's pro-am was won by Pam Higgins, actor Robert Stack, Phil Beekman, and Richard George.

ABA clubs must now try to sign draft picks

NEW YORK (UPI) — Calling out names of college players and those from the rosters of the National Basketball Association was easy, now comes the hard part for the would-be body snatchers of the American Basketball Associaton: signing the players.

In addition to the college draft, 50 NBA names were also selected by the 10 ABA teams Wednesday in what was billed as the first-ever open draft of NBA players. But it may amount to little more than a publicity ploy if the ABA doesn't actively pursue them and the private feeling among the coaches, general managers and owners at the draft was that they'll be lucky if they can land more than a half-dozen.

The Utah Stars provided a surprise of their own when they selected a high school player, 6-foot-11 Moses Malone of Petersburg, Va., who was tabbed in the college draft.

Malone, the most sought after prep player in the nation, was not the first high school player to be drafted by the pros but was the first since Wilt Chamberlain was selected by Eddie Gottlieb of the old Philadelphia Warriors out of Overbrook H.S. in Philadelphia in 1954.

The ABA clubs also announced the results of their secret college draft held recently and then picked up with the third round.

Among the top collegians drafted by the teams were: Virginia—Tom McMillen, Maryland and Jan van Breda Kolff, Vanderbilt; Memphis — Scott Wedman, Colorado and Clarence Walker, West Georgia; Denver—Fly Williams, Austin Peay and Frank Kendrick, Purdue; San Diego—Major Jones, Albany (Ga.) St., and Cliff Pondexter, Long Beach St.; San Antonio — Leonard Robinson, Tennessee State and Colis Temple, LSU; Indiana— Billy Knight, Pittsburgh and Bruce King, Pan American; Carolina—John Lucas, Maryland and Gus Gerard, Virginia; Utah—Joe Merriweather, Southern Illinois and Len Kosmalski, Tennessee; Kentucky—Al Eberhard, Missouri and Sammy High, Tulsa; New York—Brian Winter, South Carolina and Rich Kelly, Stanford.

San Diego drafted Bill Walton last year as a future pick and still retain the rights to the UCLA center.

"I'd be happy if we got even a few good players," said ABA Commissioner Mike Storen when asked about the ABA's attempted raid of the NBA. "We held this draft in order to organize our efforts in regard to NBA players. We haven't been signing any in the last few years and hopefully we'll be able to come away with a few now. At least now the players, if they're interested, will know which teams to contact and the teams will limit their efforts to certain players."

Only one team, San Diego, has a real chance of landing a player of star quality—Golden State's Cazzie Russell. The slick-shooting 6-foot 5 forward has played out his obligation to the Warriors and, if Conquistador owner Dr. Leonard Bloom can raise about a million dollars, Russell may jump for a multi-year contract.

Carolina could pursuade Atlanta to release Pete Maravich, their high-priced but unhappy star guard. The Hawks may be willing to drop Maravich, who is committed to them for at least another two years, from their payroll for a high enough bonus. Both player and club are rumored to be at odds with each other.

Butch van Breda Kolff, general manager and coach of the Memphis Tams, laughed when someone suggested the ABA might really be accomplishing something with this draft.

"We've had their names for seven years and now all of a sudden we're going to sign them because we got a room set up, put up a red, white and blue sign and called out their names,"

Poly holds scrimmage this evening

POMONA — Football fans will be able to take their first look at Cal Poly's "new look" grid forces this evening from 7 to 9 p.m.

Coach Andy Vinci plans a game-type scrimmage with 12 minute quarters and with two groups divided into offensive and defensive units for the full workout. Films will be taken to allow the coaching staff a better evaluation of the players.

"We're still looking at people to get a better idea of how last year's Bronco players and the new junior college transfers are stacking up," says Vinci. "But we're pleased with the enthusiasm and that most of the players are eager to hit.

"There is some lack of intensity and concentration over a long period of time but this is probably due to not knowing assignments of the new system. The work of offensive linemen is a plus and so far the quality of running backs is a minus."

Some of the players who have caught the eye of Cal Poly coaches in the first week of spring drills are offensive guards Vecnon Smith and Jack Murry, offensive tackles Len Latham and Randy Taylor, defensive tackle Charlie Grimes, linebacker Mark Mahan, defensive guard Randy-Daniel, center Ken LaVigne, and defensive backs Paul Russell, Ron Stewart and Scott Sanders.

The Broncs' fine quarterback of last season, Jim Zorn, and wide receiver Joe Fabian also have been impressive.

The entire spring session will wind up May 11 with a game against the Alumni.

Hitters dominate Valley statistics

The hitters continue to dominate the pitchers in the P-B hitting, pitching derby for four-year colleges.

Pomona-Pitzer's Biff Sherman raised his average 15 points, from .528 to .543 through last Saturday to take a 65 point lead over La Verne's Mike Alonso (.478).

Although not having anyone in the .500 class, Claremont-Mudd, headed by Wynn Moore's .416, has four of the top 10 batters. La Verne has three, APC two and Pomona-Pitzer one (Sherman).

Chuck Van Schoych of Azusa Pacific is the runs batted in leader with 37. Alonso leads in home runs with eight.

Cal Poly, with no hitters in the top 10, has three of the top 10 pitchers in Vic Bernal, Dee King and John Riddle. La Verne also has three including the leader, John Verhoeven.

Only Mike Jones of Azusa Pacific (2.42) was able to break the Leopards' domination. Verhoevn's 0.77 is way in front of everyone. Teammates Robb Mayhew (2.50) and Dan Quisenberry (2.75) are third and fourth.

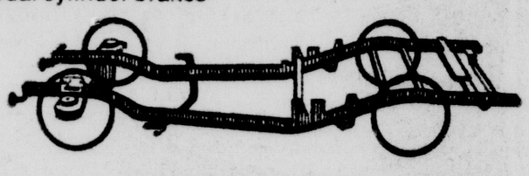
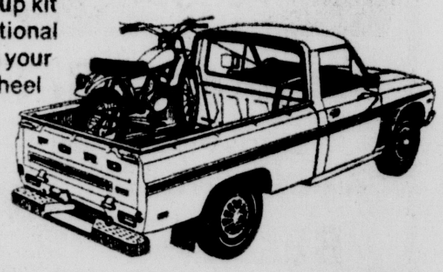
Gutsy

Ford Courier durability starts with a box-section frame reinforced with seven crossmembers. An independent front suspension features big coil springs and a stabilizer bar. Long, wide rear springs have six leaves. Dual cylinder brakes have 2 brake cylinders at each wheel. The all-steel box is all-welded. And a Courier easily carries up to 1,400 lbs. of payload and people.



Sporty

The Courier pictured at right and below sports a dress-up kit that includes such optional features as stripes (in your choice of 4 colors), wheel covers, mirrors and a rear step rail or bumper. There's also a popular bike-bar option (right). And a deluxe box cover option (not shown) has tinted side windows. Automatic transmissions and air conditioning are also available options.



Thrifty

Courier's spirited 1800-cc. engine gives you all the operating economies you'd expect from a 4-cylinder import. And the engine's 5 main bearings . . . for rigidity and strength . . . are designed to help promote trouble-free service over the long haul. For more details on this gutsy little economy pickup . . . and its little import price . . . see your Ford Dealer.

Stags rip Sagehens to share lead

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

CLAREMONT — After 24 hours in second place, Claremont-Mudd's baseball team is back in a tie for first place with La Verne.

The Stags (6-1) rolled to an easy 12-2 win Wednesday over outclassed Pomona-Pitzer (0-7) on the Pomona diamond. Ed Matta (5-4) kept 10 hits, all singles, well scattered except for the sixth inning.

The Sagehens got four of their hits in the sixth and scored their second and last run of the game. Another run, in the person of Biff Sherman, was thrown out at the plate on a good play by centerfielder Wynn Moore of C-M.

Moore. top hitter for the Stags, went 0-for-4 and saw his average plummet 51 points, from .416 to .365.

Claremont-Mudd took a 2-0 lead in the first inning. The Stags combined a leadoff double by Andy Roundtree and two-out singles by Brad Koppel and Steve Lopez with two P-P errors.

The 'Hens committed two more errors in the fourth and the Stags took full advantage of them to score two more runs without benefit of a hit.

Pomona-Pitzer scored its first run in the fifth inning. Matta, who struck out seven, issue his only walk of the contest and C-M contributed one of its two errors to go along with Dave Dickter's single.

Claremont-Mudd broke the game open with four runs in the sixth. Dave Lane replaced David Jones (4-5) on the mound for the Sagehens.

Lane threw 13 pitches and 12 of them were balls. Two were wild pitches. Jon Blacker replaced Lane and came in to pitch to Bob Turek with a run in, Greg Thompson on third and Gary Burger on first with nobody out.

On Blacker's second pitch. Burger broke for second and beat Sherman's throw. Thompson belatedly broke for home and stopped short when he saw the return throw to the plate beat him easily.

A rundown ensued with Sherman and third baseman Bob Hoehn playing catch with each other while trying to run Thompson down. Blacker got into the act taking Hoen's throw. By this time, Burger had moved to third himself thinking Thompson would be caught. Blacker's awkward throw to Hoehn was wild and both Tompson and Burger raced home.

Turek then doubled. Roundtree slammed his second double to drive in Turek. Blacker then settled down and got out of the inning without further damage.

The Stags added four more runs in the ninth on five hits including doubles by Burger and Gary Rattet. Jon Begerow, Bob Ingram and Tom Condon chipped in singles.

The two teams will play two games at Claremont-Mudd Saturday.

Wallace leads Azusa Pacific win

AZUSA — John Wallace dashed his way to three first place finished and ran on Azusa Pacific's winning relay teams Wednesday afternoon as APC ripped Chapman 108½-34½.

The win marked the sixth straight track victory for the Cougars, after opening the season with a loss, and prepares them for Friday's quadrangular meet with UC Riverside, CS Bakersfield and Redlands.

Wallace paved the way for his fellow tracksters by capturing the 440 (51.9), the triple jump (41-6½) and the long jump (22-2¾). He then ran on APC's winning 440 relay team and victorious mile relay team, along with Dan Woodward—who also won the 880—and Paul Cook, who added a first in the mile.

The other multiple win was turned in by Dave Stanley, who notched a win in the shot put (45-9) and the discus.

Mitterwald didn't enjoy 'take' sign

By United Press International

George Mitterwald has no regrets about his three-homer, eight-RBI game but he wishes he hadn't seen that "take sign" flashed by Manager Whitey Lockman of the Chicago Cubs.

If he hadn't been on the alert, he thinks he might now be the eighth player in modern baseball history to hit four homers in one game. As it is he is one of many, as they say in the record books, to hit three homers in a game since the turn of the century.

Mitterwald, acquired by the Cubs from the Minnesota Twins in a winter trade, hit three homers, including a grand slam, and drove in eight runs Wednesday as the Cubs downed the Pittsburgh Pirates, 18-9.

"I saw a good pitch to hit when the 'take sign' was on," said Mitterwald. "The first homer was on a hanging curve and the others on fast balls. After that I tried not to think of home runs but the last time I was at bat I was thinking of it constantly. Not too many guys have hit four in one game."

Mitterwald laid off "the good pitch" in the fourth inning during which the Cubs scored five runs to build their lead to 15-4. He eventually walked, forcing in a run in that inning and doubled in his final appearance at the plate.

Phils 12 Cards 5

Mike Anderson drove in three runs with two singles, a double and a homer as the Phillies won their sixth straight game, their longest winning streak since April, 1970. The Phillies blew open the game with a four-run third inning, paving the way for middle-inning reliever George Culver to win his first game and Sonny Siebert to take the loss.

Astros 3 Giants 2

Dave Kingman's sixth-inning throwing error enabled Bob Gallagher to score the winning run in the Astros' triumph over the Giants. Claude Osteen won his second game with relief help from Ken Forsch. Cesar Cedeno hit his second homer of the season for the Astros.

Expos 7 Mets 4

Steve Rogers pitched a six-hitter and Tim Foli drove in three runs with a pair of singles as the Expos handed the Mets their sixth straight defeat. It was the second consecutive win for Rogers, who struck out five and walked two. Dave Schneck drove in four runs with two homers for the Mets.

Padres 6 Braves 1

Jim McAndrew scattered 10 hits for his first win for San Diego which scored four runs in the third inning with the help of two-run singles by John Grubbs and Fred Kendall. Carl Morton suffered the loss for the Braves. Hank Aaron did not play.

Orioles 6, Tigers 1

Jim Fuller's two-run homer highlighted a five-run first inning which carried the Orioles past the Tigers. Jim Palmer got the victory on a five-hitter. Woody Fryman lasted two-thirds of an inning and took the loss.

Red Sox 4 Yanks 3

Boston didn't get a hit until the seventh inning off Pat Dobson but scored two runs in that inning and two more in the eighth to win. Carl Yastrzemski started Boston's comeback with a homer in the seventh for the first Red Sox hit.

Rangers 4 Royals 2

Texas scored three runs in the eighth to beat Kansas City. Jeff Burroughs' double and Tom Grieve's triple highlighted the rally. Jim Bibby, 3-1, got the win while Gene Garber took the loss in relief of Nelson Briles.

White Sox 5 A's 3

Brian Dowsing's two-run homer in the eighth inning lifted Chicago past Oakland Downing was filling in for injured Ed Herrmann The triumph snapped a three-game White Sox losing string

Brewers 5, Indians 4

Gaylor Perry worked 15 innings but had nothing to show for it when Bob Coluccio of the Brewers — the firt batter to face Perry's replacement, Ken Sanders, in the 16th inning — homered. Perry had a 4-2 lead with one out in the ninth when Pedro Garcia slammed a two-run homer to send the game into extra innings.

SAL baseball teams enter second round of league play

By CRAIG TRAVIS
P-B Staff Writer

Round two gets underway in the San Antonio League Friday while the Hacienda League will be completing their first week in the second round.

Upland and Montclair enter the second half of the season deadlocked for the SAL lead with 6-1 slates while Damien is still breathing down their necks at 5-2.

Upland's only loss was a 5-3 decision while the Cavs' lone setback came at the hands of Damien 6-5. The Spartans lost to Upland 3-2 and Claremont by the same score.

Which makes the Claremont-Damien battle a good way to begin the second time around.

The Wolfpack (9-8, 3-4) will send pitcher and new hitting star Harry Brown (3-3, 1-1) to the mound against Damien's top hurler, Larry Pekarcik (7-0, 4-0).

Brown, who was named Outstanding Player of the Pomona Elks Tournament a week ago with a 615 batting mark (8-for-13), collected two hits in Tuesday's 6-0 win over Ganesha.

Pekarcik has turned in one-hitters in each of his last three SAL starts.

Claremont won the first round meeting 3-2, scoring twice in the last of the seventh. Brown picked up the win.

In other action, Pomona (4-11, 3-4) will send John Wieman (1-2, 1-1) to the mound and oppose Montclair's Mike Medeiros (3-2, 2-0).

The Red Devil offense is sparked by lead-off hitter Jim Price, batting .500 with 10 hits in 20 at bats.

Chino (10-7, 3-4) will send either Mike Coppess (3-3, 1-1), Jerry Belmudes (3-1, 1-0) or Stan Surina (3-0, 1-0) to the hill when the Cowboys visit Garey.

The Vikings (1-14, 1-6) will start either Dan Ross (0-4, -02) or Bruce Black (0-1, 0-0). Robbie Franklin, who had two hits, provides the offense.

Upland, with righthander Rich Phillips (4-0, 2-0) getting the starting nod, travels to Ganesha (2-13, 1-6) to tackle Ruben Ruiz (1-8, 1-3). Tracey Cowger supplies the offense for the Giants while the Scots look to Stu DuVall (.316), Dale Arneson (.308) and Russ Feaster (.295).

Bonita and Alta Loma fit the ball as the top game in the Hacienda loop.

The Bearcats (13-6, 7-1) will pull out all stops to win the game, by sending ace Bill Bumstead (9-1, 6-0) to the mound.

The sophomore righthander has allowed just two earned runs in 35 innings for an 0.40 earned run average against league opposition.

The Braves (5-2) will counter with their top hurler Kevin Bell.

Bonita topped Alta Loma in their first meeting 4-0 as Bumstead fired a no-hitter and Richard Ortega collected three doubles.

Shortstop Bruce McNaught is batting .450 (9-for-20) while Bumstead has chimed in with eight hits in 20 trips for a .400 mark.

Walnut (8-8, 3-5), enjoying a modest two-game win streak, hosts Gladstone (5-3) in an important HL game.

The Mustangs are a revamped team with the return of Lance Parrish, who has driven in seven runs in the past three games.

The Glads have been in the thick of the race all season but Tuesday's 10-9 loss to Alta Loma dropped them two games back.

The other matchup pits San Dimas (7-7, 4-4) against always tough Royal Oak (5-3).

The Saints have been unable to get any kind of a winning string together and find themselves three games off Bonita's pace. The Romans, after starting the season with a pair of losses, came back with five wins in a row, but lost Tuesday's game to Walnut 5-3.

Chaffey High uses win to increase CBL lead

SAN BERNARDINO — Just one week ago Pacific High visited the Pomona Valley and surprised 32 high school baseball teams by capturing the Pomona Elks Baseball Tournament.

But Chaffey High didn't let a little matter of a tourney win affect them Wednesday afternoon as the Tigers nipped the Pirates, 4-2, in 11 innings.

The win keeps Chaffey in the front running of the CBL with a 7-0 mark (15-5 on the year) while upstarts of Pacific dipped to 2-6-1.

Wally Reed, Larry Jones and Rick Blackman led off the 11th frame with singles to load the bases. Dana DeMuth lifted his second scoring fly ball of the game to give the Tigers the go-ahead run. Reliever and winning pitcher Harley Stark then followed suit with another sacrifice fly to give the visitors the 4-2 margin.

The aces of each staff drew the starting assignment with Chaffey's Larry Garcia, unbeaten in six CBL decisions, went eight innings allowing two runs (one earned). Dave Maki hurled a scoreless ninth and Larry Jones pitched to one batter in the 10th.

Stark then replaced Jones on the hill and retired the Pirates in the next two frames to earn his second win of the year, first in league play.

Inland and late seasons

May cut deer hunt

SACRAMENTO — The California Fish and Game Commission has received recommendations from the Department of Fish and Game that would cut back inland and late deer hunting seasons and tighten restrictions on taking furbearers.

Commissioners received recommendations from the DFG, sportsmen and the general public for 1974-75 hunting regulations for mammals and furbearers April 5 in the first of three regatory meetings that will culminate in adoption of new rules May 31 in Los Angeles.

DFG Director Ray Arnett said that inland and late deer hunting seasons would open a week later than last year under the proposal to keep openings from falling during periods of extreme fire hazard and to reduce the harvest under conditions of declining deer numbers and deteriorating habitat.

In addition, the late season would close a week earlier than in 1973, limiting the hunt to five weeks.

Recommendations for regulations changes on taking furbearing mammals would extend to the entire state limited and closed seasons on muskrat and beaver. In addition, bobcat would be removed from the nongame list of animals that could be taken at any time and a limited season would be established.

Other DFG-suggested regulations changes would outlaw some steel jawed and all killer-type traps and the use of nonregistered traps for taking furbearers commercially, and would require removal of animals from traps once every 24 hours.

The DFG also recommended that Inyo County be returned to the general season area for rabbits because of improved forage conditions in desert areas and a resurgence of rabbit populations.

Oral recommendations were received from the California Houndsmen for Conservation, Copco Lake Sportsmen's Associaion, Associated Sportsmen of California, Dye Creek Preserve, California Guides Association, National Sportsmen's Association, Yolo Sportsmen's Association, Knights Landing Sportsmen's Club, California Wildlife Federation and the Mother Lode Houndsmen.

Most of the public recommendations were for later deer seasons. Houndsmen's organizations sought more liberal bear seasons and bag limits.

In addition, there were written recommendations from dozens of groups and individuals, most of them pertaining to deer seasons. Four organizations and 57 individuals requested a muzzle-loading rifle deer season.

Hot line set for warning

LONG BEACH — A hot line to the Department of Fish and Game has been set up to warn of the intended use of the pesticide Furadan by California farmers.

Establishment of the hot line by the Department of Food and Agriculture follows by three weeks the deaths of 2,450 grazing ducks on March 14 in Riverside County. The deaths were attributed to Furadan which had been used to spray an alfalfa field for control of weevils.

By letter Friday the Department of Food and Agriculture instructed all county agricultural commissioners to consult with the Department of Fish and Game Pesticide Investigation Section in Sacramento prior to use of Furadan by a farmer within their jurisdiction before April 14 of each year.

In the case of Lassen and Modoc counties consultations must be made throughout the year.

Department of Fish and Game officials had advised the Department of Food and Agriculture that with the exception of Modoc and Lassen counties grazing ducks and geese will normally have departed the state by April 15.

Plenty to see and do at Sportsmen's show

LOS ANGELES — Werner Buck's big Sportsmen's, Vacation & Travel Show, now in its 29th year, opened a ten-day-run last Friday at Los Angeles Convention Center.

Something new has been added to this family-oriented outdoors spectacular: In addition to learning all about hunting, fishing, travel, recreational areas and such, visitors can actually participate with experts in a number of outdoor-indoor sports activities.

A visitor, for example, may be able to play a bit of pool with former pocket billiards champ, Willie Mosconi. Or try his skill in sinking baskets against Ted St. Martin, world's greatest basketball free thrower. Or, if he's a member of a 6-man volleyball team, try beating Bob Schaffer, the extraordinary one-man volleyball team. Then, if he's a paddle tennis fan, he may be able to enter the Invitational Paddle Tennis Tournament, which runs all during the show.

For the ardent fisherman, the show is a dream come true. 28 of the leading manufacturers of fishing tackle will be exhibiting their latest wares in an expanded Tackle Row with half a million dollars worth of gorgeous rods, the new est and best, on display along with a pair of fly casting ponds. As additional bonuses for lovers of Izaak Walton, golfer Billy Casper, a fine fisherman, will conduct a Deep Sea Fishing Clinic. Slim Pickens, the cowboy star, will also guide visitors through a Trout Fishing Clinic.

Additional attractions include Bicycle, Backpacking and Archery Clinics, manned by experts, and demonstration-lectures on mountain climbing by a young conqueror of Everest and Anapurna in Nepal. For the sedentary, a Book Nook will display a great lineup of outdoor books; a Travel Film Festival and scores of booths and exhibits will be devoted to information regarding travel and resorts, both national and foreign, from California all the way to the USSR.

All this for but $2 for adults, $1 for youngsters 6 to 12 and for kids younger, free. Hours: 2 to 10 PM weekdays; Noon to 10:30 PM Saturdays; Noon to 7:30 PM Sundays.

Houston Texans hire assistant

HOUSTON (UPI) — Ralph Cavalucci, an assistant coach at the University of New Hampshire, has signed as an assistant coach of the World Football League Houston Texans, a spokesman said Wednesday.

Cavalucci played football at Utah State with Texan Coach Jim Garrett.

Top spots up for grabs in JC track

Mt. San Antonio College will be fighting to hold onto second place in the South Coast Conference track race, and Citrus will be hoping for a small miracle in its quest for a tie for first place in the Mission Conference Friday afternoon.

Both schools, plus Chaffey, will be competing in conference action Friday after taking a week off during the Easter Vacation.

MSAC, after suffering its first conference dual meet loss in six years to Fullerton two weeks ago, will host San Diego Mesa at 3 p.m. in a battle of the two second place teams.

"Mesa feels they can handle us this week," stated Mountie assistant coach John Norton. "It should be a very competitive meet."

The meet with Mesa will complete the Mounties' dual meet season for this year.

Some of the top MSAC athletes to keep an eye on will include shot putter Scott Flox, javelin thrower Dave Krogh, high jumper Steve Miller, triple jumper Ehrich Scott and long jumper Stan Bland.

Chaffey will be hosting Citrus and Riverside in a double dual meet at 3 p.m., with Citrus hoping for an upset in the conferece.

"Grossmont and Palomar will face each other Friday," explained Citrus assistant coach Vince O'Boyle. "Grossmont (the defending conference champions) should beat Palomar, but if it doesn't turn out that way we'll have to beat Chaffey in order to get into a tie for first with Grossmont."

Citrus recently lost a hard-fought battle with the defending champs, with valley junior college athlete of the week Rick Wilmoth clocking blazing times in the 100 (9.4) and 220 (21.0).

"We keep telling our guys, 'If you think Chaffey will fall down and play dead you've got another think coming'" added O'Boyle. "I just hope they (Citrus athletes) have the Colorado River fever out of their blood after the vacation. If they don't we're going to have a tough time."

"It's going to be a difficult meet with Riverside and Citrus," stated Chaffey coach Chuck Hicks. "Citrus won its division in the Southern California Relays and we placed fourth. Riverside is on an unusual vacation and will only field a partial team."

Chaffey's top athletes include Dave Nugent of Norco, Tony Lewis of Chino and Matt and Mark Wagner of Chino.

Fullerton adds football aide

FULLERTON — Chuck Gallo, highly successful head football coach at Servite High School in Anaheim for the past two seasons, has been appointed offensive backfield coach at Cal State Fullerton, head coach Pete Yoder has announced. He succeeds Bill Griffin, who resigned to accept a position with the World Football League Portland Storm.

Gallo, 35, compiled a two-year record of 15-5-1 in his two seasons at Servite. The Friars are members of the Angelus League.

WFL names title game

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — The World Football League's first championship game —to be called the World Bowl—will be played in Honolulu Nov. 29 after the conclusion of its 20-game 1974 regular season, it was announced Wednesday.

Twelve teams will play in three regional divisions and the winners of the East, Central and West and the runner-up with the best record will compete Nov. 20-21 in the semifinal playoffs.

No exhibition games are planned.

"We are ready to open camp the first week of June on all fronts," WFL president Gary Davidson said.

Sun now shining for Poly baseballers

POMONA — Just when things get really bleak for Cal Poly's baseball team, the sun comes shining through.

It has happened several times before this season and each time coach John Scolinos' team has bounced back. The latest: The Broncos had a seven-game CCAA conference losing stteak before they trimmed UC Riverside twice last Saturday for a 4-9 league record.

Poly beat Loyola, 11-3, Tuesday in a non-conference game to build the season record to 16-19.

This week the Broncos face a return engagement with Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, a team they won two of three games from earlier in the year at San Luis Obispo. Cal Poly hosts the Mustangs Friday at 2:30 p.m. in a single game and then play a doubleheader here Saturday starting at noon.

The series, in addition to giving the Broncos an opportunity to start the long climb out of the CCAA cellar, will give pitcher Vic Bernal a chance to repeat his earlier no-hitter.

Bernal, who was expected to be a standout hurler for the Broncos, now has a 2-7 record for the season. But one of the two victories was back in early March when he blanked the Mustangs, 4-0.

Bernal will start Friday and then it will be Dee King, Mike Heinen or John Riddle in the doubleheader as the starting Bronco hurlers Saturday.

"I feel the double win over Riverside will help," Scolinos said. "We're starting to hit better and if our defense just doesn't betray us we'll be all right." Costly errors by the defense have hurt Cal Poly all season.

George Allen's pre-training camp session a major test in NFL talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A special pre-training camp practice session called by Washington Redskin coach George Allen a week from today may provide the first testing ground of a possible pro football players strike later in the year.

Allen has requested Redskins quarterbacks, receivers, running backs, centers, linebackers and defensive backs to turn out for three days of drills beginning next Thursday.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, predicted none will show up because contract talks between the association and the NFL owners have collapsed.

Garvey noted that similar pre-camp sessions have been cancelled at Kansas City, Houston, New Orleans and Denver since the bargaining negotiations broke off April 4.

"We can't insist that the players refuse to attend because we're not on strike," he observed. "But we tell them it would be foolish for them to attend."

Brig Owens, player representative for the Redskins and one of those invited to the drills by Allen, said he and his teammates have discussed the situation but did not disclose whether any final decision to boycott the practices has been made.

"I don't think anybody will be there and I don't think George anticipates anybody," Garvey said.

A Redskin spokesman said Allen was proceeding with plans to hold the three-day session.

Brazil flood

70,000 homeless

FORTALEZA, Brazil (UPI) — At least 70,000 persons are homeless and at least seven persons dead from floods that continue to devastate the northeastern state of Ceara, Gov. Cesar Cals said Tuesday.

Torrential rains have continued without letup since the weekend.

Large portions of the city of Iguatu in southern Ceara were beneath the waters of the Jaguaribe river, forcing approximately 10,000 persons to flee the city.

The neighboring cities of Limoeiro do Norte, Jaguaribe and Arati were partially flooded and the road that links the southern region of Ceara to its capital, Fortaleza was closed.

The city of Alto de Rodrigues, some 25 miles from Natal, capital of the state of Rio Grande do Norte, became an island after the Arari river flooded large portions of that city.

Holland feels oil embargo pressure less

THE HAGUE (UPI) — Premier Joop den Uyl says there are mounting signs of progress towards the lifting of the Arab oil embargo against Holland.

He told newsmen recently that "the climate blowing towards us from the oil producing countries is becoming milder."

He said he based his assessment on statements by Arab oil ministers.

"There is no trace of rancor against Holland," the Dutch leader said.

Fire destroys 'wheeler used in film

VICKSBURG, Ms. (UPI) — The 73-year-old paddlewheeler Sprague which was the setting for the motion pricture "Showboat," has been destroyed by fire.

The largest sternwheeler ever built was engulfed in flames Monday night at its mooring in the Mississippi River and was called a "total loss" by Mayor Nat Bullard.

It had been converted into a tourist attraction on the waterfront and housed a museum, restaurant and theater, where "Gold in the Hills," a melodrama about life in the Gay 90's was staged each summer by the Vicksburg Little Theater.

"I felt like I was losing a member of my family," said Margie Rucker, who played the heroine Nell in the play, as she watched the smouldering hulk of the Sprague.

The vessel was built at a cost of $300,000 is 1901, but Alderman Travis Vance said the Sprague's tourist value alone exceeded $500,000.

Tax reform

Money talks loud and with big clout

By JAMES S. BYRNE
(Second in a Series)

The movement for tax reform has been around for a long time, because for a long time people have perceived our tax system as being unfair. Now, because Congress seems likely that 1974-75 will be a good year for tax reform. The question is how thoroughly will the system be reformed.

The popular demand for tax reform arises from the fact that some rich people and rich corporations pay income taxes at very low rates — if at all.

While the basic federal tax system does generally impose a heavier burden on rich than on poor or middle-income people, many rich people do not pay high taxes because of special tax benefits for which they qualify.

Those benefits were not originally intended to make life easier for rich people—but rather to get them to do some activity which the government wanted done. But the effect of those benefits is to lower some rich people's—and corporations'—taxes.

On the facce of it, the incentive case is hard for a fair-minded Congressman to handle.How can one tell how much the government gets for its incentive money? Isn't it possible that reformers would throw out the baby with the bath water?

This year, Congress must deal with a significant test case that will tell a lot about the sincerity of its attitude. The case involves the percentage depletion allowance, probably the most controversial tax preference. It permits oil producers to subtract 22 per cent of their income from oil revenues before figuring taxes on the rest.

Up until 1973, the threat to the United States was that cheap foreign oil, if allowed to come in freely, would undercut the more expensive price of domestic oil and depress domestic industry. The defense against foreign imports was the since-abandoned quota system which severely limited the supply of the cheaper foreign oil. In addition, various tax incentives—particularly the percentage depletion allowance — were enacted to increase the after-tax profits of oil companies in the hope this would make them produce more domestic oil.

In 1973 the problem changed. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) raised the price to more than double the U.S. price. This pushed up the price of domestic oil. Thus, the current average domestic price of oil is about $6.50 a barrel, about twice what it was about a year ago. The Treasury estimates that oil production will for the next few years be about the same with the high price as it would have been with the old low price.

Tre Administration's answer was to recommend a "windfall profts" tax, which really was an excise tax on the price per barrel of oil and not on profits from oil. The tax would be levied on the price per barrel over a base of $4.50 and the base would move up annually so that less and less of the price would be considered taxable as a windfall. Moreover, the "windfall" tax was designed to self-destruct in six years.

The House Ways and Means Committee has adopted the windfall profits tax but added an immediate self-destruct feature. The committee provided that the windfall tax would be rebated if the companies reinvest in the oil business (which happens to be very profitable right now).

Ways and Means also adopted a phaseout of the percentage depletion allowance but under extremely generous terms. Thus, oil companies won't pay much tax at all on the windfall arising from the more than 100 per cent increase in prices.

Clearly, the oil depletion allowance is hostage to politics—not economics. People interested in special tax benefits have a lot of money and, thus far, money talks.

It is intriguing that much of the Watergate mess is about exactly this: How loud does money talk in poltics? One gathers that as a result of Watergate some rescals are going to be thrown out but what will be the alternative?

On hopes it will be a climate in which a large portion of the public will be demanding that Congress deal with the issues on the basis of a serious concern about the public interst.

The lesson is that to get better tax laws, we need better politics.

Claremont League

Sets annual meeting

Evelyn Kaplan, president of the 14,000-member League of Women Voters of California, will address the 35th meeting of the Claremont League Saturday at Wilbur Hall on the Scripps College campus.

The business meeting from 9:45 a.m. to noon will include the adoption of the local program for the year, a report on this year's transportation survey, election of officers and small-group discussions.

Mrs. Kaplan's address, "Priorities for the Local League," will follow the 12:15 p.m. luncheon. The conference will adjourn at 2 p.m

Because many women are returning to work or school, the League is facing the same woman-power crunch of many volunteer organizations, stated Charlene Martin, Claremont League president. The Saturday conference will help the league focus on realistic goals for the next year's league program which includes voters' service projects, community education efforts, membership studies, and national, state and local positions on over 30 critical public issues.

Reservations and information about the annual meeting can be obtained by contacting Margaret Cooke, membership chairman, 626-0246, or Carol Blanshard, program chairman, 626-4850.

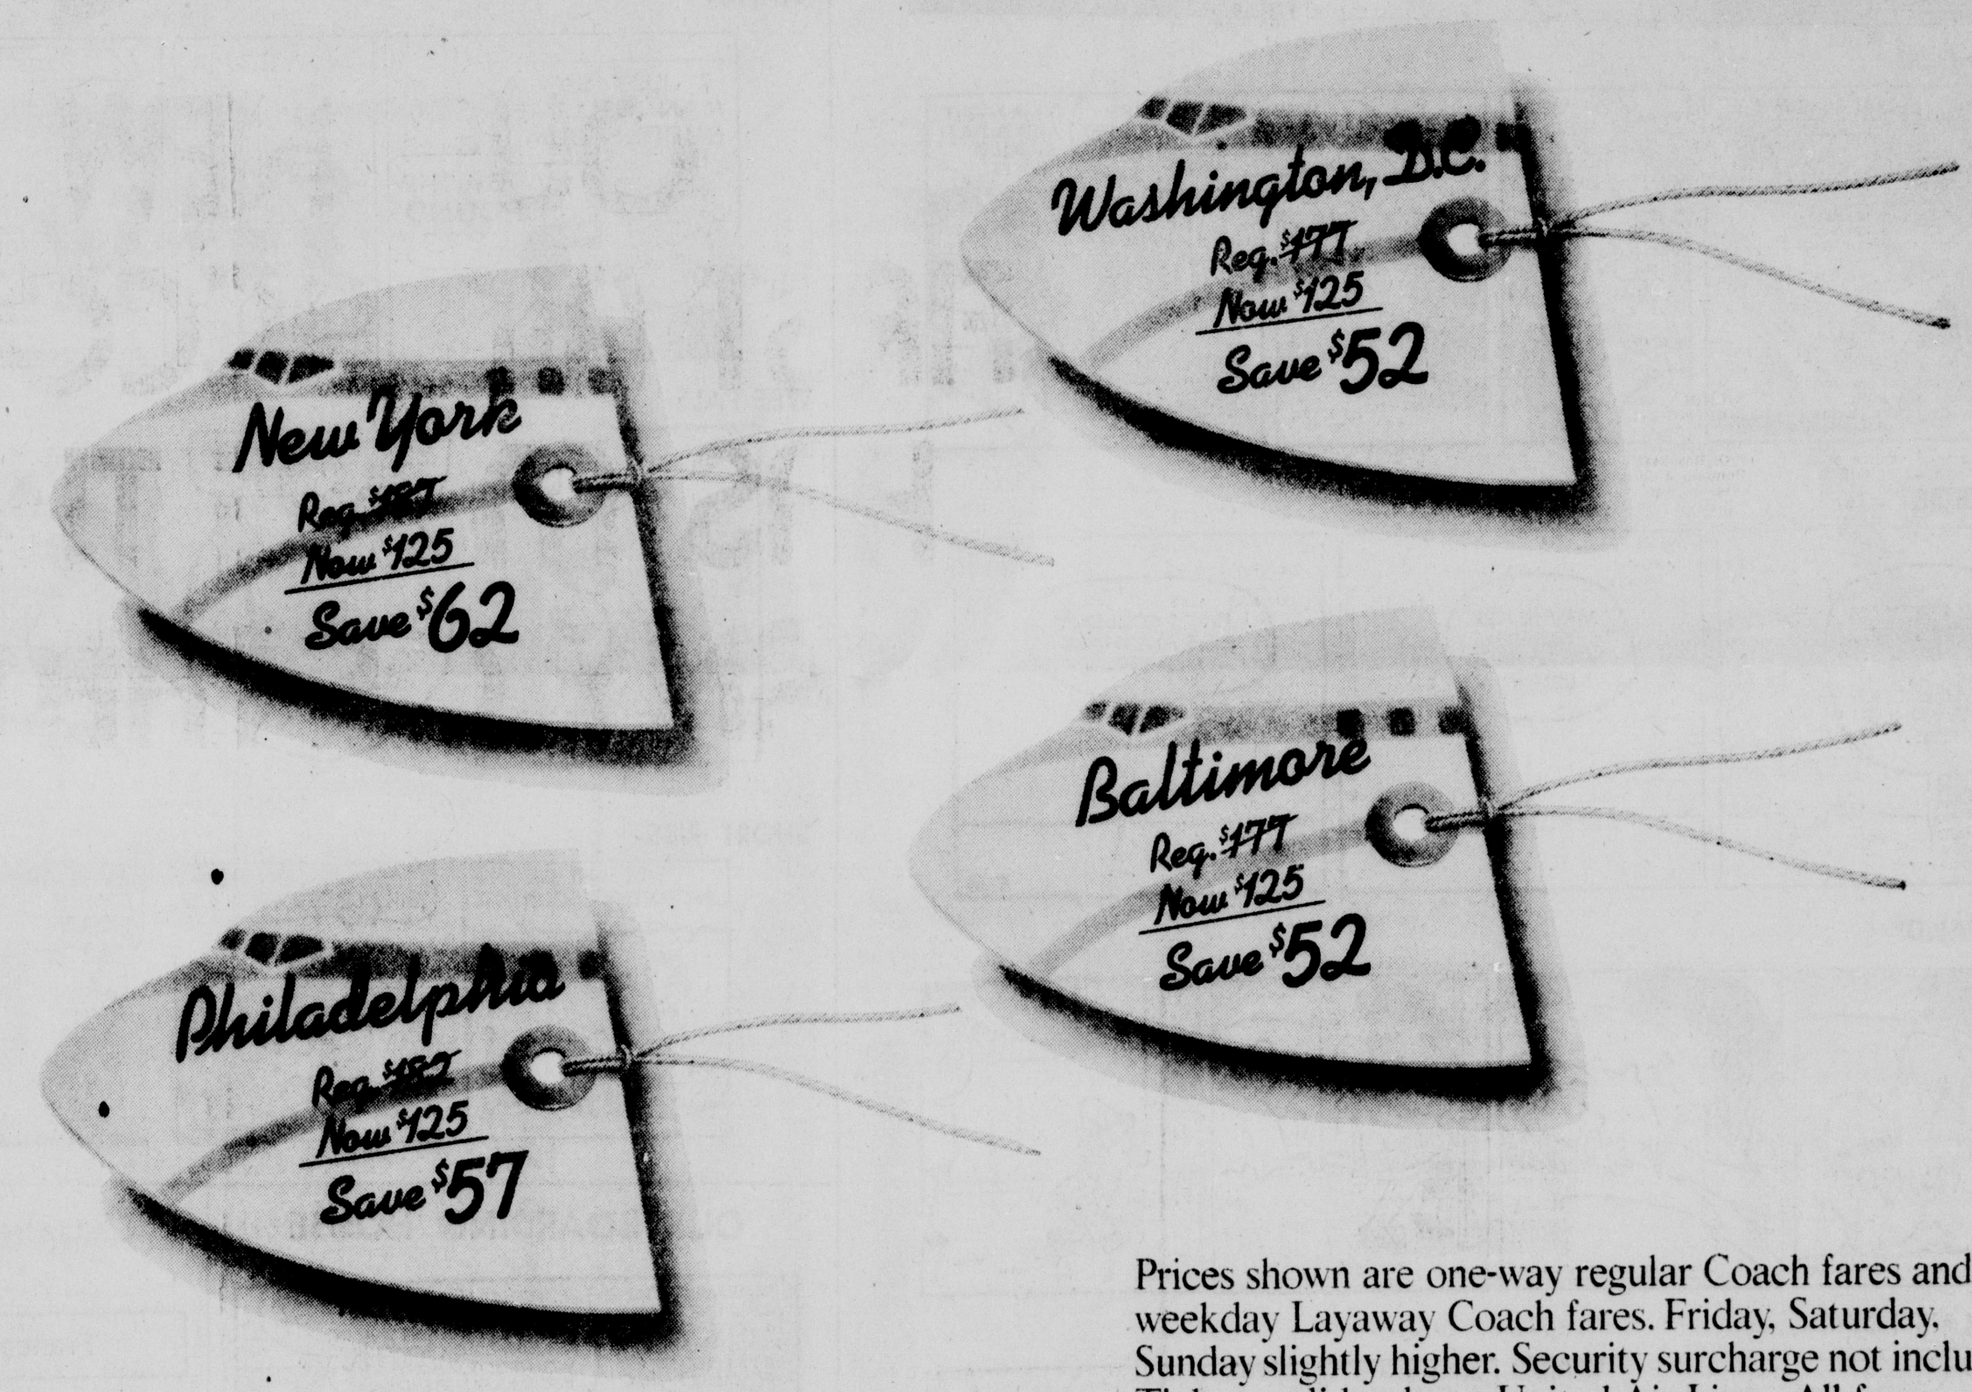
United announces "The Layaway Fare."

$20 down holds you these bargains.



Prices shown are one-way regular Coach fares and weekday Layaway Coach fares. Friday, Saturday, Sunday slightly higher. Security surcharge not included. Tickets valid only on United Air Lines. All fares subject to CAB approvals.

Think of it as a 90-day layaway. By planning ahead you can save 20 to 33% over regular Coach fares to the East Coast.

United's "Layaway Fare" can do more than just save you money. You can take care of all of your travel arrangements well in advance of your trip. And there's no minimum or maximum time you have to stay.

"Layaway Fare," one-way to the above cities, is only $125 Monday through Thursday and $140 Friday, Saturday and Sunday. And you can make round-trip arrangements, and save twice as much.

Here's how it works.

By making a $20 non-refundable deposit for each flight at least 90 days in advance of when you want to leave, we'll confirm your date of departure.

Then you have to pay the balance of your fare at least 45 days prior to departure. We'll tell you your exact flight and departure time within 30 to 45 days before you leave. Whenever possible, we'll fly you nonstop. Otherwise, it will be a convenient one-stop or connecting flight.

That's all there is to it. And if you want to, you can use your United Air Lines Travel Card to charge it.

"Layaway Fare" seats available on any given day are limited. Fares quoted are high season, effective July 8 through September 30, 1974; even lower October 1st through March 31, 1975 with certain dates unavailable during this period, subject to CAB approval.

So don't delay. Contact your Travel Agent today. Or call United at (714) 983-1721. Plan ahead and take advantage of United's "Layaway Fares" to the East Coast.

Marquetry Plus

New art gallery to open in Pomona Sunday

POMONA — Marquetry Plus, a new art gallery at 240 S. Main St., will open with a reception, exhibition and open house from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free.

Marquetry, the Old World art form of producing pictures with inlaid woods of varying tones and textures, is the media practiced by the gallery's artist-owner, Ina Penner. The "plus" in the title refers to works in various other media that will be exhibited.

As a first show the gallery is featuring Ben Carre, a man who holds many 'firsts' in the motion picture art world. Carre now devotes his time to painting pictures for at-home enjoyment, but for 64 years of his creative life he worked in the motion picture industry designing art backgrounds that made the make-believe world become real.

His 'firsts' include acting as art director for the first picture with sound, "Don Juan"; the first all-talking picture, "The Jazz Singer"; the first all-talking western made on location, "Riders of the Purple Sage"; and the first Charlie Chan picture, "The Black Camel."

His credits as art director and scenic designer range from the slapstick of "A Night at the Opera" to "The King of Kings," and include such films as "The Wizard of Oz," "Meet Me in St. Louis," and "Thirty Seconds over Tokyo."

As a scenic designer he was internationally known for his mastery of perspective on architectural backgrounds. Many films were possible only becaue he could be depended upon to reproduce, on backgrounds ranging up to 40 feet high and 100 feet long, famous buildings or structures, such as Notre Dame Cathedral or the dome of the Capitol in Washington. The English village street in "National Velvet" and the quais along the Seine and the panorama of Paris rooftops for "An American in Paris" are examples of his scenic designs.

Carre was a founding member of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences, and was one of the two art directors included in the original membership of 100. He did not cease film activity until his retirement from MGM in 1965 at the age of 82.

Carre's 11 oils and seven watercolors exhibited in the Marquetry Plus show reflect the versatility of his talent, some of the water colors illustrating his skill with architectural perspective and minutely detailed natural phenomena. The oils range from restful landscapes to oriental lanterns, to underwater fantasies of boyhood explorations along the coast near Marseilles where Carre spent summers studying with Jean Baptiste Duffaud of his native Paris.

In addition to the Carre collection and the Penner marquetry, the exhibit includes the work of a young sculptor, Larry Jochai; a spectrum of Mae Augarten's creative fabric techniques, a sample of unique pen and ink drawings by Kathrynne Hyde, and the fine jewelry of Shirley and Gene Phillips.

Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays, and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.. Saturdays.

Composer to lecture at Pomona

CLAREMONT — Composer Ernst Krenek will discuss, illustrate and compare two versions of one of his recent compositions in Thatcher Music Building, Pomona College, at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday. Admission is free.

Krenek will talk about a composition he wrote in 1972 for oboist Heinz Holliger and Holliger's wife, Ursula, a harpist. The work exists in two forms: "Kitharaulos," for oboe, harp and orchestra, and "Aulokithara," for oboe, harp and electronic tape. This unusual composition was premiered by the Holligers at the 1972 Holland Festival, and Krenek will have tapes of this performance to illustrate his lecture.

Krenek, one of the important living composers, was born in 1900 in Vienna, where he came under the influence of Mahler, and later Berg, Schoenberg and Webern. He also became associated with Hindemith in Germany before coming to the United States in 1937.

Krenek achieved international success in 1927 with his jazz-influenced opera "Jonny spielt auf," the story of a jazz fiddler who sweeps the world. The premiere created a sensation, and the opera was soon translated into 18 languages and performed throughout the world. A brand of cigarettes was even named after it.

Krenek's output includes 10 other operas, five symphonies, numerous concertos, six piano sonatas, and music for chorus and chamber ensembles.

HEAD-ON FATAL TO TWO

Spectators view two cars which collided head-on on Grove Avenue near Merrill Avenue in the Chino area in which two persons were killed. One driver reportedly slashed his wrists after the accident in an apparent suicide attempt, said highway patrolmen. The two men killed were state employes.

Young Upland cyclist dies in bike spill

Three persons were killed Wednesday in two Pomona Valley area traffic accidents. One involved a two-car head-on collision, and the second an Upland motorcyclist who struck a dirt embankment.

Both were investigated by the California Highway Patrol.

Two state employes died from injuries received when their sedan collided with another car on Grove Avenue near Merrill Avenue in the Chino area. The accident occurred about 2:30 p.m.

They are Hufford Allen, 62, of Calimesa, a field safety engineer for the State Division of Industrial Safety, and William Newell Merritt, 56, of 4932 El Monlino St., Riverside, district representative for the State Department of Housing and Community Development.

Both were riding in Allen's own vehicle. They were pronounced dead at Chino Community Hospital.

The second driver, Jim Boschma, 17, of 1340 Adam Park Drive, Covina, was treated at the Chino hospital and later transferred to the San Bernardino County Hospital.

In the cycle accident, Steven Darryl Jordan, 18, of 276 Benson Ave., Upland, suffered fatal injuries when his motorcycle hit a dirt embankment on Mt. Baldy Road near Shinn Road in the Mt. Baldy area. The accident occurred about 5:40 p.m.

He was driving south on Mt. Baldy Road and attempted to pass another cycle on a curve when his motorcyle went down on its right side, skidded off the roadway and across a dirt "turnout" before hitting the embankment, said officers.

He was transported to Pomona Valley Community Hospital, where doctors pronounced him dead.

Richard Duarte, rider of the other cycle, said he and Jordan were riding their cycles when Jordan attempted to pass him on the right.

Duarte said he glanced over in time to see Jordan sliding on his side.

Boschma was driving north on Grove and started to pass another car when he saw Allen's vehicle coming toward him in the opposing direction, said officers.

Boschma swerved back into the northbound lane, where his car struck the rear of an auto operated by Donald Harold German, 19, of 6691 Riverside Drive, Chino, patrolmen reported.

The collision caused Boschma's vehicle to veer back into the southbound lane, where it collided with Allen's auto, said officers.

Two passengers in Boschma's auto received minor cuts and bruises. Christopher Copeland, 16, and Thomas

Leads police to graves

Bible-toting sailor held in slaying of 3 teen-age girls in South Carolina

FOLLY BEACH, S.C. (UPI— A Bible-toting sailor was charged late Wednesday night with the murder of three teen-age girls whose bodies were buried in sand dunes near this quiet resort town.

Police said Richard R. Valenti, 30, led officers to the graves of two of the girls about a block from the house where he lived with his wife and three small children.

Valenti, stationed aboard the submarine tender USS Petrel at the Charleston Naval Base, was charged in nine counts, including three for murder and one for assault. Charleston County Police Chief Paul F. Hartline said Valenti made a statement to police after being picked up on the assault charge Wednesday afternoon.

Hartline said Valenti then led police, carrying lanterns and flashlights, to the grave sites Wednesday night. A search uncovered the bodies under two feet of sand, about 30 feet above the Atlantic Ocean's high tide mark.

Officers said Valenti asked to be allowed to return home to pick up his Bibles before he was taken to jail, and he carried two of them with him to his cell. Police said Valenti was from Massachusetts, but no hometown was immediately available. He had been in Charleston about two years.

Two of the bodies were in the same grave, a few feet from where the body of Mary Earline Bunch was found Tuesday. She was the 16-year-old daughter of former Folly Beach Police Chief Julian Bunch.

The two girls were identified tentatively as Alexis Ann Latimer, 13, and Sherri Jan Clark, 14, missing since May 23, 1973. Both were bound with rope, as was the Bunch girl, who was found after a resident told police his dog acted strangely whenever it passed a stretch of dunes on the eastern end of Folly Beach.

After the Bunch girl was found, police suspected more bodies might be in the dunes and brought in bulldozers, which dug into the sand all Wednesday without success.

Admiral opposed involvement

Ellsberg overruled him on Vietnam issue, says Zumwalt

MEDFORD, Mass. (UPI) — Adm. Elmo Zumwalt says he opposed involvement of U.S. ground troops in Vietnam in the early '60s but was overruled by Daniel Ellsberg.

Zumwalt, chief of naval operations, said Wednesday that when he was a lower echelon naval officer in late 1963 he wrote a report stating "our national interest would not be served by becoming militarily involved" in Vietnam.

"The superior that overruled my recommendation was named Daniel Ellsberg," Zumwalt told an audience at Tufts University. The admiral said Ellsberg wrote a report of his own recommending that U.S. ground forces be committed to Vietnam.

Zumwalt said he wrote that if the United States did become involved more deeply anyway, he recommended "massive bombing" of military-related targets in North Vietnam and limitation of ground troops to advisers.

Ellsberg joined the Defense Department in 1964, working on decision-making involving Vietnam. An early supporter of the war, he later grew disenchanted and he made the famous Pentagon Papers public in 1971.

Zumwalt said one negative result of the Vietnam war was the development of an antimilitaristic spirit in the U.S. which resulted in the reduction of the percentage of the federal budget for military purposes.

Also, he said, while the United States was spending "up to $30 billion" a year to wage war in Vietnam, the Soviet Union was spending money on developing new weapons. He said the Soviet Navy now has four times as many ships as does the U.S. Navy.

Zumwalt also said U.S. sailors had proved "remarkably adept" in turning over their military duties to the South Vietnamese. He said the Soviets had not learned a similar lesson, as shown by their "heavy-handed" efforts to help the Egyptians in the Middle East.

Lottery winner had strong hunch, quit job before he won

BOSTON (UPI) — Louis M. Reny had a winning feeling about the $1 million Massachusetts lottery.

The feeling got stronger as the day of the drawing approached, and Reny, 54' became so confident that he told his supervisor at the Monsanto Co. of Springfield, Mass., where he has worked for 15 years, he was quitting.

He showed up at the Sheraton-Boston Hotel, where the winning lottery tickets were drawn Tuesday night, with a horseshoe in one pocket and two sets of Catholic Rosary beads in the other, and left with the $1 million grand prize.

Prof says new math all talk, no action

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Too many children who learn the "new math" do poorly in the real world, a university professor said Wednesday.

Dr. Roy Dubisch, professor of mathematics at the University of Washington, said too many "poorly trained teachers" think it is important to talk about math, as opposed to having pupils practice working math problems like the real ones they will encounter later in life.

Nixon avoids Watergate in DAR address

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon said today that America must regain its sense of national destiny and lead the world's search for peace.

In a patriotic type speech to 4,500 members of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) at their "Continental Congress" in colorful, flag-bedecked Constitution Hall, the President recounted the wars of this century, and said the nation must meet the challenge "to provide the leadership so the next generation can be the first generation in a century that does not have a war."

The President spoke for 25 minutes, concentrating entirely on the nation's leadership in world peace efforts. He did not refer to Watergate, the House impeachment investigation or domestic politics.

"There is no other nation in the free world today, among the industrial powers that can assume the leadership," he said. "The peace of the world is in our hands."

Good or bad news?

Researcher sees 'pill' for men within 5 years

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — For those interested in sex, there's good news and bad news today.

Good news for men who are waiting and can wait a little longer, for your PILL.

Bad news for parents of teen-agers.

Dr. C. Alvin Paulsen, a researcher from the University of Washington, said at a national meeting of doctors on planned parenthood and world population Wednesday that "the pill" may be ready for men within five years.

And along came a government official, Dr. Louis M. Hellman, who warned American moms and dads they had better join in "realization that we live now with an openly and actively sexual generation of teen-agers."

"Sure, sex is a family matter," the deputy assistant secretary for population affairs in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare added in a news conference.

"Parents are rightfully concerned about the furor over sex education in schools and such. But do they want their children to learn sex in the gutter? Can they do it alone?"

Hellman said the public should get away from "the old feeling that fear and ignorance of sex has kept women from being sexually active."

Paulsen, 50, is a professor of internal medicine who has been testing 100 volunteer males with a combination of the male potency hormone testosterone and the artificial hormone danazol via injections and orally since mid-1973.

Paulsen said that "a reversible method of male contraception" has not been perfected yet.

"I hope we can have something within five years. Some want the pill. Some might prefer injections. We would like to have lots of options," he told UPI.

"We started the first administration of the combinations last March," he said. "The men are married and unmarried, between 19 and 35 years old, and the ones who tested out 'safe' have not impregnated any women."

He said that one of the brightest parts of his research is that although the combination tested so far does cause one to put on some weight, it does not carry even the minute chance of blood clots which have cut into use of the female pill.

Hearst: Saxbe speechmaking

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Randolph A. Hearst says Attorney General William B. Saxbe has a right to his opinion, but when Saxbe calls the newspaperman's kidnaped daughter one of a group of "common criminals," it is no more than "speechmaking."

"As far as I'm concerned, it's speculation at this point," said Hearst, president and editor of The San Francisco Examiner, whose daughter, Patricia, was identified by the FBI as among nine robbers who took $10,960 from a bank branch Monday.

"It's speechmaking," Hearst said Wednesday. "Saxbe has the right to think what he thinks, and I also have the right."

Saxbe told a Washington, D.C., news conference earlier in the day he felt Miss Hearst was an active participant in the holdup. "This group we're talking about are common criminals," he said, including Miss Hearst "as part of it."

ACLU files lawsuit on jail conditions

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — About 6,000 prisoners in county jails in New Jersey are living "under truly brutal circumstances," the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) has charged in a lawsuit filed in behalf of the inmates.

A hearing has been set for May 3.

The ACLU said Wednesday the grievances include censorship of mail, sparse diets, violations of the health code, overcrowding, rats in the jails, and religious and racial discrimination.

Workers' pension bill falters in committee

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Barraged by a phalanx of labor and business lobbyists, "reform" legislation to regulate the $20 billion private pension industry has faltered in a Senate committee.

The bill, aimed at guaranteeing workers they will receive the pensions have earned, encountered stiff opposition Wednesday during a more than three-hour hearing in the Business and Professions Committee.

Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, author of the measure, decided to delay a vote for two weeks in order to firm up support for the proposal.

Warning that thousands of persons have already experienced "frustration, bitterness and tragedy" when pension expectations did materialize, Deukmejian said additional "thousands of California workers may never collect one cent from their pension plans."

Sen. Alfred H. Song, D-Monterey Park, added, "The employer can get away with murder today."

The labor union and business representatives argued the bill would lead to reduced benefits for retired workers by increasing the costs of pension plans. They also said the problem of pension abuses should be left to the federal government.

Among other things, the bill (SB1800) would require partial vesting after three years and full vesting after 10. Vesting means that person would receive at least some pension.

Participants in a pension plan would have to be informed annually of their retirement status. "Full funding" of the plan's liabilities would be required to insure payment of promised benefits.

The bill would also require beneficiaries of a pension plan to be told all the details of the plan in "easy to understand" language.

Supported by the Reagan administration, the measure would affect about 3 million workers and pension plans holding $20 billion in workers' funds, Deukmejian said.

He introduced the bill after seven hearings around the state last year. The senator said the hearings brought out the case of one man who quit in a salary dispute after 24 years with a firm but lost all his retirement benefits.

Hosts of similar cases were cited in a 41-page report stemming from the hearings. The report was released earlier this year.

Leading the labor opposition to the measure was the California Federation of Labor, AFL-CIO.

Speaking on behalf of the group, Richard Mansfield estimated the bill would increase the cost of pension plans by 30 to 50 per cent.

If contributions were not increased, he said there then would have to be a reduction in benefits.

Also opposing the bill were the painters, hodcarriers, carpenters and laborers unions and the California Bankers Association, the California Builders Council and Pacific Telephone.

The only labor union in support Wednesday was the United Auto workers Union. Other support came from the California Rural Legal Assistance group, the Western Center on Law and Poverty and the National Senior Citizens Law Center, both of Los Angeles.

The labor groups said they preferred to wait for a federal pension bill. Two such measures have been stalled in a conference committee since January.

BATTLEFIELD CONCERT

An Israeli army string quartet performs music by Mozart during lull in artillery duel against Syrian gun crews on grassy plain in Israeli occupied Syria. Tank and gun battles went into 38th day today.

'We mean business,' says Rodino; want those tapes

WASHINGTON (UPI) Rep. Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said today "we mean business" in demanding tape recordings of 42 presidential conversations. A refusal to fully honor the panel's subpoena could be considered an impeachable offense, he said.

The committee, which Rodino said will begin hearing evidence in its impeachment probe about May 7, issued a subpoena last week giving the White House until April 25 to turn over taped conversations between President Nixon and various top aides in Feburary, March and April of last year.

The White House has promised to supply a "conclusive and comprehensive" answer by early next week, but some aides have indicated that conversations dealing with national security and non-Watergate matters would be screened out.

Rodino was asked during an interview on the NBC-TV Today Show if the reported White House editing strategy was satisfactory to the committee.

"No," he replied. "This would mean that the White House would be making the final determination. This could not be a proper inquiry, a comprehensive inquiry unless we were to make the determination as to what is necessary. The committee in the last instance is the determing factor. That's the way it's going to be."

Asked what kind of message the committee was attempting to give the White House, Rodino replied:

"We have to indicate quite strongly that we mean business and that the House has given us this authority and therefore this would be a refusal not only to comply with the request of the committee but with the House of Representatives as the sole power to inquire in impeachment proceedings."

He asserted: "We have issued a subpoena. It's neccessary that the White House comply because it's in the interest of answering a nagging question that is before the American people. Unless this is done, it is going to be considered by the committee as a refusal on the part of the White House and could be considered as a possible crime of impeachment."

Rodino said "the only way that the committee inquiry can be satisfied" is if it has a hand in screening out irrelevant material in the tapes.

Rodino would not speculate on what action the committee might take if the White House did not fully comply with the subponea. Some other committee members have noted however that the committee has no real power to enforce the subpoena.

Looking for Zebra suspect

A face in S.F. crowds

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Mayor Joseph L. Alioto, calling it an "extraordinary situation," said police will stop many citizens today for questioning in a rash of random street killings.

"We are going to be stopping people in San Francisco who have a certain profile. We're going to stop a lot of people," Alioto said Wednesday after police issued composite drawings of a man suspected in the slaying of 12 persons since last November.

"This is an extraordinary situation and it calls for extreme measures," the mayor added.

All of the victims —12 dead and six wounded —have been white and their assailants have been described by witnesses as black.

"We ask the cooperation of citizens and we want to assure them that we will be mindful of their constitutional rights," Alioto said. He said police have "blanketed this town with auto patrols and walking patrols" to carry out what is known as "Operation Zebra."

Police Chief Donald Scott said that only persons who match the description in the police drawings will be stopped. The pictures depicted a black, thin-faced man in a knit cap, 20 to 30 years old and between five feet, nine inches, and six feet tall.

Alioto said it was "a police action without parallel in San Francisco history" and was necessary to end the string of apparently motiveless killings.

"I want the people of San Francisco to understand that this is not a racial issue," Alioto said, "but it is a blunt fact that the victims are white and our description says the suspect is black.

"With this police action, as with other things, all we are trying to do in this life is hold tragedy to a minimum."

Police Capt. Mortimer McInerney, chief of the bureau of inspectors, said that three or four men —"although it could go higher than that" —might have been responsible for the killings.

The latest fatal victim was Nelson T. Shields IV, 23, Greenville, Del., who was shot three times in the back Tuesday night in the Ingleside District near San Francisco State University.

Police said they were sure Shields was the victim of the Zebra attackers because shell casings found at the scene matched those found in the areas where the others were shot.

McInerney warned city residents to avoid "taking after dinner strolls in any part of the city.

"I'm not saying they should stay home—we don't want a ghost town between seven and 10 o'clock—but, if they have to go out, it should be for a reason, and they should try to be with one or two other people."

The officer said the attacks occurred generally before 10 p.m.

Vets announce plans for 2nd bonus march

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The American Veterans Movement, which staged a three-week sit-in at a U.S. senator's office, Wednesday announced plans for a second "bonus march" on Washington like the one that brought on clashes between veterans and Army troops in 1932.

"Just as in 1932, when our fathers and grandfathers marched for their rights into Washington, D.C., we must march again," Ron Kovic, spokesman for the group, told a news conference.

He appealed to veterans throughout the nation, of all ages from all wars, to join the march, which he said would begin on Flag Day, June 14, and end with a rally in Washington July 4.

Three killed...

Luerton, 16, both of Covina, were treated at Chino hospital.

Following the accident, Boschma slashed his wrists at the scene in an apparent suicide attempt, said investigators. They restrained him and sent him to the hospital.

German, whose car continued in the northbound lane after the initial collision, wasn't seriously hurt.

He told officers he had talked to those in Boschma's auto and driven north on Grove. He later looked in his rear view mirror and saw Boschma coming behind him.

"He tried to pass me and the next thing I know, I'm crawling out of my car," he added.

Ehrlichman says report not true

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — John Ehrlichman has termed "false" and "silly" a newspaper report that he is disenchanted with President Nixon, less friendly with H.R. Haldeman and plans to settle for a guilty plea to reduced charges in his Watergate-related court cases.

At his first news conference since last August, the President's former domestic adviser read a statement denying the report in Wednesday's Los Angeles Times, which quoted a "person who has been close" to Ehrlichman as saying he might settle for reduced charges and testify for the prosecution.

Stans denies all at trial; talks of wife's illness

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans testified today that "on my oath I never did anything to help Robert Vesco in any way and I never asked anyone to do anything to help Robert Vesco."

He flatly denied that he had conspired with former Attorney General John N. Mitchell to impede a federal investigation of the international financier in return for a $200,000 cash contribution by Vesco to the 1972 Nixon campaign.

He also denied lying to the grand jury that indicted the two former Nixon cabinet members.

Testifying calmly but emphatically in a soft voice as the end of the Mitchell-Stans trial neared, the former Midwestern accountant and self-made millionaire also told the jury of the critical illness of his wife, Kathleen, during much of the time covered by the indictment, detailing how he had restricted his work schedule in order to spend all weekends and all evenings except Monday and Tuesday with her in Walter Reed Hospital in Washington.

Mrs. Stans contracted a rare blood disease in August, 1972, and was near death at times until mid-December.

She returned to the hospital in January 1973 with hepatitis and returned again in May with another form of hepatitis.

Federal judge Lee P. Gagliardi informed the nine-man, three-woman jury that he was admitting the testimony about Mrs. Stans "solely as indicating his (Stans') state of mind at the time." Defense attorney Walter J. Bonner also had said he wanted the testimony presented to show that Stans was preoccupied with his wife's illness when he testified to the grand jury in March and April of 1973.

Nixon outlines 'new dialogue' for Latin American ministers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon Wednesday night outlined for the foreign ministers of 24 Latin American nations his administration's view of the hemisphere's "new dialogue," initiated in Mexico City earlier this year.

"The agenda for the new dialogue is peace, political freedom and economic growth," Nixon said at the black-tie dinner at the White House.

He also reaffirmed an earlier pledge that the United States will not intervene in the domestic affairs of other hemispheric nations and promised continued U.S. support in trade matters, economic aid, science and technology and energy.

"Our friendships with Latin America are a center pillar in the structure of peace we are trying to build," Nixon said.

The future role of the Castro regime in Cuba within the hemisphere did not come up during the first day of meetings.

The only remaining point on today's agenda, "General Panorama of the Relations between the United States and Latin America," is vague enough for almost any outstanding issue, including Cuba, to be raised.

That happened at the previous meeting in Mexico City two months ago. It may happen again today and will surely occur when Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and the other foreign ministers reconvene in Atlanta Friday as the Fourth General Assembly of the Organization of American States.

The ministers dealt with five of the six points on the agenda during the first three-hour working session Wednesday afternoon.

At the Treasury

Change in style, but little change in policy expected

WASHINGTON (UPI — The staid, drab Treasury Department may be in for a change in style as energy chief William E. Simon takes over as treasury secretary from George P. Shultz.

But little change in philosophy is expected. Both Shultz, who is returning to private life, and Simon, who was nominated by President Nixon Wednesday to replace him, are staunch free-marketeers. Both favor the smallest possible government intrusion in the economy.

Nixon named Simon's deputy, John C. Sawhill, to succeed him as head of the Federal Energy Office (FEO.

Like Shultz, Simon sees the upward spiral in the cost of living as the biggest economic problem facing the nation.

"It's going to be our number one avenue of concentration," Simon told UPI.

But Simon, who has gained the reputation of a hardcharging administrator with a quick temper and penchant for publicity, will bring a different flavor to the job than the softspoken, academic Shultz.

"There are obviously going to be differences in style," Simon acknowledged. "There has to be between two people."

The new secretary, assuming he is confirmed by the Senate, will inherit only a portion of Shultz's vast duties as chief economic policy maker. A White House announcement said Nixon will himself assume chairmanship of the Council on Economic Policy, which Shultz headed.

Simon indicated that suits him fine. "There was too much on the plate of the Treasury Department," he said.

Simon, now 46, was making millions as a Wall Street investment banker when he was appointed undersecretary of the treasury in January, 1973. He kept that title after he became energy chief in December. He was Shultz' personal choice to succeed as treasury secretary.

Shultz, former business school dean at the University of Chicago, announced several weeks ago he would leave in May. He is the last holdover from Nixon's original cabinet, which he joined as labor secretary in 1969.

Sawhill, 37, a former college professor with a doctorate in economics, told reporters he will give the President a blueprint before next November on how the United States can become self-sufficient in energy by the 1980s.

Pope is concerned

VATICAN CITY (UPI — Pope Paul VI expressed concern Wednesday over civil strife in Northern Ireland and Cambodia.

The 76-year-old pontiff made his remarks to pilgrims from those two countries who attended his weekly general audience.

The Vatican did not release the text of his remarks, but participants in the audience said he told visitors from St. Patrick's Grammar School in Belfast he was very sensitive to conditions in their city and prayed "that peace may console in prosperity the land called Ulster."

Rocky, Nixon meet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller held an unannounced 90-minute meeting with President Nixon Wednesday in the Oval Office, the White House said.

Tom DeCair, a press assistant, said that Rockefeller discussed with Nixon the progress of his work on the National Commission on Critical Choices.

"He comes in periodically to talk about this," said DeCair. He was unable to say whether politics and Michigan's 8th district defeat were discussed.

Tirade in court

LONDON (UPI) — Singer Janie Jones was hustled out of court Wednesday when she shouted abuse at the judge.

"This is not a court of law, it's a joke!" Miss Jones shouted. "You are a biased judge."

Judge Allan K. Hamilton was just about to begin his summing up in the case against Miss Jones, being tried on 10 charges of controlling prostitutes. The charges resulted from an alleged payola scandal involving payments of sex and money to British Broadcasting Corp. (BBC), executives to persuade them to play certain phonograph records.

Humpty Dumpty

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — Sen. James Buckley, R-N.Y., told a Hofstra University student audience Wdnesday that he does not believe President Nixon will ever be able to regain his pre-Watergate popularity.

"I don't believe that you can put Humpty Dumpty back together again," Buckley said.

Buckley said that he has been reecently receiving more support for his suggestion that Nixon resign.

Originally, he said the mail he received was about "four-to-one" in opposition to his call for resignation, but the letters are now running about "fifty-fifty."

Burton in hospital

HOLLYWOOD (UPI — Richard Burton is reported doing well and should be out of a hospital "in a week or 10 days," a spokesman for the actor said.

Burton is being treated for influenza and tracheo-bronchitis at St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica.

A spokesman for the actor said he completed his film role in "The Klansman" on location in Oroville, Calif., during the weekend and entered the hospital Sunday.

"Richard is doing well and should be out of the hospital in a week or 10 days," the spokesman said.

She went for her regular monthly check up at Groote Shuur Hospital, Cape Town, and a bakery presented her with a huge birthday cake, an annual donation to Miss Fisher, 43.

Industry decision postponed

San Dimas planners bow to citizen fight for park

By LENORE WALLACE
P-B Staff Writer

SAN DIMAS — The planning staff Wednesday night took the steam out of a protest hearing by offering to give residents around San Dimas Elementary School what they want for the neighborhood.

This includes the use of the entire five-acre school site for a park and the rezoning of industrial land in the neighborhood to residential.

The park plan got the unanimous approval of the Planning Commission but members were urable to reach a decision about the change from industrial zoning to residential zoning which would mean the removal of two industries in the neighborhood, one that has been in existence since 1948.

The commission decided to hold over for additional study this area that is bounded by Commerical Street between Cataract Avenue and Monte Vista Avenue and south of Railway Street. The commission will meet May 7 at 6 p.m. for a field trip to the site. The public hearing on the issue was reopened and testimony will again be heard on the subject at 8 that same night at City Hall before the commission arrives at a decision.

Residents near the two industrial plants, Cornett Manufacturing Co., a company that manufactures sawdust collection systems from sheet metal, and Greyhound Storage Warehouse complained that the two industrial uses were not compatible with the residential neighborhood and also declared that they did not want any more industrial uses in their neighborhood in the future.

They cited noise pollution as the biggest problem with Cornett Manufacturing and said large trucks loading items blocked the sidewalk in front of the Greyhound Warehouse Storage.

Planning Director Mark Goldberg explained that the two industries would have 25 years to discontinue the use and relocate but that they could not expand either plants during this period.

Those protesting the industrial land use included Joe Shepherd, Wes Edmundson and William Coulter.

Speaking in favor of the continued use of industrial land designation in the Commercial Street area included Mr. and Mrs. Mike Cornett, E. C. Hartman and former San Dimas Mayor Stanley Plummer.

Mr. and Mrs. Cornett said they were trying to improve the problems that annoy nearby residents. A new building is now under construction at the site that will eliminate the noise and will screen the operation from neighbors, they said.

Plummer said he felt industrial use is appropriate for the neighborhood because of the three railroads that are adjacent to the properties. He also pointed out that the houses near the plants are more than 50 years old.

Questioned by a neighborhood resident in the audience, Plummer said he had no immediate plans to expand his lumber company that is located one block east of the special planned development area and is located in the creative growth zone.

Covina home looted of stamps and coins

COVINA — Burglars, entering through an open bedroom window, burglarized a Covina home during the day Wednesday and escaped with over $14,000 in collector's items and jewelry.

The thieves entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald E. Gourley, 20540 Exbury Place, while the residents were at work, said sheriff's deputies.

Among the more than 60 items taken from the home were collections of coins and medals, and stamps valued at about $10,000. Also taken were television sets, radios, cameras and a handgun.

Detectives investigating the case were able to obtain only a vague description of a man seen outside the house by a neighbor.

Fire bomb damages store in Ontario

ONTARIO — Two molotov cocktails were thrown at the rear exit of the Stockwell and Binney Office Products store at 114 N. Euclid Ave. Wednesday night, causing a fire and thousands of dollars damage to the building and its contents.

Police and firemen Wednesday night said they found an unexploded molotov cocktail fashioned out of a gallon wine bottle and a wick lying in the alley outside of the rear exit. They also found evidence of another which was thrown at the building.

Police reported that the owner of the building, Benjamin L. Cutter, 65, who lives in an upstairs apartment, discovered that someone, just prior to the fire, had soldered shut his car door and padlocks on two chain fences in an adjacent parking lot.

Police and firemen were called to the fire at 8:49 p.m. Fire Capt. Norman Stolz said when his engine company arrived it found the rear hallway in the building completely engulfed in flames. The fire had worked its way down into the basement flooring and the large building was filled with smoke.

Cutter told firemen that he was watching television in his apartment when he heard the fire units arriving. He went outside and was informed that the building was on fire.

Cutter said he tried to move his car from the adjacent parking lot and found that the doors had been soldered shut. Police and firemen asked Cutter to unlock the chain fence in the parking lot so fire units could pass. The padlocks on the chain fences had also been soldered, and firemen had to cut the chain.

Police and firemen reported that Cutter had been the victim of numerous acts of vandalism in the past, and had been forced to block off the parking lot on the corner of Euclid Avenue and Holt Boulevard at night with chain fences. Police and firemen said they were uncertain if there was a relationship between Wednesday night's vandalism on Cutter's car and fences and the fire in his building.

Firemen reported that the fire caused an estimated $3,000 damage to the building and an as yet unknown amount of damage to the contents of the store.

UPLAND — A 31-year-old Ontario man was struck over the head several times with a hammer and robbed by two men early Tuesday morning remained hospitalized today.

Wearing Brown of 210 N. Fern Ave., Ontario, a cook at the Mt. Baldy Lodge, was listed in satisfactory condition this morning at San Bernardino County Hospital with head injuries. Brown wandered into a yard seeking help from an Upland resident on 20th Street about 9:30 a.m., Tuesday and later told police that he was hit over the head with a hammer and robbed about 2:30 a.m.

Brown said he was at an Ontario bar Monday night. When the bar closed on Tuesday morning he said he asked two men, both described as Caucasians with long blond hair, to drive him to Mt. Baldy Lodge so he could go to work. He said he gave the men $3 for the ride and they left the bar.

Brown said en route to Mt. Baldy, one of the men suddenly produced a hammer and began hitting him on the head. He said he lost consciousness, but could remember the men taking his wallet and pushing him out of the car and into a wash near 20th Street and Campus Avenue in Upland.

Both of Brown's assailants were further described as being in their early 20s, one about 6 feet tall, 165 pounds, wearing a blue shirt and Levis, and the other about 5 feet 10, 125 to 130 pounds wearing a blue denim outfit. Brown said the men were driving a 1966 or 1967 white Chevrolet with a red interior.

When care means everything

There are times when care, and care alone, means everything. That's why at Rose Hills we are not just another mortuary. We stress the importance of care and understanding above all else.

It was a care for beauty that led to the creation, more than a half century ago, of the world's most naturally beautiful memorial park.

It was an understanding of people's needs that led us to establish a mortuary. We offer every needed service — mortuary, cemetery, chapels, flower shops, mausoleums and crematory — all at one convenient location.

Care . . . and understanding. At Rose Hills, we think they mean a lot.

Biggest opportunities in white collar jobs

Million and a half jobs expected to open up in California by end of 1975

By JOHN R. BALZAR

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Clerical and other types of white collar jobs will offer the greatest employment opportunities for Californians during the next three years, according to a new government report.

A total of 1.45 million jobs are expected to open up between now and 1975, 350,000 because of employment expansion and 900,000 due to workers leaving their jobs. Nearly a third of the total was for clerks.

The report was prepared by the Employment Development Department and released Tuesday to help educators, counselors and economists "make decisions" about the economy and employment opportunities.

It said the number of white collar job openings during the next three years will be more than double the opportunities in blue collar work. The biggest single category was clerical and related employment with 378,000 openings anticipated.

White collar opportunities as a whole are expected to total 902,000 job openings. Blue collar work was forecast to provide 299,000 jobs, followed by openings for service workers totalling 224,000.

The comprehensive, 125-page study was based on 1970 census figures and contained projections from 1972 through 1975. During that period employment in the state was expected to climb from 8.2 million persons to 8.75 million.

Generally, the report concluded, the best job opportunities will be in "traditional occupations," such as secretarial and kindred jobs, with "exciting" and "appealing" vocations offering few openings.

"Many occupations which are very appealing to students in search of interesting careers may continue to have very limited labor market value for an indefinite future," said the report. Typical examples were marine biologists and environmental pollution specialists.

Besides general projections, the report, titled "California Manpower," gave job-by-job breakdowns on opportunities for about 400 separate occupations, ranging from airline stewardesses to stone cutters and a classification called "hucksters and peddlers."

In many instances, it offered salary averages for specific jobs, based on 1969 figures. Dentists were among the highest paid category, earning an average of more than $15,000 a year, while janitors and secretaries averaged something over $6,000.

Other white collar openings were forecast this way:

Professional and technical workers, 252,000 new openings; managers, 132,000 openings and sales workers, 140,000 openings.

In the blue collar field, craftsmen, 111,000 openings; machine operators, 157,000 openings, mostly for those handling precision machinery, and non-farm laborers, 31,000 openings.

An expected 16,000 openings were forecast for farmers and farm workers.

The report suggested the need for 529 actors; 5,171 hucksters and peddlers; 3,085 reporters and editors, 37 stone cutters; 4 lumberjacks, and 2,092 airline stewardesses.

CHP gasoline consumption is down 10%

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The California Highway Patrol has reduced use of gasoline in its vehicles by 10 per cent because of the high cost of the fuel, according to Commissioner Walter Pudinski.

Pudinsky said he has instituted gas-conserving practices to cut CHP gasoline useage from 1 million gallons a month to 900,000 gallons.

He said the increased costs would force the CHP to exceed its budget by $1.44 million during the last six months of the current fiscal year ending June 30 unless its gas consumption was cut.

The CHP commissioner ordered these gas-saving practices:

—Patrolmen are cruising at lower speeds, about 5 miles and hour lower than the recently reduced speed limit of 55 m.p.h.

—Patrolmen are shutting off their vehicle engine while sitting in them along highways to make out accident reports. Previously, they were leaving the engine running to prevent stalling if they had to respond quickly to an emergency call.

—Internal useage of vehicles by civilian personnel in the CHP department is being reduced.

A CHP spokesman said that until last Dec. 31, the patrol was paying 24 cents a gallon for gasoline under a state contract with oil firms.

But since then the patrol has been paying prevailing pump rates because no oil firm is willing to contract with it to provide gasoline in 1974.

To meet the additional costs, Pudinski said he also has canceled a planned $700,000 purchase of radio equipment and delayed one class at the Highway Patrol Academy.

White House to host Latin dinner

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon will reaffirm his administration's policy of "mature partnership" with Western Hemisphere nations at a White House dinner tonight for Latin American and Caribbean foreign ministers, sources said.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is to open two days of closed-door meetings with the ministers today to review the economic and political issues discussed at a similar meeting in Mexico City seven weeks ago.

The meetings are part of a process initiated in Mexico City, which in turn resulted from a suggestion by Kissinger that the United States and Latin America should begin a "new dialogue".

Russ fear increasing U.S. gains, own loss in Mideast

LONDON (UPI) — A ranking Communist diplomat said today the Soviet Union's anger over increasing U.S. influence in the Middle East has tured to outright fear that it will lose its hard-won foothold there. He said the Kremlin is determined to retain its position, at considerable cost, if necessary.

The diplomat, an East European who visited Moscow and Cairo, warned that the Russians mean business because fundamental strategic interests are at stake as well as the prestige of the key leadership.

"The Americans would be well advised to be a little less successful in the Middle East," he said.

"The disengagement agreement arranged by (U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger with Egypt and his growing friendship with Cairo have aroused anger, suspicion and lately outright fear among the Russian leadership for their damaging impact on the Soviet Middle East position."

The Russians apparently let Kissinger do the running in the beginning because they had no influence in Israel. But they did not anticipate a developing friendship between Kissinger asd Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

The informant said the way the Soviets see the position is that where the Soviet military were in virtual supreme control not long ago, American businessmen are now discussing major deals in Cairo while the American Navy is on the strategic Suez Canal in clearing operations.

The hardliners in the Kremlin were said to have been uttering some "pretty tough things." But the desire for continuing detente —the policy of coexistence and cooperation between the super powers —has prevailed so far.

But Moscow is watching closely developments in the Middle East and seems determined to do everything possible to stage a comeback in the region, the informant said.

This it is doing by using the Syrians and urging them to take a tough negotiating position, so as to counterbalance the American success with the Egyptians. Moscow also can be expected to use the Palestinians next by playing the part of the guardians of the Arab cause.

The Russians, according to the source, see the lifting of the oil embargo a major American success toward future longterm cooperation with Arab nations. They fear the penetration of American political influence, economic assistance and knowhow in an area where the Kremlin invested between 6 and 57 billion in arms and aid in the past few years.

Moscow, according to the sources considers Sadat as the key problem, and while resenting Kissinger's success, Sadat is blamed as the man who made it possible.

Younger: Will block free food in new kidnaps

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Attorney General Evelle Younger, criticizing law enforcement in the abduction of Patricia Hearst, has promised to block any attempts by other kidnapers to obtain free food ransom.

Younger said authorities had been "timid" in dealing with the Symbionese Liberation Army kidnapers of the girl.

"If the FBI thinks a shootout is indicated and wants our help, we will help them," Younger told reporters.

Randolph A. Hearst, father of Patricia, has urged repeatedly that nothing be done to jeopardize her safety, and FBI Agent in Charge Charles Bates has said Hearst's wishes were being respected.

Younger said he himself had been afraid he would "do something to get Miss Hearst killed."

He said future political kidnapings in California will be dealt with differently.

"Should we allow a small band of extortionists to dictate our welfare policies?" he asked.

He said it is time for law enforcement to re-examine its approach in kidnapings.

"We have traditionally responded to kidnapings for ransom by doing nothing which would jeopardize the safety of the victim," he said.

"But we have learned that our approach to a political kidnaping should not be the same. Extortion under the guise of altruistic purposes cannot be permitted again."

"In the future we intend to ... prosecute under existing law and to stop any food distribution plans designed to meet extortion demands of kidnapers," he said.

Oyster growers dread sawdust

NEWPORT, Ore. (UPI) — For oyster growers along the Yaquina River, which empties into the ocean near here, there is something they dread more than an oil spill. It is a sawdust spill.

They say that when wood chips or sawdust from pulp and paper plants get into the river, the oysters generally die trying to ingest the wood residue.

Vaudeville song, dance star Blossom Seeley dies at 82

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Blossom Seeley, a song and dance star of vaudeville, died Wednesday at the age of 82.

Miss Seeley, who was born in San Francisco in 1891, was already performing at the age of 10 as "The Little Blossom." When she appeared on Broadway in 1911 in "Henpecks," she stopped the show with the song, "The 'Frisco Toddler."

She was billed during the vaudeville years as "The Hottest Girl in Town," with her renditions of such songs as "Somebody Loves Me," "Jealous" and "I Cried for You."

Miss Seeley's last public appearance was in 1966 on the Ed Sullivan television show. She performed for many years with her husband, the late Benny Fields. They were known for their theme songs "Melancholy Baby" and "Lullaby of Broadway."

Miss Seeley was first married to Joseph Kane, a theatrical manager. The union ended in 1913, when she married Richard "Rube" Marquard, a major league baseball pitcher with whom she had appeared on the stage.

That marriage also ended in divorce and Miss Seeley married Fields in 1922.

Candidate visits political adversary

POMONA — The visitor to Rep. Victor Veysey's downtown Pomona Mall office Wednesday morning couldn't have received a more cordial welcome.

He was ushered into the congressman's office, offered a seat by a charming secretary and asked to wait until the congressman could be free to chat with him.

The visitor spent 10 minutes or so making small talk with the secretary until the door to the congressman's office opened and it was his turn. The visitor then rushed from his chair, into the office and proceeded to lambast his host.

The visitor was Jim Lloyd, Democratic candidate in the 35th Congressional District. He explained that he was there to protest the congressman's "Drop-in Day" for area voters in the newly formed 35th Congressional District.

"You are not the congressman for the 35th District," Lloyd declared. He pointed out that Rep. Charles Wiggins or Rep. Jerry Pettis are representatives of the people in the area presently.

Almost in what appeared to be the same continuing sentence Lloyd told the congressman that he felt he should resign as the representative from the 43rd District in Imperial Valley to seek the Republican nomination in the new 35th District.

A smiling Veysey took the outburst with good humor and told Lloyd "I can't blame you for being wrong," speaking of Lloyd's charge that Veysey is deceiving voters by representing himself as their congressman.

Lloyd then relaxed and spent the next 10 or so minutes chatting in a friendly manner with the congressman about the race and political issues which included the expansion of Ontario Airport, which both men favored, and possible solutions to the abandoned housing problems in the Pomona Valley.

Both men agreed that they do agree on some issues, shook hands in a friendly manner and parted.

These Are the Men and Their Chances:

The Presidency in '76

"Political forecasts made more than two years in advance rarely, if ever, are perfect. . . . Yet the record shows that candidates who lead in the opinion polls two years before the nominating conventions usually win the presidential nominations. . . . But there are so many imponderables — the midterm elections, 25 or 26 primaries, Watergate — who can say 1976 will be a usual year?"

For a probing essay on the potential principals in the Summer-of-'76 political maneuvering that will lead to the selection of presidential nominees for both major parties, Jack W. Germond, nationally known political writer for the Washington (D.C.) Star, has investigated and rated each man for party support, image, experience and campaign ability. Here's your opportunity to start "keeping score." Match your choices against the experts' in "Who Will Run for President in 1976?"

Revolutionary says lawyer helped him escape from prison

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A former revolutionary convict has testified before a state senate subcommittee that a lawyer and others helped him escape from prison.

The statements came in secret testimony released by the Senate Subcommittee on Civil Disorders headed by Sen. Dennis E. Carpenter, R-Newport Beach, a former FBI agent.

The witness, only identified as Witness No. 6 to protect him from reprisals, said that the lawyer in question—a National Lawyers Guild member—allegedly brought him hacksaw blades in prison.

The panel said the lawyer is under investigation by the California Bar Association. The lawyer's name was deleted from the transcript of testimony taken in a closed hearing before the committee last month.

The convict —who escaped but is now back in custody — testified, "He smuggled communications for me to the persons involved. He brought hacksaw blades to me in prison in case our plans didn't work and I had to saw my way out."

The prisoner said the main objective of his escape was to set up a training camp to train small teams of Venceremos revolutionariers and escaped convicts in the art of kidnaping, assassinations, sabotage and robberies.

"We were actually preparing then a manual of what we had done" in making bombs, hot-wiring cars and getting around burglar alarms.

The convict testified that the Venceremos differs from the Symbiones Liberation Army in name only.

"In fact," he said, "I feel I can say this. The events since their action with Patty Hearst is practically out of the manuel we wrote. They are just six months behind schedule."

He said the plans of the Venceremos was to train 10-men squads each 60 to 90 days for specific missions.

Asked if there might be a union between Verceremos and the SLA, he answered.

"I am sure that there is now, to my knowledge, Vencermos elements involved in the Symbionese Liberation Army. I know this for a fact."

Brazil lottery pays $2,291,000

BRASILIA (UPI) — Someone, as yet unidentified, in the northeastern state of Bahia has won what is believed to be the world's largest lottery prize - $2,291,000.

The Federal Sports Lottery managed by the Brazilian Finance Ministry, announced Monday that only one person in the entire country chose correctly the results of 13 soccer games played throughout Brazil this weekend.

Although the name of the winner was not immediately revealed it was known that the bet was made in Bahia.

The Federal Sports Lottery said 8,853,391 bets were made last weekend.

The government will not announce the name of the winner until the money has been delivered.

The previous single largest jackpot was won in November 1972 by Mario Alberto Ronconi of the state of Espiritu Santo who won $2,187,943. He divided the money among 17 of his friends.

NOBODY WANTS HER — JoJo Tolar, 29, is five feet tall and weighs 200 pounds. 'I'm too damn fat," she says, so she has had her teeth wired together to keep her from eating. She wants to make it down to 130 pounds so she can rejoin the motorcycle club which rejected her because she was too fat.

Wires up mouth so she can lose weight

CHICAGO (UPI) — JoJo Tolar, ex-member of the D.C. Eagles Motorcycle Club, says she lost the right to wear the club's colors because she is "just too fat." So she had her teeth wired together to lose weight.

After two weeks she has lost 22 pounds, down from 200 to 178. Her goal is 130.

"I'm an ex-Eagles girl and I want to get back." the 5-foot-tall waitress from Chicago's North Side said. "I want to ride again and I'm just too fat."

JoJo Tolar has spent close to half her 29 years with the club. She was so caught up in those leather jackets and roaring bursts of speed she even had the club's emblem tatooed on her right arm.

It was her boyfriend Spider who arranged for her to wear the club's colors and it was through Spider that she lost the right to wear them.

"A girl gets her colors from a guy," she said.

According to JoJo, Spider "is the dude I pack (ride) with," but they broke up about 18 months ago because Spider was tired of riding "a hog," a big motorcycle, and she was too fat for a "chopper," one of the smaller models.

She said she tried a drastic diet, lost 80 pounds, but regained it and more, sending her weight skyrockehing to 200.

"I just have no will power so I had my mouth wired shut," she said. "I love to eat."

It took a dentist seven weeks to complete the job and cost $200, JoJo said.

"I feel pretty good now that I'm used to it," she said. "They call me 'Wirejaws.' That's my new nickname."

JoJo said she carries a pair of wire cutters with her just in case, but said she is determined to cut her weight and again sport the colors of the D.C. Eagles.

1974 'pretty fair year' for Chrysler

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lynn Townsend assured stockholders at the company's annual meeting that 1974 will be "a pretty fair year" for the No. 3 automaker.

Townsend said despite forecasts of some security analysts, first quarter earnings would be in the black, although he did not indicate actual figures for 1974.

"It was a very rough quarter for the industry, and you are not going to find that any of the four companies did very well in the first quarter," he said.

In a prepared report, President John J. Riccardo said despite efforts to control rising costs, "There will be substantial price increases on our 1975 models." He did not indicate how large the hikes might be, but after the meeting Vice President Tom Killefer told newsmen there might be further price boosts later in the 1974 model year.

"We keep reviewing our pricing," Killefer said. "We plan to do what we can" to get relief from continuing rising costs.

Following the session, the board of directors met and declared a regular quarterly dividend of 35 cents a share, payable June 10 to owners of record May 10.

The only major dissent at the stockholders meeting came from Robert Kemichick, a product design engineer for Chrysler, who criticized the company's lack of a domestic - built subcompact car.

Agnew novel set in 1984, but wait 'till '77

NEW YORK (UPI) — In Spiro Agnew's still uncompleted novel, A Very Special Relationship, the vice president of the United States in 1983 has some decidedly critical thoughts about his president.

It is unfair to judge the book by the few thousand words from Chapter 3 that appear in the May issue of Ladies Home Journal. This glimpse reveals no tantalizing state or political secrets, but there are some interesting insights into Agnew himself.

In an accompanying article the former vice president said he was not writing fictionalized autobiography, but admitted that some of himself must naturally come into the book. Summarizing the plot, he wrote:

"Briefly, it concerns a vice-president of the United States (in 1983-1984) who becomes the dupe of Iranian militants who want to cause an all-out confrontation between the United States and the Soviet Union. The militants mistakenly believe that Russia is planning to take over Afghanistan. Fearing that Iran will be the next country to be overrun by the Soviets, the militants plot the Soviet-U.S. facedown by heating up the Arab-Israeli conflict..."

In the magazine excerpt, which includes a brief portion of a cabinet meeting and a White House dinner for the charismatic Soviet chairman, the protagonist-vice president, Porter Newton Canfield, thinks that President Walter Hurley fails to catch onto a not very thinly veiled barb tossed out by the Russian and later thinks to himself:

"The line between deference and obsequiousness is blurred by the habits of international diplomacy but Canfield felt that others would agree with him that the president went beyond graciousness."

The time setting of the novel itself is interesting—1983-1984, as in George Orwell's chilling look into the future in the novel titled 1984. At one point Canfield looks at the Soviet foreign minister and thinks:

"This was the tough negotiator who carved out the big bargains at SALT VI and VII in Geneva—the agreements that left the U.S. on the fork in the road that led to eventual mediocrity."

While the title of the book refers to the very special relationship between a vice president and president, there also is a very special relationship between Agnew's unhappily married hero and the alluring woman secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

In the article that accompanies the excerpt, Agnew said that writing love scenes "frightens me to death" and that he won't attempt to make them "superheated." He added, "I have to admit that I won't always be writing from my own experience; I'm not a man of great experience in this area."

At the end of the excerpt, Agnew has Canfield wondering whether to embrace the HEW secretary for the first time at the door of her apartment. Instead, "Canfield reached out whimsically and chucked her under the chin."

While it is reported that the Ladies' Home Journal has agreed to pay Agnew $100,000 to serialize his novel once it is written, and that Playboy Press has advanced an estimated $50,000 to $250,000 for hardcover rights, Agnew insists that critical acclaim is more important to him than financial success.

He wrote that he is "far too bitter" to write a nonfliction account of his vice presidency, but added:

"My serious book, the book about my own experiences, will be written—but not until after the Nixon Administration leaves office."

Nixon bill seen as knife in heart of freedom of press

ATLANTA (UPI) — The executive editor of the Washington Post said today a bill introduced by the Nixon administration would emasculate freedom of the press and prevent disclosure by the media of such government scandals as the Watergate affair.

Ben Bradlee, speaking at the annual Dirks newspaper forum, said the Criminal Code Reform Act of 1973, if passed, "will simply emasculate freedom of the press and end for all time the noble art of investigative reporting."

Bradlee warned that the press was doing a poor job of informing the public of the importance of press freedoms at a time when the media was under direct attack.

"In fact, every president is the last 40 years has an easy to document record of public hostility to journalists," he said.

"The proposed legislation would make it a crime to reveal any classified information, however wisely or unwisely classified, military or nonmilitary, true or false."

"In short, it would prevent publication of any information the administration did not want published. This is the goal and practice of dictatorships, not democracies."

Bradlee cited an instance in which he said an administration official told a Post reporter the newspaper company might be forced to sell its broadcast properties if it persisted in printing the Pentagon papers.

He said Richard Kleindienst, then a deputy attorney general, asked a Post reporter if publisher Katherine Graham fully understood the law involving ownership of television stations.

"Specifically, the law preveted convicted felons from owning broadcastt property," Bradlee said. "If we persisted in publishing the Petagon papers, the attorney general went on, and if we refused to turn them over to the Justice Department, we were laying ourselves wide open to criminal prosecution under the espionage acts."

He said the conversation "sounded then, as now, a little like blackmail."

Bradlee also cited as apparent evidence of administration attacks on the Post the challenge to the Post company's two Florida television stations' license renewals last year.

"Only the two Post-owned stations in Florida were challenged and four different challenges were filed against them," he said.

He said the challenges involved a general counsel of the National Committee for the Re-election of the President, the chairman of the finance committee of the Florida Committee for the Re-election of the President, a Miami businessman who was Vice President Agnew's host at the Republican National Convention, and one of the President's major financial contributors and supporters in Florida.

Concerning the Post decision to publish the Pentagon papers, Bradlee said it was made after "a careful examination of the material convinced us it was pure history, and so had no impact on current national security."

Cal Poly expert advises Arabians on their horses

By PATRICK SPENCER
P-B Staff Writer

POMONA — When it comes to Arabian horse know-how, Americans needn't take a back seat to anyone —not even the Arabs.

Norm Dunn, director of Cal Poly's W. K. Kellogg Arabian Horse Center, proved that point recently when he spent 12 days in Saudi Arabia advising the Ministry of Agriculture and Water on its Arabian horse development program.

While he's somewhat reluctant to praise American horse breeding techniques over those of the original Arabian horse breeders, he admits that the 60 or so Saudi government Arabians "need attention at this time."

Dunn, who has headed the Cal Poly horse program since 1964, said horse management in Saudi Arabia "is much less regimented and modernized" than in the United States. "We do it in a more businesslike fashion."

Part of the problem, he said, is that over the years the maintenance of the government herd has been a hit and miss affair, with some Saudi leaders lavishing attention on the desert horses and some ignoring them.

The present government, under King Faisal, is one of the more concerned administrations. Seeing the need for redirecting the management program to perpetuate and upgrade basic stock, officials sought to find someone with suitable expertise to assist them.

Through the auspices of a large American agricultural consulting firm in Saudi Arabia, Dunn was selected for the job on the basis of recommendations from Arabian horse breeders in Texas and Arizona.

Since this was his initial visit, Dunn said he tried to be practical. His main concern was the evaluation of the quality of the horses, the government's stable facilities and the management and operational program.

Some of Dunn's major recommendations included increasing the amount of feed given to horses, more effort in controlling and eliminating internal parasites, and more attention to the general management of the stables.

He also recommended that perhaps a dozen head of American Arabian stock be imported to help improve the native herd.

Dunn said he had no thought of sending any of the Cal Poly horses over, but he believes they should come from Texas or California because of the similarity in weather conditions.

If his suggestions are adopted, Dunn said he might very well be considered for long-term consulting work with the Saudi government.

That could lead the way for some of the government officials to come to Cal Poly to attend the university's classes in animal science and work at the new horse center.

From the Saudis' reaction to Dunn's slide program on the university's Arabian program, it shouldn't be difficult to attract volunteer students.

"They really liked the facilities," Dunn said. The center's recently opened $1 million stables and show ring complex "impressed them the most," he said.

Proposal asks that theater be renovated

POMONA — The City Council on April 29 will consider a Cultural Arts Commission resolution recommending that the council enter into negotiations for the lease of the vacant United Artists threater with option to purchase.

The resolution further asks that the negotiations not be finalized until a close examination has been made by engineers on the building's structural soundness and electrical and mechanical repairs needed.

United Artists is being proposed for use as a community theater for the performing arts by a group of citizens who believe such a facility is urgently needed now and that the prospects of building a new civic auditorium appear to be slim in the future.

A commission subcommittee has come up with a proposal to reopen the theater involving city government, wide citizen participation, donations of funds, time and labor.

The council is being asked for an allocation of $36,000 for the first 12 months of operation.

United Artists was affiliated with RFD Productions which specialized in the showing of films from Mexico before closing in 1972.

The theater on Third street was built in 1923 as the California, was completely remodeled in 1936, and following its purchase by the United Artists Theater Circuit, was renovated, modernized, reequipped and reopened in 1949 as the United Artists theater.

RFD Production took over operation in 1970.

The resolution won support Wednesday night from the Pomona Bicentennial Committee and Tuesday was discussed at a joint meeting between Mayor Ray J. Lepire, Councilman Ben Ochoa Sr. and Commissioners Robert L. Davis, Philip Browne, Mrs. Paul Hoblit, Mrs. Fran Livingston, James Popovich and Mrs. Robert C. Leimbach.

Lepire told the commissioners that in his view "I feel you have made a good recommendation," explaining that action would have to await consideration by the entire council.

Mrs. Leimbach, head of the subcommittee, said she had received commitments for donations of funds for the Founders Circle and the seat endowment fund and for other donations from trade unions.

The mayor said a lot of money would have to be committed for the first year's period just to fix up the building, even though the project might be discontinued before the second year of operation.

Mrs. Livingston noted that a recent community attitude survey indicated citizens were desirable of a cultural center and said the reopened theater "would be a good proving ground" to see how much public support there actually is.

Mrs. Livingston saw the theater project as a "perfect tie-in" to the celebrations next year of the Pomona centennial and in 1976 of the country's bicentennial.

City Administrator Jerrold Gonce said the $20,000 listed in the subcommittee's report for refurbishing and bringing the theater up to building standards did not appear "to be enough to get the doors open."

Gonce said the proposed city budget now in the preparation stage provided for cultural arts "program" activites, but not for capital expenditures.

The tentative budget proposal includes $9,181 for the Pomona Concert Band, $1,200 for the Pomona Community Chorus, $3,700 for the Valley Community Theater and $4,185 for the Valley Concert Theater.

Mrs. Livingston said she did not believe it was the commission's job of cutting the budgets for those groups.

Lepire explained that in adoption of the budget, the council looks first at high priority items, such as the public safety department, and moves on down the line in committing funds.

"I have very strong feelings the cultural arts belong in one of the high priorities in this city, especially this city," said Browne.

"I feel minority groups, performing groups need a place to perform", he said.

Expansion in research, machinery

FMC plant here will be modernized

POMONA — FMC Corp., with Wayne sweeper and industrial brush plants in Pomona, will make capital expenditures of approximately $200 million in 1974.

The 1974 plans for the Pomona plant include a modernization program with an expansion of research and development facilties and sizeable investments in new machinery and tools.

This, according to Helen Ziervers, assistant manager of public relations at Pomona, will increase the productive capacities of the plant.

Robert H. Malott, board chairman and president, said from Chicago, Ill., that the 1974 expenditures will be two-thirds greater than the firm's $120 million capital expenditure in 1973.

"In allocating our capital for plant expansions, improvements and facility replacements during 1974," Malott explained, "we have projected expenditures of $60 million for the machinery group, representing an increase of 15 per cent over expenditures in 1973 of $52 million; and expenditures of $140 million for the chemical group, an increase of 106 per cent over expenditures last year of $68 million."

Extradition sought against Claremonter in bonds case

CLAREMONT — A Claremont man accused of interstate transportation of over $200,000 in stolen government bonds will face extradition proceedings April 30 before a U. S. magistrate in Los Angeles.

Jack Walker Wright, 56, of 607 S. Indian Hill Blvd. was arrested early Sunday morning at his Claremont apartment by police after the Federal Bureau of Investigation sought assistance from local authorities in his apprehension.

Wright, who is also known as Robert Morgan, is under indictment by a federal grand jury in Dallas, Tex. The indictment, handed down April 11, accuses Wright of transporting $203,875 worth of stolen U.S. Savings Bonds from Los Angeles to Dallas in November of 1971.

Claremont police arrested Wright after officers spotted two cars belonging to Wright outside the Claremont apartment where he was living with his wife and three children.

Wright is currently free on $25,000 bail. It is not known whether he intends to fight extradition through the courts.

City Chamber of Commerce enlists 55 new members

POMONA — Fifty-five new members were enlisted for the Pomona Chamber of Commerce during a recent membership drive.

This increased the chamber's roster to 550 member firms.

Some 25 chamber members contacted hundreds of area businessmen during the three day "blitz." The 55 enrolled represents over $5,000 in new investments.

For the first time, contacts were made by telephone rather than personal visits. This was done to conserve gasoline, make volunteers' time more effective, and to contact more businesses.

The membership committee was headed by Joe Gendron, editor of the Progress Bulletin. Others who served included Florence Minto, Pomona Travel Agency; Fran Love, Home Savings and Loan Association; Eileen Marrow, Home Savings and Loan Association; Jay Colvin, General Dynamics; Werner Hess, Alad Corp.; Les Mann, attorney; Gene Russell, Atlantic Finance Co.; Dr. Robert Chaney, physician; Peggy Vick, Odom Realty.

Candidate ratings, home decor in P-B supplement

An opportunity to start "keeping score" on potential presidential candidates, beautifying your home—indoors or out—meal-in-a-dish soup and an answer to "Do your clothes talk?" are all to be found in Sunday's issue of the Progress Bulletin supplement, Family Weekly.

Jack W. Germond, nationally known political writer for the Washington Star, has investigated and rated politicians aspiring for the presidential nomination of their party in 1976. Each candidate is rated for party support, image, experience and campaign ability.

Plants, their care and preparation, are examined in two separate articles.

Opinion

Russia profits by arms limits?

Russia's Leonid Brezhnev has Dr. Henry Kissinger over a barrel — almost.

The momentum of Soviet military research and the breadth of Soviet intercontinental missile programs are so great Brezhnev is in no mood to make any deal which effectively hampers this Russian drive toward superiority. Or so it would appear from cables reaching the State and Defense Department in recent days.

The United States is well ahead technicaly as of now — and likely to stay in the lead for the next five to seven years. American negotiators have been attempting to convince the Russians that Moscow's stubborn insistence on pushing ahead militarily with no meaningful restrictions may lead to an arms race the United States would most certainly win. The result, they've been telling Brezhnev, would be as in the moon race or in economic growth. In the long stretch, the superiority of our research and development would overwhelm the best the USSR would be able to offer.

The Russians, however, have been buoyed by their recent breakthroughs which have come more rapidly than American technical men anticipated and by the effectiveness of their newest conventional weapons in the Arab-Israeli war. So they have not been buying this argument.

They know, and they know that U.S. analysts know, that Soviet military technological progress now threatens U.S. superiority. They could see for themselves, as American military research men admit in private talks, that the improvement in Soviet conventional weapons has been astounding — particularly as compared with the lack of effectiveness of Russian weaponry displayed in the Vietnam war.

The Soviet Union unquestionably has some very serious military weaknesses at the moment — in computers, electronics and communications. But Soviet negotiators apparently believe they will solve these problems through unclassified commercial arrangements with American companies. The Soviet Union may not, in the end, be able to buy this know-how as easily as the Russians seem to believe. But the evidence today is that what they require will be supplied them, either directly by the United States or indirectly through the Europeans.

It also appears abundantly clear to the Russians that the United States is not, and has not for some time, been prepared to spend the extra hundreds of millions in research and development which would guarantee continued American superiority.

The Russians know the United States came from behind to win the moon race because we were willing to put $3 to $5 billion a year into this very limited drive. They know the United States spend many billions on research which leads directly and indirectly to industrial and economic advances. They are also aware of the relatively limited size of the American defense research budget and the relatively modest effort in this area over the past four to five years, a time when the Soviet Union has been expanding such research with vigor.

The Russians also know that Congress would be most reluctant to finance an arms race with the Soviet Union.

All and all the evidence of the official cables is that the Russian negotiators are being very tough indeed, and of late have not been inclined to the compromise that is the essence of any reasonable arms agreement.

Mills and a new Congress

The actions of Rep. Wilbur Mills in urging the resignation of President Nixon and hinting broadly at devastating new personal tax scandals, has caused even the very liberal press, which by no stretch of the imagination supports the President, to protest.

The New York Times has called it "manifestly unfair." The Washington Post says Mills, being privy to information because of his position, "should refrain from making unsupported and unspecified charges of such monumental gravity."

What goes with Wilbur Mills, asks Nick Thimmesch in a column making the above observations. Perhaps the Wall Street Journal has an answer.

Pointing to the fact that liberal Democrats especially are becoming more and more hopeful of an anti-Nixon landslide election in November because it could give them a "veto-proof" Congress for the last two years of the present administration, the Journal makes an interesting observation.

The essence of it is that Mills, Senator James Buckley, Representative Ashbrook and other 'resignationists" want no part of a veto-proof Congress. As the Journal puts it, "Each surely is panicked with the vision of a government run, even for two years, by George Meany, Edward M. Kennedy and Vance Hartke.' These are the proponets of a $179 billion health-insurance scheme, a $5,500 guaranteed-income plan and a neo-isolationist trade bill."

The Mills-Buckley Ashbrook rationale, obviously is that if Nixon is out of the picture by election time the Demo gains, while substantial, would not guarantee a far-left economic spree that inevitably would boomerang against the Congress in 1976.

Connally probe reaches oval office

WASHINGTON — The Watergate prosecutors are pushing their investigation of former Treasury Secretary John Connally right into the White House oval office. They have asked the White House for tapes of conversations between President Nixon and Connally on milk matters.

In secret statements to the Watergate prosecutors, dairy lobbyist Jake Jacobsen has said he delivered $10,000 to Connally at the Treasury Department. Jacobsen alleged that Connally pocketed the money and returned it only after the dairy lobby came under investigation.

The forceful Connally, once a power in the Nixon cabinet and still a presidential contender, told us in a lengthy telephone conversation from Texas that he had been offered the $10,000 but had rejected it. "I have told the prosecutors the truth," he declared emphatically.

The prosecutors, meanwhile, are eager to learn what the President and Connally said to one another about the dairy industry's push for higher price supports in 1971 and 1972.

Both men attended a White House meeting on March 23, 1972, to discuss the dairy leaders' requests. The White House account of the meeting acknowledges that Connally said the dairy industry "had political funds which would be distributed among House and Senate candidates in the coming election."

The dairymen also promised financial support for the President's own re-election campaign.

The following day, the White House ordered a subsidy increase worth $500 million a year to the dairy industry.

The prosecutors are particularly interested in Nixon-Connally conversations during the 30-day period preceding the White House meeting. Sources close to the case tell us that one tape is thought to be "extremely sensitive." This reportedly gives the President's responses, as picked up by the White House recording system, during a crucial telephone talk with Connally.

Our sources say the prosecutors are also interested in the President's conversations with former Attorney General John Mitchell on the milk case. This may indicate that the prosecutors are investigating Nixon's own role in the milk scandal.

Jacobsen has told the prosecutors, meanwhile, that Connally returned the $10,000 not once but twice. The former Treasury secretary allegedly became worried that the first batch of bills could be traced.

Jacobsen and Connally also got together on a cover story. Jacobsen promised to say he had never delivered the $10,000 to Connally but had kept it in a safe deposit box. Jacobsen has now been indicted for perjury for telling this story under oath to a grand jury.

His belated confession has been checked out by FBI agents who have confirmed from available records and witnesses many of the details, according to FBI sources.

OPPRESSED MINERS: Two giant mining companies have been allowed to deduct from their U.S. taxes the money they pay to South Africa from the fabulous Tsumeb mines, which American churchmen charge are worked by oppressed blacks. The churchmen tell us the working conditions are "inhuman."

The mines are located in the vast southwest African region of Namibia, which was ordered free in 1966 by the United Nations. Both the World Court and the U.S. Government backed up the ruling. Yet South Africa refused to leave, holding Namibia by force.

On reason was that the South African government is raking in millions from the Tsumeb mines. The money is paid primarily by two American mining companies, Newmont and America Metal Climax. Although South Africa is holding Namibia illegally, the U.S. Government has permitted the companies to write off the taxes they pay to South Africa.

In 1971, a desperate wildcat strike of 13,000 blacks brought some reforms. Terms in the mines were cut from two years to six months and mattresses were provided to cover the workers' two-decker cement bunks. But the men were still barred from living with their families.

Blacks, no matter how well qualified, are never put over a white worker. The whites average $685 a month, the blacks $65. By contrast, Newmont's president, Plato Malozemoff, collects well over $20,000 a month, plus a $120,000-a-year retirement plan.

So outraged are some Newmont stockholders that they are waging a proxy fight and a showdown is almost certain at the annual meeting May 22. The revolt is led by the United Church of Christ, which owns $2 million in Newmont stock.

FOOTNOTE: Malozemoff firmly defended his company, saying the separation of families is forced on him by the South African government. The company has no choice, he said, but to pay South African taxes. American Metal Climax, whose head Ian MacGregor is also chairman of "Religion in American Life," conceded: "There is much progress to be made."

PAUL HARVEY

If it were 'President Humphrey'

Had it been Humphrey instead of Nixon in the White House would we still have a national scandal, demands for impeachment? Robert Maheu was Howard Hughes' representative in Nevada in 1968. Under oath, Maheu testified that he personally delivered an attache case full of folding money to Hubert Humphrey in July of 1968.

Humphrey, in a deposition, swears that he did not accept the money personally but concedes that such a donation might have been accepted in his behalf. If "President Hubert Humphrey" were now in the White House would the accusation, whether true or false, justify a nationwide hue and cry for "impeachment!"?

You Judge. Maheu swears that on that day, July 29, 1968, Hubert Humphrey, then a senator, and his wife sat in a limousine in front of the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles.

By prearrangement, Maheu approached the limousine and handed to Humphrey an attache case containing $50,000 in cash with these words: "Here's the material on the AEC."

Maheu explains that AEC referred to the Atomic Energy Commission, that Mr. Hughes had been trying to get the AEC to discontinue underground nuclear explosions in Nevada, explosions, which he, Hughes, considered hazardous to his investments in the area.

The implication is of a $50,000 payoff to a U.S. senator to influence federal government policy in behalf of a private interest.

Sen. Humphrey does remember meeting Maheu in front of the hotel at that time but denies recovering the $50,000-cash donation personally.

He concedes that he cannot be sure the donation was not accepted by one of his assistants. There are striking similarities in this accusation and response to the testimony at the Mitchell-Stans trial where the alleged campaign contributor was Robert Vesco who, similarly, was seeking a personal favor. or.

There is a resemblance to some of the accusations against former Vice President Spiro Agnew. There is a parallel conflict between who did what in whose behalf in the Nixon - Dean contradictions.

Those challenging President Nixon's fitness for the office insists that the law must be equitable to all, great and small. Yet I see no indication in the national news media that Sen. Humphrey is not being given the benefit of all doubt.

So one cannot help conjecturing. If it were now "President Hubert Humphrey," would "campaign contributions" be subjected to a similar intensity of scrutiny?

Or might The New York Times and The Washington Post and other New York-based news media be prejudiced for Humphrey as they are against Nixon? Their quantitative coverage of the two cases so indicates.

And one thing more: "If it were "President Humphrey," there'd surely be at least twice as many "tapes."

As others see it . . . letters

A foul event

Reflecting on the letter response concerning the rock concert held recently at the Ontario Motor Speedway, there is some clear evidence that many people in the West End are not going to idly sit by waiting for another similar "attraction" to be cooked up by Jim Cook and other members of the speedway management. This is the foulest kind of event that Southern Californians should be made to put up with.

The windstrewn debris, which escaped the hands of cleanup crews, has been scattered across the countryside and can still be seen for those who pass by, plus broken bottles reflecting in the sunlight along the adjoining roadways.

Furthermore, our police personnel were placed under the stress and frustrating situation of protecting 200,000 vagabonds gathered together for hardly any civilized cause except to possibly escape the city in a stolen vehicle, blow a little grass, rape a few unsuspecting, and throw off as much clothing as possible, maybe throwing a nude scene here and there — to the beat of some mind-blowing drumhead on stage.

Police Lt. Luther Franks briefly stated that he felt these (concert-goers) came for a big bash — sex and dope. I think Lt. Franks knows more about what these rock concerts are for than the money-makers who promote them are willing to confess.

This is a hodgepodge of an "attraction" that will destroy the traditional values of our communities. Let's not kid ourselves thinking things will be better next time. — Steve Huddlestun, Ontario.

Did you know —

— that in Sebastopol you can rent an apple tree under which you can sit and play Adam and Eve for as little as $25 a year?

— that in Philadelphia it is possible to rent temporary parents for your children for only $24 a day while you take a brat-free vacation?

— that in the United States we first started licking postage stamps in the year 1847?

— that time passed at a much slower pace in the good old days? The first clocks didn't have minute hands.

— that the world's first recorded graffiti appears in the Bible in the Book of Daniel? It was the original handwriting on the wall that read "MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSON." As translated by Daniel, that scrawl on the wall said a kingdom would fall.

— that the population trend is now reversing itself? The number of small towns in the United States has doubled during the last 20 years.

BRUCE BIOSSAT

Hospitality also a Japanese custom

TOKYO — Well, I went to visit the Yamada family here in a district not far from the city's celebrated glittering Ginza, and it was some kind of time.

Tokyo has a "home visit system" under which families volunteer for visits like mine, in the interest of "better international understanding."

I was primed with questions about the family's living costs under galloping inflation, fuel and other shortages, their taxes, etc. I got them asked, but the real thing was that the evening quickly dissolved into such a small festival of fun that when we parted, we felt like old friends.

My hostess, Mrs. Etsuyo Yamada, her son Masami, and a young girl who is a family friend, drove me in their station wagon to their home in the Taikto-ku district. It was on a commercial street, with entry through a slender sliding door panel.

One look and you could see that the house and a small shop (it turned out to be a specialized sort of drug store) merged as one. We doffed our shoes in Japanese custom, and sat down around a brightly lit dining table, nibbling at seaweed-covered rice cakes and quaffing a bit of beer. (Rice prices are controlled, but food costs generally are up at the little stores where the family stocks its larder).

The Yamada family and its prior generations have lived at the same site for 120 years. An earlier house burned to the ground in the 1923 earthquake. I suspect it happened again in the massive March, 1945, fire-bombing by United States' B-29s, but the family was too gracious to mention that. The present house is of wood and wallboard, cramped and small, warmed by an electric heater. Tight quarters but somehow comfortable.

The father, Seibei Yamada, a longtime pharmacist, was described as "retired" and was not present.

Mrs. Yamada, a beautiful woman of 66, has many interests. She is general president of a cluster of 50 clubs doing social welfare and education work in the Taito-ku district, where 220 000 people live. She also runs a small plant in Kyoto which makes things from richly-colored, gold-threaded brocade. She gave me a lady's tiny coin purse as a gift.

Masami told me on the way out, in his excellent English, that he was the family black sheep, since his older brother is now the pharmacist and his divorced sister runs the drug shop. She is licensed to practice Chinese medicine, which seems to involve things like herbs and chlorophyll, and demands of "patients" that they follow rigid health rules. Business comes by word of mouth and evidently is brisk. With house and shop, the family pays $500 a year in real estate taxes.

The fun began when I asked Masami how old he was. The young family friend, Akiko Honjo, an architecture student at Tokyo university, laughed hard. The joke was he is older than he looks and doesn't like to admit it. He finally confessed to 36. When I said I hadn't married until I was 37, he gave a happy shout, and grasped my hand firmly as if two strayed souls had made bond.

But Masami is not all that lost. He is accredited from Tokyo university's graduate school of arts, paints at a seaside studio south of Tokyo, has two big plant-and-flower murals on the family walls, designed a wrapping for his mother's boxed products, runs a ski club in Japan's mountains west and north of Tokyo and once appeared in a television film in Europe while joining in a long, high-Alpine ski run from France to Switzerland.

He's the one who can talk fuel shortage, with his runs to his studio and to a small family farm to the west near the Japan Sea. He sketches there a lot. Masami says gasoline prices are higher today in a ratio of 8 to 5 over September, and in the first panic of December-January he was limited in the amounts he could buy.

Expansive, smiling, he suddenly broke out a small guitar and began singing familiar, if old, American popular songs like "Springtime in the Rockies" and "Red River Valley." I joined in, and so did Akiko, who lived a while in Detroit.

And, oh yes, Kuniko, daughter of Masami's sister. Just 7, she showed me her arithmetic book stamped with five red circles for excellence. An example of her work in shodo (brush-writing) is on exhibit at the Tokyo Metropolitan Art Museum. Inflation and the family? Sure, sure, tough. But what I remember is Kuniko running alongside the car, smiling and waving, as I left.

Library slates no-fines week

Patrons of the La Verne and San Dimas branches of the Los Angeles County Library may return overdue books during next week without penalty.

New $275,000 city hall proposed by L.V. manager

LA VERNE — The City Council has been asked to consider the construction of a new city hall — twice as large as the present one — at an estimated cost of $275,000.

If the proposal is approved, the police department will take over both floors of the existing city hall.

Plans for the 10,000-square-foot building were unveiled Monday night by City Manager George Caswell. They call for construction on city-owned property between the present City Hall and the fire station.

The project would be financed by revenue sharing funds which Caswell estimated would amount to about $425,000 by 1976.

He told the council that if the city doesn't decide on what to do with the first year's allocation by June 30, it will lose it.

The council took his recommendations under advisement and scheduled discussion or action on it in two weeks.

The present city hall was built in 1938. The wing on the west was added in 1956. Caswell told the council the staff has outgrown the floor space.

He proposes to relocate the entire administrative section as well as the council chambers. He said that by such a move the police department can more than double its present quarters.

In the new building the council chambers would be larger and would be located on the first floor. The reception area, now only 121 square feet large, would be increased to 750 square feet. Provisions also would be made for a larger conference room.

"It is not necessary to spend large amounts of money to construct monuments in the name of civic pride," Caswell maintained. "La Verne has typically operated on a conservative financial level, and we can continue to do this with new construction."

Councilman Harrison Sanborn said he was not ready to act on Caswell's proposal at this time because "we have not even selected our priorities as to how we will use the revenue sharing allotments."

He said that before consideration is given to a new city hall, the council should approve the construction of a new fire station on the northside, "something we promised to the people there four years ago."

Councilman Frank Johnson then called on the council to come up with suggestions for a list of priorities by the next meeting.

Hillcrest Homes group will see display of iris

LA VERNE — The Hillcrest Homes Auxiliary will meet at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the east lounge.

The program will feature floral arrangements created by Mrs. Phyllis Sievers, using iris from the gardens of Mr. and Mrs. Harwood Tracy, residents of the homes. He is a retired botanist and has continued his hobby of growing unusual iris in his garden at Hillcrest.

Mrs. Ellis Jenkins, president of the auxiliary, will conduct a business session.

The auxiliary is the supportive organization for Woods Memorial Hospital, the nursing center for Hillcrest Homes.

Visiting in Texas

LA VERNE — Mrs. Tom Pagliuso flew to Houston, Tex., to spend three weeks with her son and family.

Air Force Staff Sgt. Eugene Pagliuso, formerly of La Verne, is stationed there.

Golf tournament is planned by La Verne and San Dimas

SAN DIMAS — The recreation departments of La Verne and San Dimas will stage the fourth annual "90-10," Shotgun Golf Tournament at 11:30 a.m. April 26, at the San Dimas Golf Course.

The entry fee is $10 per player and this includes green fees, electric cart, dinner and hospitality bar before dinner. Additional dinner tickets are $5 per person for the awards dinner that will be held at 7 p.m. in the Stanley Plummer Community Building after the tournament.

The "90-10" term refers to the City of San Dimas' ownership of 90 per cent of the golf course and to the City of La Verne's 10 per cent of the course. The two cities bought the course in a joint powers agreement. The tournament has been an annual event since the purchase was completed.

Reservations may be made by calling 599-6713 in San Dimas or in La Verne at 593-4571.

No more smog alerts--they're episodes

No more "smog alerts" will be called in Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties. But there may be an increased number of "air pollution episodes."

This is due to changes in the counties' Air Pollution Control District (APCD) rules and regulations, required by the State Air Resources Board.

Among the changes is the dropping of the term "smog alert." This is replaced by "air pollution episodes." And these episodes will be called at substantially lower pollution levels than the old alert.

All measurements are made in parts per million of oxidant since this is the only pollutant which currently approaches harmful levels, said officials.

Under the new order, first stage episodes will be called at .20 parts per million; second stage at .40 parts per million; and third stage at .60 parts per million.

This compares to "smog alerts" of .35 at communinity alert; .50, first stage; 1.00, second stage; and 1.50, third stage.

Alerts were previously called immediately when the oxidant reached the given level. Under new regulations the episode is based on a one-hour average since medical experts believe the duration to be an important factor on community health.

The new regulations have a prime objective of predicting air pollution episodes the day before they are anticipated. Thus appropriate action can be maken to reduce the pollution level before it occurs.

At the first stage episode level, the APCD requests that persons — especially children, elderly and those with respiratory problems — remain indoors and that unnecessary driving be curtailed.

At the second stage level, all persons should discontinue outdoor activity and avoid the use of cars. The third stage episode is condidered an air pollution emergency.

For the Pomona Valley area the APCD expects 130 first stage episodes per year, five or six second stage episodes and probably no third stage episodes.

When a first stage episode is predicted for the following day, th APCD will request that unnecessary driving be curtailed and car pools be utilized to the maximum extent possible.

When a second or third stage episode is expected, the APCD emergency action committee — consisting of scientists, doctors, industrial representatives, law enforcement personnel and public members — will be called into session to recommend appropriate action to the counties boards of supervisors.

Under the new regulations this could, but need not necessarily, mean the implementing of contingency plans to reduce pollution by decreasing industrial and vehicle activity.

Included is any industrial plant which emits 100 tons or more per year of a specified air contaminant; shopping centers with 1,000 or more parking places; government agencies, industries, recreation facilities or commercial businesses with at least 100 employes; businesses, agencies or commercial establishments with 10 or more vehicles; and any other operations as directed by th APCD control officer.

Any operation falling in one or more of these categories will be required to develop a contingency plan for temporarily suspending operations if deemed necessary by the boards of supervisors.

Episodes will be declared or predicted for only those local areas where the problem exists or is expected to occur. Implementing the contingency plans would require consideration of the resources area or that area where the pollution originates, rather than where the episode occurs, said officials.

European troop slashes mulled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon is seriously considering reducing the force of 320,000 American GIs in Europe, says Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger.

Schlesinger told a group of visiting West German parliamentarians that the cuts as contemplated would be among noncombat forces and that fighting units would be left untouched.

He gave no figure on how many troops might be withdrawn. The administration has been under growing congressional pressure to cut American forces abroad.

Cook in a rectory

Betty Hutton finds true happiness

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Former film star Betty Hutton has run out of money, converted to Catholicism and is currently working as a housekeeper and cook for St. Anthony's Rectory in Portsmouth, according to a copyrighted story in the Providence Visitor-Diocesent.

The leading lady of "Annie Get Your Gun," "The Greatest Show on Earth" and "Happy Go Lucky" back in the 1940s and 1950s, Miss Hutton was quoted as saying she hopes to become active in church work.

At 53, the former actress reflects on her life, "I've had all the other stuff. I've had money, I've had fame, but I was miserable." She said, "I was broken, down and out, without a dime to my name."

"I left Hollywood and landed in New England where I quite accidentally met Father Peter Maguire, pastor of St. Anthony's who was kind enough to take me in," she was quoted as saying.

In the story Miss Hutton said she earned as much as $150,000 a week up until 10 years ago.

"I was raking in the dough hand over fist," she said. "Money was no problem, but love was a problem. Nobody loved me unless I bought them, so I bought everybody. It wasn't until I came here and experienced the concerns of the priests and the simplicity and devotion of the parishioners that I discovered true love actually exists."

The paper quotes Miss Hutton as saying, "Nothing has brought me true happiness until I discovered Catholicism."

Ava to return

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Ava Gardner, who hasn't worked in a Hollywood movie in several years, returns to the film capital to co-star with Charlton Heston in "Earthquake" at Universal.

Prof to study perception of cold, warmth

CLAREMONT — The way people perceive warmth and cold is still a mystery to scientists, but a Pomona College faculty member hopes to solve the puzzle.

Dr. William P. Banks, an assistant psychology professor, has been awarded a $5,000 grant from the National Institute of Mental Health to conduct research into the sensory system that converts temperatures into perceptions and how warmth and cold are perceived.

Banks, with the aid of student volunteers, seeks to produce basic facts about the body's ability to adapt to warmth and cold and to answer the question of whether there is more than one physiological system involved in sensing or perceiving warmth and cold.

It is unclear, he points, out, whether hot and cold are two separate senses, like vision or hearing; or whether they are part of the same sense.

Banks, who has been on the Pomona faculty since 1969, conducted research on various facets of perception at Yale University during the past several summers.

New library chief chosen for colleges

CLAREMONT — Patrick Barkey, currently library director at the University of Toledo, has been selected as the new director of the libraries of the Claremont Colleges.

Barkey, 51, a 1948 Pomona College alumnus, was chosen for the position following a 10-month national search. In addition to his experience as a library administrator, he is well-known as a library planner, having developed two major libraries at the University of Toledo.

"Library development is one of Claremont's most urgent needs," Provost Howard Brooks said in announcing the appointment. "Patrick Barkey's experience in planning and developing libraries, both buildings asd collections, as well as in making modern technogical improvements, will be critical factors in the next period of Claremont's history."

In his new position, Barkey will supervise the college's four major libraries, Honnold, Seeley Mudd, Sprague and Denison, as well as several smaller technical and scientific collections located on the individual campuses.

Stephens vows fight on massage parlors

POMONA — Clyde Stephens, candidate for the Republican nomination in the 65th Assembly District, has promised campaign supporters that he will continue his fight against the operation of massage parlors if elected.

Stephens, at an appreciation dinner held in Chino, said "according to police reports, 10 or 14 massage parlors operating within the City of Pomona are little more than houses of prostitution."

"This type of vice and lawlessness is bad for a city and it's bad for the state. I will continue to fight against it as a planning commissioner or as an assemblyman for the state of California," the candidate said.

Speaking on the energy crisis, Stephens said "it should never have happened and should never happen again because there are so many alternate sources of energy available. As an a assemblyman, I will push for the necessary research to provide these sources."

Pioneer finds pie in the sky

I was delighted, as I always am at successful space achievements, with the spectacular performance of Mariner 10 in photographing Mercury recently, and amused, as I always am, by statements of the scientific fraternity on what it all means.

Mercury, as you know, is the smallest planet in our solar system and the closest to the sun. From earth it looks like a golf ball, and one of the photos returned from Mariner 10 last week distinctly showed the words "Kro-Flite" stamped in the northeastern quadrant.

Our doughty little interplanetary spy passed within 400 miles of Mercury, a good 3-wood and a long iron for Jack Nicklaus. It has been taking snapshots like a grandmother at Thanksgiving, and the resultant photos, relayed to the earth by magic, are indistinguishable from the grandchildren.

So what have we learned from our extraterrestial Kodakry?

Donald E. Gault, one of the scientists monitoring the Mariner data at NASA's Jet Propulsion Lab in Pasadena, summed it up nicely.

"It's like the moon and it isn't," he said. Any questions?

Mercury, like the other planets, was discovered to have many craters, which one observer likened to "giant pie pans." Actually they ARE giant pie pans, and we'd better not arouse any of those giants by snooping around their pantry.

One of the questions that continually titillates astronomers and sc-fi writers is whether lifeasweknowit exists on our neighboring planets—if you can call something 93 million miles away a neighbor.

When we send off our Pioneers and our Mariners, all we think about is what we are going to discover about the other globs that make up our solar system. We give little heed to what other (shudder) forms of life on these planets are going to discover about US. If you are tossing the baseball with your Little Leaguer and that upshoot-outdrop that made you the talk of the college campus gets away and crashes through a neighbor's picture window, he is sure as Koufax going to come out to see whodunit.

Our gleaming little Mariner 10, flashing through the Mercurian sky, might set off the whole Mercury Nuclear Interplanetary Space Force, not only shooting down the space probe but sweeping out on a search-and-destroy mission for the Jet Propulsion Lab. (Stay out of Pasadena for a few weeks.)

Or the little visitor from outer space might evoke the same response their's do on planet earth.

"Hello, Mercury Police Precinct 62, Sgt. Mulrooney. Who's this? You saw what? A flashing light in the sky?" (Covering mouthpiece) "Hey, Eddie, get on the extension. It's that nut from Crater 614." (Into phone) "Yest sir, you saw this UFO zooming across your crater? It was what? Taking pictures? Probably a meteor. Or a weather balloon. Oh? Silver globe with letters on the side? They said what? National Aeronautics and Space Administration? I see. No, I'm not laughing—I have a cough, and that's the way it affects me. Yes sir, we'll look into it. Thanks for calling." (Hangs up).

"Some nut, huh, Eddie? Probably thinks its a space probe from planet earth. Must think there's lifeasweknowit down there. I'd hate to have that guy's liquor bill."

Disease of the cannibals

That disease known as kuru looks something like multiple sclerosis. Hits the brain. Causes hysteria, body tremor, coma and death. Only place you find it among the Fore tribesmen of New Guinea. They're cannibals. Or were. The new anti-cannibal laws thereabouts appear to be eliminating the disease. It's definitely due to diet, allright. Let's not talk about it anymore.

At last report three ou of every 20 people geting tatoos were women . . . Not a single page of Chopin's considerable musical output is without the piano . . . Did I tell you the average woman uses up approximately her height in lipstick every five years? . . . Figure just about 27 per cent of the available grouse are knocked down yearly by hunters . . . It's a fact, too, that even severe stammerers can swear a blue streak without missing a syllable.

"It's harder for a man to see a blonde in a red dress out of the corner of his eye than a brunette in a white dress," contends old Cedric Adams. His readers scoffed. But the Better Vision Institute backed him up. It reported you can perceive colors best when you look straight at them, but they don't show up nearly as well as blacks and whites when focused off center of the retina.

Q. "How frequently does one bolt of lightning hit more than one person?"

A. In three out of 10 strikes that hit somebody, more than one somebody gets hit each strike.

Q. "What was the first of the household detergents?"

A. Dreft.

How do you feel about parties? That they're dandy? Likewise. But is it not true that you frequently feel a marked letdown afterwards? Again, likewise, Depression. Mental experts contend it's just about a universal experience — the after-the-party blues. No doubt they're right, because their claim jibes with the observation of E. E. Strange, the sage of Waco, who has said: "Anything that'll make you high will make you low."

It's commonly reported that rodeo originated hereabouts. Re-originated maybe. But the old Greeks, bear in mind, comthe U.S. Department of Justice.

Experts who should know report that prostitutes in this country earn about 10 times as much as the yearly budget of the U.S. Department of Justice.

Officials claim now is this is growing timber 60 per cent faster than it's using it. Excellent, if true.

For Friday, April 19

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's best you keep opinions to yourself today, since you're apt to judge others too harshly without knowing all the facts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An irritating situation will arise because of a friend's unreasonable demands. Make yourself scarce when you see the warning signals.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is one of those days when you'll feel you're a target for others to take a potshot at. Try not to give them the ammunition.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Another feels just as strongly about his opinions as you do. If you try to overpower him, he'll erupt hostilely.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You tend to be possessive today and somewhat jealous. This attitude will create needless tensions in an unstable relationship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is not a good day for you to try to make deals or tie down an agreement. Wait till all parties are more amiable and calm.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be very careful if you're working with tools. Keep your mind on what you're doing. Don't try to do two things at once.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Take a back seat in any social involvement today. If you're aggressive you'll make waves and a nasty situation will result.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Yesterday where peace prevailed domestically, conditions have done an about-face. Do all you can to minimize friction at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't put your signature to anything binding unless you're absolutely sure you understand it to the letter.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Financial matters have to be taken seriously today. Impulsive moves or poor judgment will put you in the red.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Risky or speculative situations will backfire if you involve yourself in them today. Don't do anything chancey.

Your Birthday
April 19

Much opportunity will be offered you this year. However, it carries with it certain conditions that warn you not to be wasteful or to take things for granted.

Model remarks on style shows

By ERMA BOMBECK

I've never been really crazy for style shows.

To begin with, it's hard for me to identify with women who can hook their handbags on their hipbones while they slip out of their coats. And secondly, the nostalgia in clothes these days is getting on my nerves. I didn't mind looking back as long as I couldn't remember it.

However, I am glad I attended a style show the other morning with my neighbors. For the first time I realized why my clothes do not look the same as when they are worn by models.

I don't walk right.

It's true. I walk across the floor with the self-consciousness of a poodle who just missed the paper. There's so much to remember . . . hold my stomach rigid, tuck in my backside, hold my arms away from my body so they won't flatten out, and stand up straight so waiters won't call me "sir." By the time I remember all of that my legs become stiff and I march across the floor with all the grace of the German army marching into Poland.

Models don't seem to have that trouble. The confidence they exhibit seems to come right out of their pores. The first model eased onto the runway, her body slanted at an 90-degree angle, her hand impaled on her hip. She walked like a woman who had just sneezed after surgery. Beautiful.

The next one was a petite little thing who walked in a series of jerks and small steps like maybe she had a rash. Her head pivoted from side to side and her eyes darted back and forth nervously. Fantastic.

A tall model was next. She wore a coat with large pockets and as she stepped onto the runway, she jammed her hands into her pockets and stood with her legs apart. When she walked her steps were firm and deliberate and when she turned completely around, her head never changed directions. Unreal.

I sat there in the darkness for over two hours while the models twirled and pivoted, their faces masks of boredom and detachment.

When the lights went up I said to myself, "Who are you kidding? If you leaned that far backward when you walked your tummy control panel would split. Or if you ever walked with those little baby steps, your legs would sound like a group.

I put the whole thing out of my mind until yesterday in the supermarket. The girl in front of me was slouching along like the "Little Match girl." Her hair was under a scarf and she wore white socks with her tennis shoes. She didn't walk too good either. It was the model with the 90-degree angled body. Incredible.

Aussies may ship more beef to U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American consumers may soon be getting increased supplies of Australian beef because Britons and Japanese are buying less, the Agriculture Department reports.

Department trade specialists said today that U.S. beef imports, which come chiefly from Australia and New Zealand, dipped sharply in February and were 2 per cent below a year earlier for the first two months of this year.

But they said that although American offering prices for Australian beef have declined, Australian shippers may soon be trying to increase sales to this country because of problems in other major markets. Japan, normally a big buyer of Australian meat, currently has suspended imports, and orders from the United Kingdom are also down, a report said.

The Agriculture Department's Foreign Agricultural Service said shipping lines report Australian meat producers have begun planning for early May refrigerated shipments instead of the usual late June movement.

Raisins believed one of oldest foods

Fresno, Calif. (UPI) — Raisins are believed to be one of the oldest foods known, according to the California Raisin Advisory Board. It says there are records of the Persians and Egyptians growing raisin grapes 2,000 years before Christ was born.

Merlin keeps the old magic

By Oswald & James Jacoby

When Merlin the magician played in the bridge games at King Arthur's court, there was a special rule for him. He could not shuffle, deal or even cut the cards. This didn't keep Merlin from making some really astounding plays.

There was nothing astounding about his king of diamonds lead against three no-trump. Anyone likes to lead from king-queen-jack-10.

Opening lead—♦K

Lancelot ducked. Merlin continued the suit and Lancelot had to win. He promptly played the ace of clubs and continued with the jack.

Now Merlin went into a trance. When he came out of the trance he had figured out what to do. He went up with his king and led a heart.

This line of play was the only way to defeat the contract. It showed that Merlin had figured out exactly what Lancelot was trying to do or had seen the peerless knight's hand in his trance.

Had Merlin ducked the second club, a third club lead would have set up two tricks in dummy. Had he cashed his diamonds, Lancelot would have discarded his queen of clubs and unblocked the suit for dummy.

Thins have advantages

By JEAN ADAMS

FAT: Q: I want to go out with girls, but I don't know if they would go out with a fat person.

Please don't tell me to go on a diet. Just tell me, if you were a girl and a fat guy asked you for a date, would you accept?—No Girl Friends in New Jersey

A: Yes, girls go out with fat guys. Being overweight won't keep you from dating girls, especially if you are friendly and cheerful.

But there are so many advantages, now and in the future, to controlling one's weight that I urge you to consider a diet.

FIGTHS: Q: I'm having trouble with my brother. We're always fighting. He cuts me down so far at school in front of my friends that I have to run away. At home he starts a fight every time my parents leave.

Last week he hit me in the nose. It swelled up. I had to tell my parents a lie because my brother said if I told on him it would be worse next time. How can I stop this? He is 16. I am 14, and a girl. Bruises make me look awful.—Bruised in Florida

A: No matter what your brother says, report all this to your parents. Tell them about the threats and about what happens at school and at home in their absence. This is a disciplinary problem. You can't work it out but they can.

Foreign competition hurts marijuana dealer in Kansas

By FRANK T. COOK

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — Archer is a 25-year-old executive whose business is slipping badly. A few years ago he made $30,000 a year, untaxed.

Today, higher labor costs and foreign competition have hit him hard.

He is a marijuana wholesaler, one of the largest in the Midwest and an original member of a group called the "Kaw Valley Hemp Pickers Association."

He put himself through college working in the illegal trade and he'll soon turn in his blue denim shirt for a white collar. He's making only $17,000 a year now in the marijuana business.

Archer, who shall not be further identified here, employs a crew of four. They toil in backwoods fields and can usually harvest a ton of wild Kansas marijuana from mid-August to early October. They work about 12 nights from dusk to dawn and each crew member gets $125 a night.

No Income Tax

Only one problem bothers Archer.

"I'm a little worried about the Internal Revenue Service," he said, pushing his long black hair out of his eyes. "I've never paid any income tax.

"It's a business, it's just like anything else. Labor costs have gone up and the government hasn't helped much."

In better times, tons of Kansas marijuana were trafficked around this university town to both coasts and often beyond.

"The biggest problem has been foreign competition and the inability of the government to control it. Six years ago marijuana was marijuana and nobody knew the difference between good stuff and bad. But the consumers are much more sophisticated now. Most have tried Columbian and Mexican grass and know it's a lot better than ours.

"The government hasn't done much to stop reefer coming across the border."

Archer said one of the few times the price of domestic marijuana had risen was back to its peak of $50 per pound was a couple of years ago when the government was running its "Operation Intercept" crackdown.

Effective Program

"That was a pretty effective program" said Archer. "It took a couple of months but after a while the supply of foreign grass dried up and the price of our staff was rising."

Importers figured how to get around the blockade however, and foreign grass started flowing into the United States again. The foreign supply has seriously hurt the domestic market, he said, but it is a problem compounded by amateurs and costly labor.

"Kids who don't know if the plant is mature, if it's ready for harvest, go out and start picking. They don't process it right and they dump it on the market almost right after they've dried it."

The result is textbook economy. The market is flooded, demand goes down with the availability of supply, the price drops out. "And nobody makes any money."

Controls flow

After the harvest, Archer starts clearing his supply in late November, controlling the flow to hold the market price steady at about $15 per pound.

Like other industries faced with labor costs and competition, the Kansas marijuana business has turned to technology for help—but Archer thinks it is too late.

One new device is a picker, operated by hand, that strips leaves from the marijuana stalk faster, quieter and more efficiently. Another new item is a portable compact press that will dry up to 10 pounds of weed in an hour.

The press was developed to eliminate open air drying of the product. Marijuana drying in the sun emits an odor detectable a half-mile away, a definite hazard in an illegal business.

Another project is the development of a hybrid plant, a cross between Columbian and Kansas reefer.

"The first generation grows up like the parent," said Archer." Pretty good stuff. But after that it deteriorates back to pure Kansas."

Vice president's wife is chronic latecomer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Betty Ford, wife of Vice President Gerald R. Ford, cannot understand why her husband gets so irritated with her chronic lateness for Washington social events, according to the May issue of McCalls.

Mrs. Ford defended her lateness at numerous social occasions in an interview with writer Trude B. Feldman. "I don't know why he complains so much," Mrs. Ford commented innocently. "Heaven knows he was late for our own wedding.

"As a matter of fact, he was so late that I'd just about decided that if he didn't show up soon, I might as well go down and marry the best man. When Jerry did appear, he apologized profusely —he had been out campaigning in a farm area.

"We finally bowed our heads to take the vows, and it was then I noticed that with his neat gray flannel suit, he was wearing dusty brown shoes. He had been in such a hurry to change his suit that he had simply forgotten to change his shoes."

The article said Mrs. Ford's habit of lateness continually angers her husband, especially since their social schedule increased so markedly after Ford assumed the vice presidency. To trick his wife into being on time, McCalls reported, Ford has resorted to such devices as telling her an 8 o'clock dinner engagement begins at 7 o'clock.

Betty Ford also believes that regardless of the political pressures her husband will remain "his own man."

"Jerry wouldn't hesitate to make an appointment with the President and say, 'I think you're off the beam on this or that.' Jerry and the President haven't always agreed. Jerry voted against bills the President wanted put through because he's always been his own man," Mrs. Ford told McCalls.

For the past nine years, Mrs. Ford has suffered from a pinched nerve that has forced her to give up skiing, dancing and golf. The pain comes and goes, requiring her to take traction equipment with her whenever she travels.

The pain apparently is aggravated by tension, and Mrs. Ford has been treated by a psychiatrist in an effort to relieve it. Her doctor, William R. Felts, said Ford did not hesitate to agree to the psychiatric treatment.

Yale students stop Shockley from speaking

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — Yale University President Kingman Brewster said Tuesday he was sickened to see students shouting down William Shockley, who tried to speak on his theory that Negroes are genetically inferior to whites.

"It makes me sick that even a small majority of Yale students would use storm trooper tactics in reference to freedom of speech," Brewster said.

About a third of the 300 students gathered for the debate between Nobel prizewinning physicist Shockley and conservative publisher William Rusher began heckling and catcalling as soon as the pair appeared on stage Monday night.

At one point during the shouting, Shockley walked to the podium, but when the heckling rose, he went instead to a large blackboard where he wrote, "Pity on Yale."

Shockley and Rusher finally left the stage after enduring about an hour of the shouting.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The first Easter egg roll in the United States was held on the Capitol grounds in Washington, D.C. on April 2, 1877, during President Rutherford B. Hayes' administration, The World Almanac recalls. The custom was practiced by later presidents but was discontinued in 1942. Easter egg rolling was started again on April 6, 1953, during President Dwight D. Eisenhower's administration.

Worst African drought shifting to Ethiopia

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — The focus of the worst drought in Africa's recorded history has shifted to southern Ethiopia where hundreds of thousands of peasants are threatened with starvation and death, according to relief workers.

Ethiopia was just beginning to come to grips with a devastating famine in the north when the dimensions of the new catastrophe in the south began to filter back to the centralgovernment here.

A report by the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) said as many as 100,000 persons died in the northern provinces of Tegre and Wallo last year. Some officials said this figure was conservative.

The new crisis threatens to dwarf even this.

The government has estimated 200,000 persons in the south face starvation this spring. West European and American relief workers in the area said the total could reach 500,000.

The Norwegian Church Relief Organization reported recently that "the situation in the south is serious with many people starving, living on roots, the seed for the new growing season having been eaten, and cattle dying."

Because of the failure of the long rains a year ago and below average rainfall during the short rains in October, crops failed across the country, and there has been no water or grass for the cattle and oxen that have been dying in even greater numbers than humans.

One relief survey showed in six villages in Gamu Gofa province only 15 of 397 families had any grain early this year.

The Norwegian organization reported that in another village near the Kenyan border, 62 persons—more than half the population—had been found dead recently.

Such statistics conjure up a repeat of last year's horrific northern situation where one relief worker counted 179 bodies lining a road outside the town of Dessye.

The stricken southern area is a series of massive plateaus isolated from each other and the rest of the country by deep impenetrable valleys.

A third of the country's 26 million people live more than 20 miles from the nearest road. This is especially true in the south.

The dimensions of the crisis began to reach Addis only when peasants from the interior journeyed from their remote stockades on foot to the nearest towns in search of food. Their oxen had died, and some of the peasants had auctioned off their goats, then their seed grain and finally their land for as little as $250.

It has been virtually impossible to reach some settlements perched precariously at the tips of sheer, brick red plateaus which stretch for mile after mile to the horizon.

Food must be trucked in by small but sturdy trucks.

Relief agencies estimate a quarter of a million tons of imported grain will be needed in the next few months to feed the starving. Less than half this figure has been committed.

Much of the land in a country where 85 per cent of the population works in agriculture may never recover.

A government report entitled "The Drought Problem in Ethiopia" said:

"Throughout Tigre and good parts of Wallo (provinces) and elsewhere, the ecological balance has been seriously disturbed."

It suggested a large resettlement program because even with modern technological methods "it would still not be possible for all the rural population to be gainfully employed in these regions."

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Inflation and concern about future trends in living costs has eroded investor confidence, according to Goldman, Sachs & Co. "This low confidence is reflected in lower price-earnings multiples for the broad averages and many stocks than we have witnessed in two decades," it continues. With food the biggest contributor to the ten per cent year-to-year bulge in the February Consumer Price Index, "we strongly believe that the future course of inflation is the key to the future course of equity prices," the firm adds.

"The stock market will find it difficult to regain any upward momentum until the current surge of interest rates has run its course," says Wright Investors' Service, a Bridgeport Conn. firm. The sharp easing of volume since mid-March and the trend toward a second market bottom both indicate the birth of a new bull market is yet to come, the firm continues. On the other hand, the percentage of mutual fund net assets maintained in cash and equivalents and the ratio of odd-lot short sales to all odd-lot transactions suggest the second market bottom should occur in the near future, it adds.

"The overall performance continues to suggest a sold out market in addition to one that is also technically oversold," says E.F. Hutton & Co. The responsiveness of individual issues to positive corporate news is "a characteristic of an oversold market which in reality is gaining technical strength and becoming less vulnerable," the firm continues. If the small sample of good corporate earnings reports released so far is a fair indicator, "we should be in for a firm market," it adds.

The intermediate market decline from the March Dow Jones industrial peak at the 900 level shows no signs of ending, according to Merkin & Co. "The transportation and utility averages are relatively weak, market breadth is poor, and the odd lot figures are negative," the firm says. It urges traders and investors to stay on the sidelines until May when a major buying opportunity appears to be shaping up.

The market trend is encouraging although still not impressive in the face of spiraling interest rates and a hike in the prime, says A. W. Zelomek Associates, Inc. "There is a tendency to conclude already that we are bottoming out in the latest decline," the firm continues, but Wall Street is not "out of the woods" entirely. It recommends holding on to prime securities for the long-term against a backdrops of slightly improved economic indicators for February and March.

By United Press International

Today is Thursday, Aprl 18, the 108th day of 1974 with 257 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase.

The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Mars and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aries.

Famed symphony conductor Leopold Stokowski was born April 18, 1882.

On this day in history:

In 1775, American patriot Paul Revere began his famed ride through the Massachusetts countryside calling out "...The British are coming!"

In 1906, the San Francisco earthquake began. When it was over three days later, almost 500 persons were dead and more than a quarter of a million left homeless.

In 1942, Lt. Col. James Doolittle and a squadron of 16 B25s bombed Japan for the first time in World War II.

In 1964, 17 servicemen were killed when two U.S. troop planes collided over Ohio.

A thought for the day: British stateman John Selden said, "They that govern the most make the least noise."

Hamster's peculiar attacks are normal

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Scurry, my hamster, worries me. She's had several of these strange trance-like attacks now. To describe: She seems to sort of get completely rigid. Her back gets stiff, her tail becomes erect and stiff, her ears perk up and stay that way, and she just stares straight ahead. Sometimes this lasts for five minutes, sometimes for ten. It's all very strange and sort of frightening. It even makes Blacky, my dog, nervous. Blacky's mother had epilepsy but it was never like that. What would it be, exactly? —D.O.

Dear D.O.: Scurry's trance-like states aren't really all that strange. Certainly they would be to another hamster, particularly a male. Scurry's display is actually an indication of her willingness to mate. At about this same time, and just in case any male hamster in the area might not be looking her way, the typical female hamster will also send up ultra high-pitched sounds, a sort of miniaturized, high-pitched, wolf signal in reverse, so she can catch if not the eye, then the ear, of any meandering male. Blacky may be picking up on Scurry's sound signals and perhaps even your apprehension.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Sherman and Tigre, my salamanders, are set up in a large terrarium and they seem to like it. The only problem is the terrarium plants aren't doing too well. The terrarium never gets any sun, so maybe that's the reason. Can those plants grow without it? How much light do they need? —A.C.

Dear A.C.: Two 40-watt fluorescent tubes used for 12 to 16 hours a day should provide excellent lighting for your plants. There are now even special fluorescent tubes to duplicate natural lighting conditions which can do even more toward stimulating plant growth.

DEAR DR. MILLER: It was terrible. But I am writing so others won't do the same. My dog started to get very sick. He vomited several times and I thought he might have picked up a poison. I was going to take him into the doctor but then he snapped out of it and seemed all right the rest of the day so I didn't bother. The next morning he was dying. I rushed him in but the doctor couldn't save him. Please tell people if they think their dog has been poisoned to always have him checked even if he seems all right afterward. —D.E.

COMMENT: You just did. Thank you and you're quite right.

Angels, Dodgers setting hot pace

Oliver, Robby hit homers

By BILL LANGLEY
P-B sports Editor

ANAHEIM — Inspired by his California Angel teammates, Bob Oliver has joined the parade of power hitters.

Oliver, who had not hit a home run in the Angels' first 11 games despite enjoying a .308 batting average, belted two round trippers Wednesday night to help give the Halos a 5-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins at Anaheim Stadium to restore the Angels' two-game lead in the American League West.

"It's encouraging to see the others hitting so well," Oliver told the writers. "It inspires me. I figure if they can do it, I can do it too."

Besides Oliver's pair of homers off Minnesota starter Dick Woodson, slugger Frank Robinson connected for his fourth of the campaign and 556th of his career to tie the score in the sixth inning.

The Angels took advantage of a key Minnesota error to score two unearned runs in the seventh inning to enjoy their eighth win in 11 games.

"We have a tough batting lineup from (Mickey) Rivers leading off to the bottom," Angel manager Bobby Winkles said."It's tough to pitch around us, especially if (Mike) Epstein starts coming around. I'm glad to see Oliver bust out of it and Robinson showed his strength. You know he hit that home run off the end of the bat."

Besides the solo blasts in the second and fourth inning, Oliver also helped the Angel cause with a couple of sparkling plays at third base.

The most spectacular was when he threw out speedster Sergio Ferrer in the third inning after diving for the ball and throwing while on his knees.

Tight defense, strong pitching and improved power has carried the Angels to the top of the West standings. Thanks to Oliver, Robinson, Lee Stanton, Joe Lahoud and Epstein, the Halos have already hit 13 home runs this season to only seven at the same point last year.

Winkles was delighted with the pitching Wednesday.

Despite being knocked out in the fifth inning, newcomer Bill Stoneman impressed Winkles. Reliever Dave Sells, making his first appearance of the season, blanked the Twins the rest of the way to prove there are some good arms in the bullpen.

"I'm happy with Stoneman," Winkles said."He pitched well until he ran out of gas. This is probably the longest (4 1-3 innings) he has pitched since last July or August. And Sells was simply outstanding."

The Angels purchased Stoneman, a former Mt. San Antonio College pitcher, on April 5 from the Montreal Expos. Stoneman pitched two no-hitters for the Expos but suffered a rough season last year because of a variety of arm ailments.

Minnesota scored two runs on four hits in the fourth inning and added a third tally in the fifth when Rod Carew singled to score Ferrer for a temporary 3-2 lead.

Sells allowed three harmless singles the rest of the way.

"I've been trying to throw every day in the bullpen," Sells said about his first outing since spring training. "I had to get the guys to stand up there and simulate a real game."

The Angels scored their winning runs in the seventh after Ellie Rodriquez and Dave Chalk singled to knock Woodson from the game. Reliever Tom Burgmeier got Rivers to hit a pop-up in short left field but shortstop Ferrer dropped the ball to enable Rodriquez to score. Bobby Valentine's sacrifice fly brought Chalk home for an insurance tally.

ANGEL ANGLES— Ray Corbin (1-0) was a last-minute substitute for Bert Blyleven for the Twins in today's 1 p.m. game against Angel rookie Frank Tanana (2-0). Blyleven, Minnesota's ace, was scratched because of a stiffness in his shoulder . . .

After today's game, the Angels depart for an 11-game trip to Oakland, Baltimore, Cleveland and Boston. The games from Oakland will be televised on Channel 5 at 8 p.m. Friday and 1:30 p.m. Saturday but not on Sunday . . .

Robinson added five total bases Wednesday night to raise his career total to 5,104 to surpass Tris Speaker for sixth place on the all-time list behind Hank Aaron, Stan Musial, Willie Mays, Babe Ruth and Ty Cobb. Robby also stole his 200th base . . .

Oliver has hit 39 homers for the Angels, the 10th highest total in the club's history . . .

Catcher Rodriquez threw out Carew trying to steal in the third inning for his fifth this season. The opposition has only been successful once.

RIGHT TO THE BODY

Pomona's Darrell Huntley (left) takes a blow to the body, but scored a unanimous decision over Grant Belcher in the novice 165-pound semifinals of the AAU Regionals at the fairgrounds Wednesday.

Garvey, Wynn lead Dodgers to 14-1 romp

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Steve Garvey refers to his winding up a Los Angeles Dodger player as "one of the great nostalgia stories of baseball."

Garvey's dad is a bus driver and has chauffered the Dodgers around the Florida Grapefruit League since Steve was six years old.

'Gil Hodges, Carl Furillo and all the other Dodger players of that era were my heroes," recalled Garvey Wednesday night.

After Garvey's sophomore year at Michigan State he was drafted as a free agent by the Dodgers.

"Just think. The odds on that happening were 24-1," said Steve after his two homers and one by Jimmy Wynn led the Dodgers to a 14-1 victory and a sweep of a two-game series with the Cincinnati Reds.

There's a new look about Wynn this season and it's not just because he has exchanged a Houston Astro uniform for that of the Dodgers.

The former Cincinnati Taft High School athlete is supporting a mustache and a beard this season.

"But that's not the reason for the six homers and the 17 RBI's I already have," said a laughing Wynn. "I am no Samson. I've just got the mustache and the beard because my wife likes them."

"Six homers and 17 RBI's," mused Garvey, "that's a good season for some guys."

Garvey deserves a pat on the back himself. After 12 games his statistics are almost as impressive as those of Wynn.

Garvey's homers Wednesday night were his third and fourth of the season. He added a single and drove home four runs to boost his total to 11.

Lefthander Doug Rau and Mike Marshall teamed up to limit the Reds to four hits, one a homer by George Foster, as the Dodgers completed the sweep.

Altogether the Dodgers tatooed Roger Nelson and his three successors for 17 hits.

"That was a 2-1 ballgame until the 7th inning," muttered Reds' Manager Sparky Anderson.

Memory of the Dodgers scoring four runs in each of the last three innings made Sparky wince.

The Reds had to wince remembering that Wynn was plucked out of their organization in the minor league draft back in 1962 by the Houston Astros for a measly $8,000.

Wynn had just completed his first year of pro baseball, batting .290 for the Tampa, Fla., farm club. The Reds had left him unprotected, but obviously hadn't crossed their fingers for good luck.

At the time Wynn was unhappy about being drafted.

"Later I realized it was a break for me because if I had stayed with the Reds I would have never gotten to the majors as quickly as I did. They had Frank Robinson, Vada Pinson and Tommy Harper in those days."

The Reds tried to get Wynn back from the Astros in the winter of 1965, offering Robinson as bait.

"I was aware of the proposed trade," said Wynn. "And I was real flattered when Houston didn't trade me because at the time I wasn't an established player and Robinson had been doing his thing for years and years."

City boxers win in semis

By MIKE RAWLINSON
P-B Staff Writer

POMONA — Two young city boxers fought their way into the finals of the Southern Pacific Association's (AAU) Regional Boxing Championships at the L.A. County Fairgrounds Saturday in semifinals Wednesday night.

Four Pomonans in all will be battling for berths in the AAU National Championships at Knoxville, Tenn. in June. A fifth Pomona fighter, Albert Sandoval, a freshman at Cal Poly University, and the defending regional and national 106-pound champion, advanced to this year's nationals by default.

Coach Tony Cerda said Sandoval was unable to find opponents for the opening and semifinal rounds of the regionals at the fairgrounds, but may fight an exhibition with an as yet unnamed opponent in Saturday's finals.

All five Pomonans fight out of the Sacred Heart Athletic Club and are coached by Cerda.

Darrell Huntley, a 165-pound novice, opened the show Wednesday with a unanimous decision over Grant Belcher of Buena Park's Stanton Athletic Club. Huntley will fight Bert Hunter of National City for the 165-pound title Saturday night.

Chip Larson followed Huntley's victory with an impressive showing in the open 132-pound class, knocking Arturo Reyes of San Diego down three times before the referee stopped the fight in the third and final round, awarding Larson a technical knockout. Larson will battle Juan Segura of Gardena for the 132-pound title Saturday.

In other semifinal matches Wednesday, Martin Yniquez of Riverside scored a split decision over John Staggs of Modesto in the 139-pound open class. Yniquez will square off with Chris Carrillo of Los Angeles in Saturday's finals. Carrillo outpointed Rafael Presiado to score a split decision Wednesday.

In the 178-pound class, Reginald Phillips of Los Angeles scored a unanimous decision over Hawthorne's Eugene Meira. Phillips will tangle with Monsour Sarfaroz for the 178-pound title in the finals.

Four novice titles were also decided Wednesday in the 125, 139, 147 and 156-pound classes. The four winners advance to the nationals.

Sammy Yniguez of Riverside won the 125-pound class with a unanimous decision over Sammy Hernandez of Placentia. In the 139-pound class it was Bobby Serna winning on a split decision over Danny Lira of Los Angeles. The 147-pound title went to Alfred Gonzalez of Santa Ana on a split decision over Felix Maldonado of Hawthorne. In the 156-pound class Alvaro Lopez of Los Angeles won the crown on a split decision over Leo Banuelos.

Tickets for Saturday's finals, which get underway at 8 p.m. in building 7A at the fairgrounds are on sale today and Friday from 3-7 p.m. at the main gate.

Tickets are scaled at $5 for reserved ringside seats and $3 for general admission. Youngsters under 16 may purchase ringside and general admission tickets for half price.

Rangers can eliminate Canadiens from playoffs

By United Press International

The New York Rangers, given up for dead by their fans just a few days ago, can eliminate the defending Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens tonight while Boston is host to Chicago in the opener of their semifinal round.

The Rangers, who have gone 34 years since last winning the Cup, appeared to be out of the running again last Sunday afternoon when they were down in games, 2-1, and were trailing Montreal 3-1 in the fourth contest. But they rallied for a 6-4 victory in the nationally televised contest, then won, 3-2, in an overtime thriller at Montreal Tuesday night.

This gave New York a 3-2 advantage in games and a chance to move into the semifinals against Philadelphia with just one more victory over the Canadiens. New York will have the home ice advantage tonight but if the Canadiens win, the series will shift back to Montreal for the seventh game Saturday night.

Boston and Chicago, meanwhile, had fairly easy passage into the semis. The Bruins wiped out Toronto in four games in their opening set and the Black Hawks disposed of Los Angeles in five. The Flyers also enjoyed a four-game sweep against Atlanta.

Bruce MacGregor and Ron Harris have been the unexpected heroes for the Rangers. MacGregor scored the tying goal with only 16 seconds left to play in regulation time on Tuesday night—his fifth goal of the series—and Harris' gamewinner was his second goal in as many games, equalling his entire season's output.

Boston, after sitting around since Sunday, is happy about returning to action tonight.

"If we had to wait around until maybe Sunday, it wouldn't have been so good," said the Bruins' Ken Hodge. "After a while you worry about losing momentum."

Erving shows his talent

By United Press International

If the Kentucky Colonels had any doubts about Julius Erving's right to the American Basketball Association's Most Valuable Player Award this year, they were put to rest Wednesday night.

Erving pulled up and fired in an off-balanced 20-foot jumpshot at the buzzer to give the New York Nets an 89-87 victory over the Colonels and a 3-0 lead in their ABA Eastern Division championship playoff series.

The game-winning basket climaxed a brilliant clutch performance by Erving as he scored eight of the Nets' last 12 points, including a driving stuff shot that put them ahead for the first time at 83-81. He finished with a game-high 30 points, the third straight playoff game in which he has been high scorer, and 14 rebounds.

While the Nets pulled to a 3-0 lead over Kentucky, Utah gained a similar advantage over Indiana in the Western title playoff by scoring eight straight points early in the fourth period to break open a close game and earn a 99-90 victory.

Indiana, the defending ABA champion, played without highscoring forward Roger Brown, out with a leg injury.

Top women golfers eye richest purse

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Perennial moneywinning leader Kathy Whitworth and 50 other top pros set out today after the richest prize in women's golf history in the LPGA's $200,000 Colgate-Dinah Shore Winners Circle championship.

The 72-hole tournament over the 6,240-yard, par-72 Mission Hills Golf and Country Club course concludes Sunday.

In what is sometimes called the Women's Masters, the tourney features women who have placed third or better in an LPGA event the last three years, winners of the past 10 years, and members of the LPGA Hall of Fame.

Defending champion Mickey Wright, recovering from a foot operation, has guaranteed a new titleholder this year by her absence. She beat Joyce Kazmierski last year with a 25-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole.

Miss Whitworth, a pro since 1958 and the No. 1 moneywinner on the LPGA tour in eight of the last nine seasons, heads a field which also includes Jane Blalock, Carol Mann, Sandra Palmer, Miss Kazmierski, Donna Caponi Young, Judy Rankin, Sandra Haynie and 18-year-old hopeful Laura Baugh.

Miss Blalock captured the event the previous two years while Miss Mann is the current money leader this season, having been the only player to win two tournaments of the seven that have been played.

The winner will earn $32,000 and a new car. Second place is worth $21,000 and third $14,000.

Tuesday's pro-am was won by Pam Higgins, actor Robert Stack, Phil Beekman, and Richard George.

Muniz fights Marco Gerardo

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Busy Los Angeles welterweight Armando Muniz will face Mexico's Marco Gerardo in a 10-rounder at the Olympic Auditorium tonight.

Muniz goes into the bout with a 31-6-1 record, including 21 knockouts.

He hopes to get a rematch with another Mexican welterweight, Zovek Barajas. Barajas scored a split decision win over Muniz last year.

ABA clubs must now try to sign draft picks

NEW YORK (UPI) — Calling out names of college players and those from the rosters of the National Basketball Association was easy, now comes the hard part for the would-be body snatchers of the American Basketball Associaton: signing the players.

In addition to the college draft, 50 NBA names were also selected by the 10 ABA teams Wednesday in what was billed as the first-ever open draft of NBA players. But it may amount to little more than a publicity ploy if the ABA doesn't actively pursue them and the private feeling among the coaches, general managers and owners at the draft was that they'll be lucky if they can land more than a half-dozen.

The Utah Stars provided a surprise of their own when they selected a high school player, 6-foot-11 Moses Malone of Petersburg, Va., who was tabbed in the college draft.

Malone, the most sought after prep player in the nation, was not the first high school player to be drafted by the pros but was the first since Wilt Chamberlain was selected by Eddie Gottlieb of the old Philadelphia Warriors out of Overbrook H.S. in Philadelphia in 1954.

The ABA clubs also announced the results of their secret college draft held recently and then picked up with the third round.

Among the top collegians drafted by the teams were: Virginia—Tom McMillen, Maryland and Jan van Breda Kolff, Vanderbilt; Memphis — Scott Wedman, Colorado and Clarence Walker, West Georgia; Denver—Fly Williams, Austin Peay and Frank Kendrick, Purdue; San Diego—Major Jones, Albany (Ga.) St., and Cliff Pondexter, Long Beach St.; San Antonio — Leonard Robinson, Tennessee State and Colis Temple, LSU; Indiana— Billy Knight, Pittsburgh and Bruce King, Pan American; Carolina—John Lucas, Maryland and Gus Gerard, Virginia; Utah—Joe Merriweather, Southern Illinois and Len Kosmalski, Tennessee; Kentucky—Al Eberhard, Missouri and Sammy High, Tulsa; New York—Brian Winter, South Carolina and Rich Kelly, Stanford.

San Diego drafted Bill Walton last year as a future pick and still retain the rights to the UCLA center.

"I'd be happy if we got even a few good players," said ABA Commissioner Mike Storen when asked about the ABA's attempted raid of the NBA. "We held this draft in order to organize our efforts in regard to NBA players. We haven't been signing any in the last few years and hopefully we'll be able to come away with a few now. At least now the players, if they're interested, will know which teams to contact and the teams will limit their efforts to certain players."

Only one team, San Diego, has a real chance of landing a player of star quality—Golden State's Cazzie Russell. The slick-shooting 6-foot 5 forward has played out his obligation to the Warriors and, if Conquistador owner Dr. Leonard Bloom can raise about a million dollars, Russell may jump for a multi-year contract.

Carolina could pursuade Atlanta to release Pete Maravich, their high-priced but unhappy star guard. The Hawks may be willing to drop Maravich, who is committed to them for at least another two years, from their payroll for a high enough bonus. Both player and club are rumored to be at odds with each other.

Butch van Breda Kolff, general manager and coach of the Memphis Tams, laughed when someone suggested the ABA might really be accomplishing something with this draft.

"We've had their names for seven years and now all of a sudden we're going to sign them because we got a room set up, put up a red, white and blue sign and called out their names."

Poly holds scrimmage this evening

POMONA — Football fans will be able to take their first look at Cal Poly's "new look" grid forces this evening from 7 to 9 p.m.

Coach Andy Vinci plans a game-type scrimmage with 12 minute quarters and with two groups divided into offensive and defensive units for the full workout. Films will be taken to allow the coaching staff a better evaluation of the players.

"We're still looking at people to get a better idea of how last year's Bronco players and the new junior college transfers are stacking up," says Vinci. "But we're pleased with the enthusiasm and that most of the players are eager to hit.

"There is some lack of intensity and concentration over a long period of time but this is probably due to not knowing assignments of the new system. The work of offensive linemen is a plus and so far the quality of running backs is a minus."

Some of the players who have caught the eye of Cal Poly coaches in the first week of spring drills are offensive guards Vecnon Smith and Jack Murry, offensive tackles Len Latham and Randy Taylor, defensive tackle Charlie Grimes, linebacker Mark Mahan, defensive guard Randy-Daniel, center Ken LaVigne, and defensive backs Paul Russell, Ron Stewart and Scott Sanders.

The Broncs' fine quarterback of last season, Jim Zorn, and wide receiver Joe Fabian also have been impressive.

The entire spring session will wind up May 11 with a game against the Alumni.

Hitters dominate Valley statistics

The hitters continue to dominate the pitchers in the P-B hitting, pitching derby for four-year colleges.

Pomona-Pitzer's Biff Sherman raised his average 15 points, from .528 to .543 through last Saturday to take a 65 point lead over La Verne's Mike Alonso (.478).

Although not having anyone in the .500 class, Claremont-Mudd, headed by Wynn Moore's .416, has four of the top 10 batters. La Verne has three, APC two and Pomona-Pitzer one (Sherman).

Chuck Van Schoych of Azusa Pacific is the runs batted in leader with 37. Alonso leads in home runs with eight.

Cal Poly, with no hitters in the top 10, has three of the top 10 pitchers in Vic Bernal, Dee King and John Riddle. La Verne also has three including the leader, John Verhoeven.

Only Mike Jones of Azusa Pacific (2.42) was able to break the Leopards' domination. Verhoevn's 0.77 is way in front of everyone. Teammates Robb Mayhew (2.50) and Dan Quisenberry (2.75) are third and fourth.

Stags rip Sagehens to share lead

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

CLAREMONT — After 24 hours in second place, Claremont-Mudd's baseball team is back in a tie for first place with La Verne.

The Stags (6-1) rolled to an easy 12-2 win Wednesday over outclassed Pomona-Pitzer (0-7) on the Pomona diamond. Ed Matta (5-4) kept 10 hits, all singles, well scattered except for the sixth inning.

The Sagehens got four of their hits in the sixth and scored their second and last run of the game. Another run, in the person of Biff Sherman, was thrown out at the plate on a good play by centerfielder Wynn Moore of C-M.

Sherman, hitting .543 going into the game, went 2-for-4 but saw his average drop three points . . . Moore, top hitter for the Stags, went 0-for-4 and saw his average plummet 51 points, from .416 to .365.

Claremont-Mudd took a 2-0 lead in the first inning. The Stags combined a leadoff double by Andy Roundtree and two-out singles by Brad Koppel and Steve Lopez with two P-P errors.

The 'Hens committed two more errors in the fourth and the Stags took full advantage of them to score two more runs without benefit of a hit.

Pomona-Pitzer scored its first run in the fifth inning. Matta, who struck out seven, issue his only walk of the contest and C-M contributed one of its two errors to go along with Dave Dickter's single.

Claremont-Mudd broke the game open with four runs in the sixth. Dave Lane replaced David Jones (4-5) on the mound for the Sagehens.

Lane threw 13 pitches and 12 of them were balls. Two were wild pitches. Jon Blacker replaced Lane and came in to pitch to Bob Turek with a run in, Greg Thompson on third and Gary Burger on first with nobody out.

On Blacker's second pitch, Burger broke for second and beat Sherman's throw. Thompson belatedly broke for home and stopped short when he saw the return throw to the plate beat him easily.

A rundown ensued with Sherman and third baseman Bob Hoehn playing catch with each other while trying to run Thompson down. Blacker got into the act taking Hoen's throw. By this time, Burger had moved to third himself thinking Thompson would be caught. Blacker's awkward throw to Hoehn was wild and both Tompson and Burger raced home.

Turek then doubled. Roundtree slammed his second double to drive in Turek. Blacker then settled down and got out of the inning without further damage.

The Stags added four more runs in the ninth on five hits including doubles by Burger and Gary Rattet. Jon Begerow, Bob Ingram and Tom Condon chipped in singles.

The two teams will play two games at Claremont-Mudd Saturday.

Wallace leads Azusa Pacific win

AZUSA — John Wallace dashed his way to three first place finished and ran on Azusa Pacific's winning relay teams Wednesday afternoon as APC ripped Chapman 108½-34½.

The win marked the sixth straight track victory for the Cougars, after opening the season with a loss, and prepares them for Friday's quadrangular meet with UC Riverside, CS Bakersfield and Redlands.

Wallace paved the way for his fellow tracksters by capturing the 440 (51.9), the triple jump (41-6½) and the long jump (22-2¾). He then ran on APC's winning 440 relay team and victorious mile relay team, along with Dan Woodward—who also won the 880—and Paul Cook, who added a first in the mile.

The other multiple win was turned in by Dave Stanley, who notched a win in the shot put (45-9) and the discus.

Mitterwald didn't enjoy 'take' sign

By United Press International

George Mitterwald has no regrets about his three-homer, eight-RBI game but he wishes he hadn't seen that "take sign" flashed by Manager Whitey Lockman of the Chicago Cubs.

If he hadn't been on the alert, he thinks he might now be the eighth player in modern baseball history to hit four homers in one game. As it is he is one of many, as they say in the record books, to hit three homers in a game since the turn of the century.

Mitterwald, acquired by the Cubs from the Minnesota Twins in a winter trade, hit three homers, including a grand slam, and drove in eight runs Wednesday as the Cubs downed the Pittsburgh Pirates, 18-9.

"I saw a good pitch to hit when the 'take sign' was on," said Mitterwald. "The first homer was on a hanging curve and the others on fast balls. After that I tried not to think of home runs but the last time I was at bat I was thinking of it constantly. Not too many guys have hit four in one game."

Mitterwald laid off "the good pitch" in the fourth inning during which the Cubs scored five runs to build their lead to 15-4. He eventually walked, forcing in a run in that inning and doubled in his final appearance at the plate.

Phils 12 Cards 5

Mike Anderson drove in three runs with two singles, a double and a homer as the Phillies won their sixth straight game, their longest winning streak since April, 1970. The Phillies blew open the game with a four-run third inning, paving the way for middle-inning reliever George Culver to win his first game and Sonny Siebert to take the loss.

Astros 3 Giants 2

Dave Kingman's sixth-inning throwing error enabled Bob Gallagher to score the winning run in the Astros' triumph over the Giants. Claude Osteen won his second game with relief help from Ken Forsch. Cesar Cedeno hit his second homer of the season for the Astros.

Expos 7 Mets 4

Steve Rogers pitched a six-hitter and Tim Foli drove in three runs with a pair of singles as the Expos handed the Mets their sixth straight defeat. It was the second consecutive win for Rogers, who struck out five and walked two. Dave Schneck drove in four runs with two homers for the Mets.

Padres 6 Braves 1

Jim McAndrew scattered 10 hits for his first win for San Diego which scored four runs in the third inning with the help of two-run singles by John Grubbs and Fred Kendall. Carl Morton suffered the loss for the Braves. Hank Aaron did not play.

Orioles 6, Tigers 1

Jim Fuller's two-run homer highlighted a five-run first inning which carried the Orioles past the Tigers. Jim Palmer got the victory on a five-hitter. Woody Fryman lasted two-thirds of an inning and took the loss.

Red Sox 4 Yanks 3

Boston didn't get a hit until the seventh inning off Pat Dobson but scored two runs in that inning and two more in the eighth to win. Carl Yastrzemski started Boston's comeback with a homer in the seventh for the first Red Sox hit.

Rangers 4 Royals 2

Texas scored three runs in the eighth to beat Kansas City. Jeff Burroughs' double and Tom Grieve's triple highlighted the rally. Jim Bibby, 3-1, got the win while Gene Garber took the loss in relief of Nelson Briles.

White Sox 5 A's 3

Brian Dowsing's two-run homer in the eighth inning lifted Chicago past Oakland Downing was filling in for injured Ed Herrmann The triumph snapped a three-game White Sox losing string

Brewers 5, Indians 4

Gaylor Perry worked 15 innings but had nothing to show for it when Bob Coluccio of the Brewers — the firt batter to face Perry's replacement, Ken Sanders, in the 16th inning — homered. Perry had a 4-2 lead with one out in the ninth when Pedro Garcia slammed a two-run homer to send the game into extra innings.

SAL baseball teams enter second round of league play

By CRAIG TRAVIS
P-B Staff Writer

Round two gets underway in the San Antonio League Friday while the Hacienda League will be completing their first week in the second round.

Upland and Montclair enter the second half of the season deadlocked for the SAL lead with 6-1 slates while Damien is still breathing down their necks at 5-2.

Upland's only loss was a 5-3 decision while the Cavs' lone setback came at the hands of Damien 6-5. The Spartans lost to Upland 3-2 and Claremont by the same score.

Which makes the Claremont-Damien battle a good way to begin the second time around.

The Wolfpack (9-8, 3-4) will send pitcher and new hitting star Harry Brown (3-3, 1-1) to the mound against Damien's top hurler, Larry Pekarcik (7-0, 4-0).

Brown, who was named Outstanding Player of the Pomona Elks Tournament a week ago with a 615 batting mark (8-for-13), collected two hits in Tuesday's 6-0 win over Ganesha.

Pekarcik has turned in one-hitters in each of his last three SAL starts.

Claremont won the first round meeting 3-2, scoring twice in the last of the seventh. Brown picked up the win.

In other action, Pomona (4-11, 3-4) will send John Wieman (1-2, 1-1) to the mound and oppose Montclair's Mike Medeiros (3-2, 2-0).

The Red Devil offense is sparked by lead-off hitter Jim Price, batting .500 with 10 hits in 20 at bats.

Chino (10-7, 3-4) will send either Mike Coppess (3-3, 1-1), Jerry Belmudes (3-1, 1-0) or Stan Surina (3-0, 1-0) to the hill when the Cowboys visit Garey.

The Vikings (1-14, 1-6) will start either Dan Ross (0-4, -02) or Bruce Black (0-1, 0-0). Robbie Franklin, who had two hits, provides the offense.

Upland, with righthander Rich Phillips (4-0, 2-0) getting the starting nod, travels to Ganesha (2-13, 1-6) to tackle Ruben Ruiz (1-8, 1-3). Tracey Cowger supplies the offense for the Giants while the Scots look to Stu DuVall (.316), Dale Arneson (.308) and Russ Feaster (.295).

Bonita and Alta Loma fit the ball as the top game in the Hacienda loop.

The Bearcats (13-6, 7-1) will pull out all stops to win the game, by sending ace Bill Bumstead (9-1, 6-0) to the mound.

The sophomore righthander has allowed just two earned runs in 35 innings for an 0.40 earned run average against league opposition.

The Braves (5-2) will counter with their top hurlder Kevin Bell.

Bonita topped Alta Loma in their first meeting 4-0 as Bumstead fired a no-hitter and Richard Ortega collected three doubles.

Shortstop Bruce McNaught is batting .450 (9-for-20) while Bumstead has chimed in with eight hits in 20 trips for a .400 mark.

Walnut (8-8, 3-5), enjoying a modest two-game win streak, hosts Gladstone (5-3) in an important HL game.

The Mustangs are a revamped team with the return of Lance Parrish, who has driven in seven runs in the past three games.

The Glads have been in the thick of the race all season but Tuesday's 10-9 loss to Alta Loma dropped them two games back.

The other matchup pits San Dimas (7-7, 4-4) against always tough Royal Oak (5-3).

The Saints have been unable to get any kind of a winning string together and find themselves three games off Bonita's pace. The Romans, after starting the season with a pair of losses, came back with five wins in a row, but lost Tuesday's game to Walnut 5-3.

Chaffey High uses win to increase CBL lead

SAN BERNARDINO — Just one week ago Pacific High visited the Pomona Valley and surprised 32 high school baseball teams by capturing the Pomona Elks Baseball Tournament.

But Chaffey High didn't let a little matter of a tourney win affect them Wednesday afternoon as the Tigers nipped the Pirates, 4-2, in 11 innings.

The win keeps Chaffey in the front running of the CBL with a 7-0 mark (15-5 on the year) while upstarts of Pacific dipped to 2-6-1.

Wally Reed, Larry Jones and Rick Blackman led off the 11th frame with singles to load the bases. Dana DeMuth lifted his second scoring fly ball of the game to give the Tigers the go-ahead run.

Reliever and winning pitcher Harley Stark then followed suit with another sacrifice fly to give the visitors the 4-2 margin.

The aces of each staff drew the starting assignment with Chaffey's Larry Garcia, unbeaten in six CBL decisions,went eight innings allowing two runs (one earned). Dave Maki hurled a scoreless ninth and Larry Jones pitched to one batter in the 10th.

Stark then replaced Jones on the hill and retired the Pirates in the next two frames to earn his second win of the year, first in league play.

Inland and late seasons

May cut deer hunt

SACRAMENTO — The California Fish and Game Commission has received recommendations from the Department of Fish and Game that would cut back inland and late deer hunting seasons and tighten restrictions on taking furbearers.

Commissioners received recommendations from the DFG, sportsmen and the general public for 1974-75 hunting regulations for mammals and furbearers April 5 in the first of three regatory meetings that will culminate in adoption of new rules May 31 in Los Angeles.

DFG Director Ray Arnett said that inland and late deer hunting seasons would open a week later than last year under the proposal to keep openings from falling during periods of extreme fire hazard and to reduce the harvest under conditions of declining deer numbers and deteriorating habitat.

In addition, the late season would close a week earlier than in 1973, limiting the hunt to five weeks.

Recommendations for regulations changes on taking furbearing mammals would extend to the entire state limited and closed seasons on muskrat and beaver. In addition, bobcat would be removed from the nongame list of animals that could be taken at any time and a limited season would be established.

Other DFG-suggested regulations changes would outlaw some steel jawed and all killer-type traps and the use of nonregistered traps for taking furbearers commercially, and would require removal of animals from traps once every 24 hours.

The DFG also recommended that Inyo County be returned to the general season area for rabbits because of improved forage conditions in desert areas and a resurgence of rabbit populations.

Oral recommendations were received from the California Houndsmen for Conservation, Capco Lake Sportsmen's Associaion, Associated Sportsmen of California, Dye Creek Preserve, California Guides Association, National Sportsmen's Association, Yolo Sportsmen's Association, Knights Landing Sportsmen's Club, California Wildlife Federation and the Mother Lode Houndsmen.

Most of the public recommendations were for later deer seasons. Houndsmen's organizations sought more liberal bear seasons and bag limits.

In addition, there were written recommendations from dozens of groups and individuals, most of them pertaining to deer seasons. Four organizations and 57 individuals requested a muzzleloading rifle deer season.

Hot line set for warning

LONG BEACH — A hot line to the Department of Fish and Game has been set up to warn of the intended use of the pesticide Furadan by California farmers.

Establishment of the hot line by the Department of Food and Agriculture follows by three weeks the deaths of 2,450 grazing ducks on March 14 in Riverside County. The deaths were attributed to Furadan which had been used to spray an alfalfa field for control of weevils.

By letter Friday the Department of Food and Agriculture instructed all county agricultural commissioners to consult with the Department of Fish and Game Pesticide Investigation Section in Sacramento prior to use of Furadan by a farmer within their jurisdiction before April 14 of each year.

In the case of Lassen and Modoc counties consultations must be made throughout the year.

Department of Fish and Game officials had advised the Department of Food and Agriculture that with the exception of Modoc and Lassen counties grazing ducks and geese will normally have departed the state by April 15.

Plenty to see and do at Sportsmen's show

LOS ANGELES — Werner Buck's big Sportsmen's, Vacation & Travel Show, now in its 29th year, opened a ten-day-run last Friday at Los Angeles Convention Center.

Something new has been added to this family-oriented outdoors spectacular: In addition to learning all about hunting, fishing, travel, recreational areas and such, visitors can actually participate with experts in a number of outdoor-indoor sports activities.

A visitor, for example, may be able to play a bit of pool with former pocket billiards champ, Willie Mosconi. Or try his skill in sinking baskets against Ted St. Martin, world's greatest basketball free thrower. Or, if he's a member of a 6-man volleyball team, try beating Bob Schaffer, the extraordinary one-man volleyball team. Then, if he's a paddle tennis fan, he may be able to enter the Invitational Paddle Tennis Tournament, which runs all during the show.

For the ardent fisherman, the show is a dream come true. 28 of the leading manufacturers of fishing tackle will be exhibiting their latest wares in an expanded Tackle Row with half a million dollars worth of gorgeous rods, the new est and best, on display along with a pair of fly casting ponds. As additional bonuses for lovers of Izaak Walton, golfer Billy Casper, a fine fisherman, will conduct a Deep Sea Fishing Clinic. Slim Pickens, the cowboy star, will also guide visitors through a Trout Fishing Clinic.

Additional attractions include Bicycle, Backpacking and Archery Clinics, manned by experts, and demonstration-lectures on mountain climbing by a young conqueror of Everest and Anapurna in Nepal. For the sedentary, a Book Nook will display a great lineup of outdoor books; a Travel Film Festival and scores of booths and exhibits will be devoted to information regarding travel and resorts, both national and foreign, from California all the way to the USSR.

All this for but $2 for adults, $1 for youngsters 6 to 12 and for kids younger, free. Hours: 2 to 10 PM weekdays; Noon to 10:30 PM Saturdays; Noon to 7:30 PM Sundays.

Top spots up for grabs in JC track

Mt. San Antonio College will be fighting to hold onto second place in the South Coast Conference track race, and Citrus will be hoping for a small miracle in its quest for a tie for first place in the Mission Conference Friday afternoon.

Both schools, plus Chaffey, will be competing in conference action Friday after taking a week off during the Easter Vacation.

MSAC, after suffering its first conference dual meet loss in six years to Fullerton two weeks ago, will host San Diego Mesa at 3 p.m. in a battle of the two second place teams.

"Mesa feels they can handle us this week," stated Mountie assistant coach John Norton. "It should be a very competitive meet."

The meet with Mesa will complete the Mounties' dual meet season for this year.

Some of the top MSAC athletes to keep an eye on will include shot putter Scott Flox, javelin thrower Dave Krogh, high jumper Steve Miller, triple jumper Ehrich Scott and long jumper Stan Bland.

Chaffey will be hosting Citrus and Riverside in a double dual meet at 3 p.m., with Citrus hoping for an upset in the conferece.

"Grossmont and Palomar will face each other Friday," explained Citrus assistant coach Vince O'Boyle. "Grossmont (the defending conference champions) should beat Palomar, but if it doesn't turn out that way we'll have to beat Chaffey in order to get into a tie for first with Grossmont."

Citrus recently lost a hard-fought battle with the defending champs, with valley junior college athlete of the week Rick Wilmoth clocking blazing times in the 100 (9.4) and 220 (21.0).

"We keep telling our guys, 'If you think Chaffey will fall down and play dead you've got another think coming'" added O'Boyle. "I just hope they (Citrus athletes) have the Colorado River fever out of their blood after the vacation. If they don't we're going to have a tough time."

"It's going to be a difficult meet with Riverside and Citrus," stated Chaffey coach Chuck Hicks. "Citrus won its division in the Southern California Relays and we placed fourth. Riverside is on an unusual vacation and will only field a partial team."

Chaffey's top athletes include Dave Nugent of Norco, Tony Lewis of Chino and Matt and Mark Wagner of Chino.

Fullerton adds football aide

FULLERTON — Chuck Gallo, highly successful head football coach at Servite High School in Anaheim for the past two seasons, has been appointed offensive backfield coach at Cal State Fullerton, head coach Pete Yoder has announced. He succeeds Bill Griffin, who resigned to accept a position with the World Football League Portland Storm.

Gallo, 35, compiled a two-year record of 15-5-1 in his two seasons at Servite. The Friars are members of the Angelus League.

WFL names title game

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — The World Football League's first championship game —to be called the World Bowl—will be played in Honolulu Nov. 29 after the conclusion of its 20-game 1974 regular season, it was announced Wednesday.

Twelve teams will play in three regional divisions and the winners of the East, Central and West and the runner-up with the best record will compete Nov. 20-21 in the semifinal playoffs.

No exhibition games are planned.

"We are ready to open camp the first week of June on all fronts," WFL president Gary Davidson said.

Sun now shining for Poly baseballers

POMONA — Just when things get really bleak for Cal Poly's baseball team, the sun comes shining through.

It has happened several times before this season and each time coach John Scolinos' team has bounced back. The latest: The Broncos had a seven-game CCAA conference losing stteak before they trimmed UC Riverside twice last Saturday for a 4-9 league record.

Poly beat Loyola, 11-3, Tuesday in a non-conference game to build the season record to 16-19.

This week the Broncos face a return engagement with Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, a team they won two of three games from earlier in the year at San Luis Obispo. Cal Poly hosts the Mustangs Friday at 2:30 p.m. in a single game and then play a doubleheader here Saturday starting at noon.

The series, in addition to giving the Broncos an opportunity to start the long climb out of the CCAA cellar, will give pitcher Vic Bernal a chance to repeat his earlier no-hitter.

Bernal, who was expected to be a standout hurler for the Broncos, now has a 2-7 record for the season. But one of the two victories was back in early March when he blanked the Mustangs, 4-0.

Bernal will start Friday and then it will be Dee King, Mike Heinen or John Riddle in the doubleheader as the starting Bronco hurlers Saturday.

"I feel the double win over Riverside will help," Scolinos said. "We're starting to hit better and if our defense just doesn't betray us we'll be all right." Costly errors by the defense have hurt Cal Poly all season.

George Allen's pre-training camp session a major test in NFL talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A special pre-training camp practice session called by Washington Redskin coach George Allen a week from today may provide the first testing ground of a possible pro football players strike later in the year.

Allen has requested Redskins quarterbacks, receivers, running backs, centers, linebackers and defensive backs to turn out for three days of drills beginning next Thursday.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, predicted none will show up because contract talks between the association and the NFL owners have collapsed.

Garvey noted that similar pre-camp sessions have been cancelled at Kansas City, Houston, New Orleans and Denver since the bargaining negotiations broke off April 4.

"We can't insist that the players refuse to attend because we're not on strike," he observed. "But we tell them it would be foolish for them to attend."

Brig Owens, player representative for the Redskins and one of those invited to the drills by Allen, said he and his teammates have discussed the situation but did not disclose whether any final decision to boycott the practices has been made.

"I don't think anybody will be there and I don't think George anticipates anybody," Garvey said.

A Redskin spokesman said Allen was proceeding with plans to hold the three-day session.

Brazil flood

70,000 homeless

FORTALEZA, Brazil (UPI) — At least 70,000 persons are homeless and at least seven persons dead from floods that continue to devastate the northeastern state of Ceara, Gov. Cesar Cals said Tuesday.

Torrential rains have continued without letup since the weekend.

Large portions of the city of Iguatu in southern Ceara were beneath the waters of the Jaguaribe river, forcing approximately 10,000 persons to flee the city.

The neighboring cities of Limoeiro do Norte, Jaguaribe and Arati were partially flooded and the road that links the southern region of Ceara to its capital, Fortaleza was closed.

The city of Alto de Rodrigues, some 25 miles from Natal, capital of the state of Rio Grande do Norte, became an island after the Arari river flooded large portions of that city.

Holland feels oil embargo pressure less

THE HAGUE (UPI) — Premier Joop den Uyl says there are mounting signs of progress towards the lifting of the Arab oil embargo against Holland.

He told newsmen recently that "the climate blowing towards us from the oil producing countries is becoming milder."

He said he based his assessment on statements by Arab oil ministers.

"There is no trace of rancor against Holland," the Dutch leader said.

Fire destroys 'wheeler used in film

VICKSBURG, Ms. (UPI) — The 73-year-old paddlewheeler Sprague which was the setting for the motion picture "Showboat," has been destroyed by fire.

The largest sternwheeler ever built was engulfed in flames Monday night at its mooring in the Mississippi River and was called a "total loss" by Mayor Nat Bullard.

It had been converted into a tourist attraction on the waterfront and housed a museum, restaurant and theater, where "Gold in the Hills," a melodrama about life in the Gay 90's was staged each summer by the Vicksburg Little Theater.

"I felt like I was losing a member of my family," said Margie Rucker, who played the heroine Nell in the play, as she watched the smoulder-ing hulk of the Sprague.

The vessel was built at a cost of $300,000 is 1901, but Alderman Travis Vance said the Sprague's tourist value alone exceeded $500,000.

Tax reform

Money talks loud and with big clout

By JAMES S. BYRNE
(Second in a Series)

The movement for tax reform has been around for a long time, because for a long time people have perceived our tax system as being unfair. Now, because Congress seems likely that 1974-75 will be a good year for tax reform. The question is how thoroughly will the system be reformed.

The popular demand for tax reform arises from the fact that some rich people and rich corporations pay income taxes at very low rates — if at all.

While the basic federal tax system does generally impose a heavier burden on rich than on poor or middle-income people, many rich people do not pay high taxes because of special tax benefits for which they qualify.

Those benefits were not originally intended to make life easier for rich people—but rather to get them to do some activity which the government wanted done. But the effect of those benefits is to lower some rich people's—and corporations'—taxes.

On the facce of it, the incentive case is hard for a fair-minded Congressman to handle.How can one tell how much the government gets for its incentive money? Isn't it possible that reformers would throw out the baby with the bath water?

This year, Congress must deal with a significant test case that will tell a lot about the sincerity of its attitude. The case involves the percentage depletion allowance, probably the most controversial tax preference. It permits oil producers to subtract 22 per cent of their income from oil revenues before figuring taxes on the rest.

Up until 1973, the threat to the United States was that cheap foreign oil, if allowed to come in freely, would undercut the more expensive price of domestic oil and depress domestic industry. The defense against foreign imports was the since-abandoned quota system which severely limited the supply of the cheaper foreign oil. In addition, various tax incentives—particularly the percentage depletion allowance — were enacted to increase the after-tax profits of oil companies in the hope this would make them produce more domestic oil.

In 1973 the problem changed. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) raised the price to more than double the U.S. price. This pushed up the price of domestic oil. Thus, the current average domestic price of oil is about $6.50 a barrel, about twice what it was about a year ago. The Treasury estimates that oil production will for the next few years be about the same with the high price as it would have been with the old low price.

Tre Administration's answer was to recommend a "windfall profits" tax, which really was an excise tax on the price per barrel of oil and not on profits from oil. The tax would be levied on the price per barrel over a base of $4.50 and the base would move up annually so that less and less of the price would be considered taxable as a windfall. Moreover, the "windfall" tax was designed to self-destruct in six years.

The House Ways and Means Committee has adopted the windfall profits tax but added an immediate self-destruct feature. The committee provided that the windfall tax would be rebated if the companies reinvest in the oil business (which happens to be very profitable right now).

Ways and Means also adopted a phaseout of the percentage depletion allowance but under extremely generous terms. Thus, oil companies won't pay much tax at all on the windfall arising from the more than 100 per cent increase in prices.

Clearly, the oil depletion allowance is hostage to politics—not economics. People interested in special tax benefits have a lot of money and, thus far, money talks.

It is intriguing that much of the Watergate mess is about exactly this: How loud does money talk in poltics? One gathers that as a result of Watergate some rescals are going to be thrown out but what will be the alternative?

On hopes it will be a climate in which a large portion of the public will be demanding that Congress deal with the issues on the basis of a serious concern about the public interst.

The lesson is that to get better tax laws, we need better politics.

Claremont League

Sets annual meeting

Evelyn Kaplan, president of the 14,000-member League of Women Voters of California, will address the 35th meeting of the Claremont League Saturday at Wilbur Hall on the Scripps College campus.

The business meeting from 9:45 a.m. to noon will include the adoption of the local program for the year, a report on this year's transportation survey, election of officers and small-group discussions.

Mrs. Kaplan's address, "Priorities for the Local League," will follow the 12:15 p.m. luncheon. The conference will adjourn at 2 p.m

Because many women are returning to work or school, the League is facing the same woman-power crunch of many volunteer organizations, stated Charlene Martin, Claremont League president. The Saturday conference will help the league focus on realistic goals for the next year's league program which includes voters' service projects, community education efforts, membership studies, and national, state and local positions on over 30 critical public issues.

Reservations and information about the annual meeting can be obtained by contacting Margaret Cooke, membership chairman, 626-0246, or Carol Blanshard, program chairman, 626-4850.

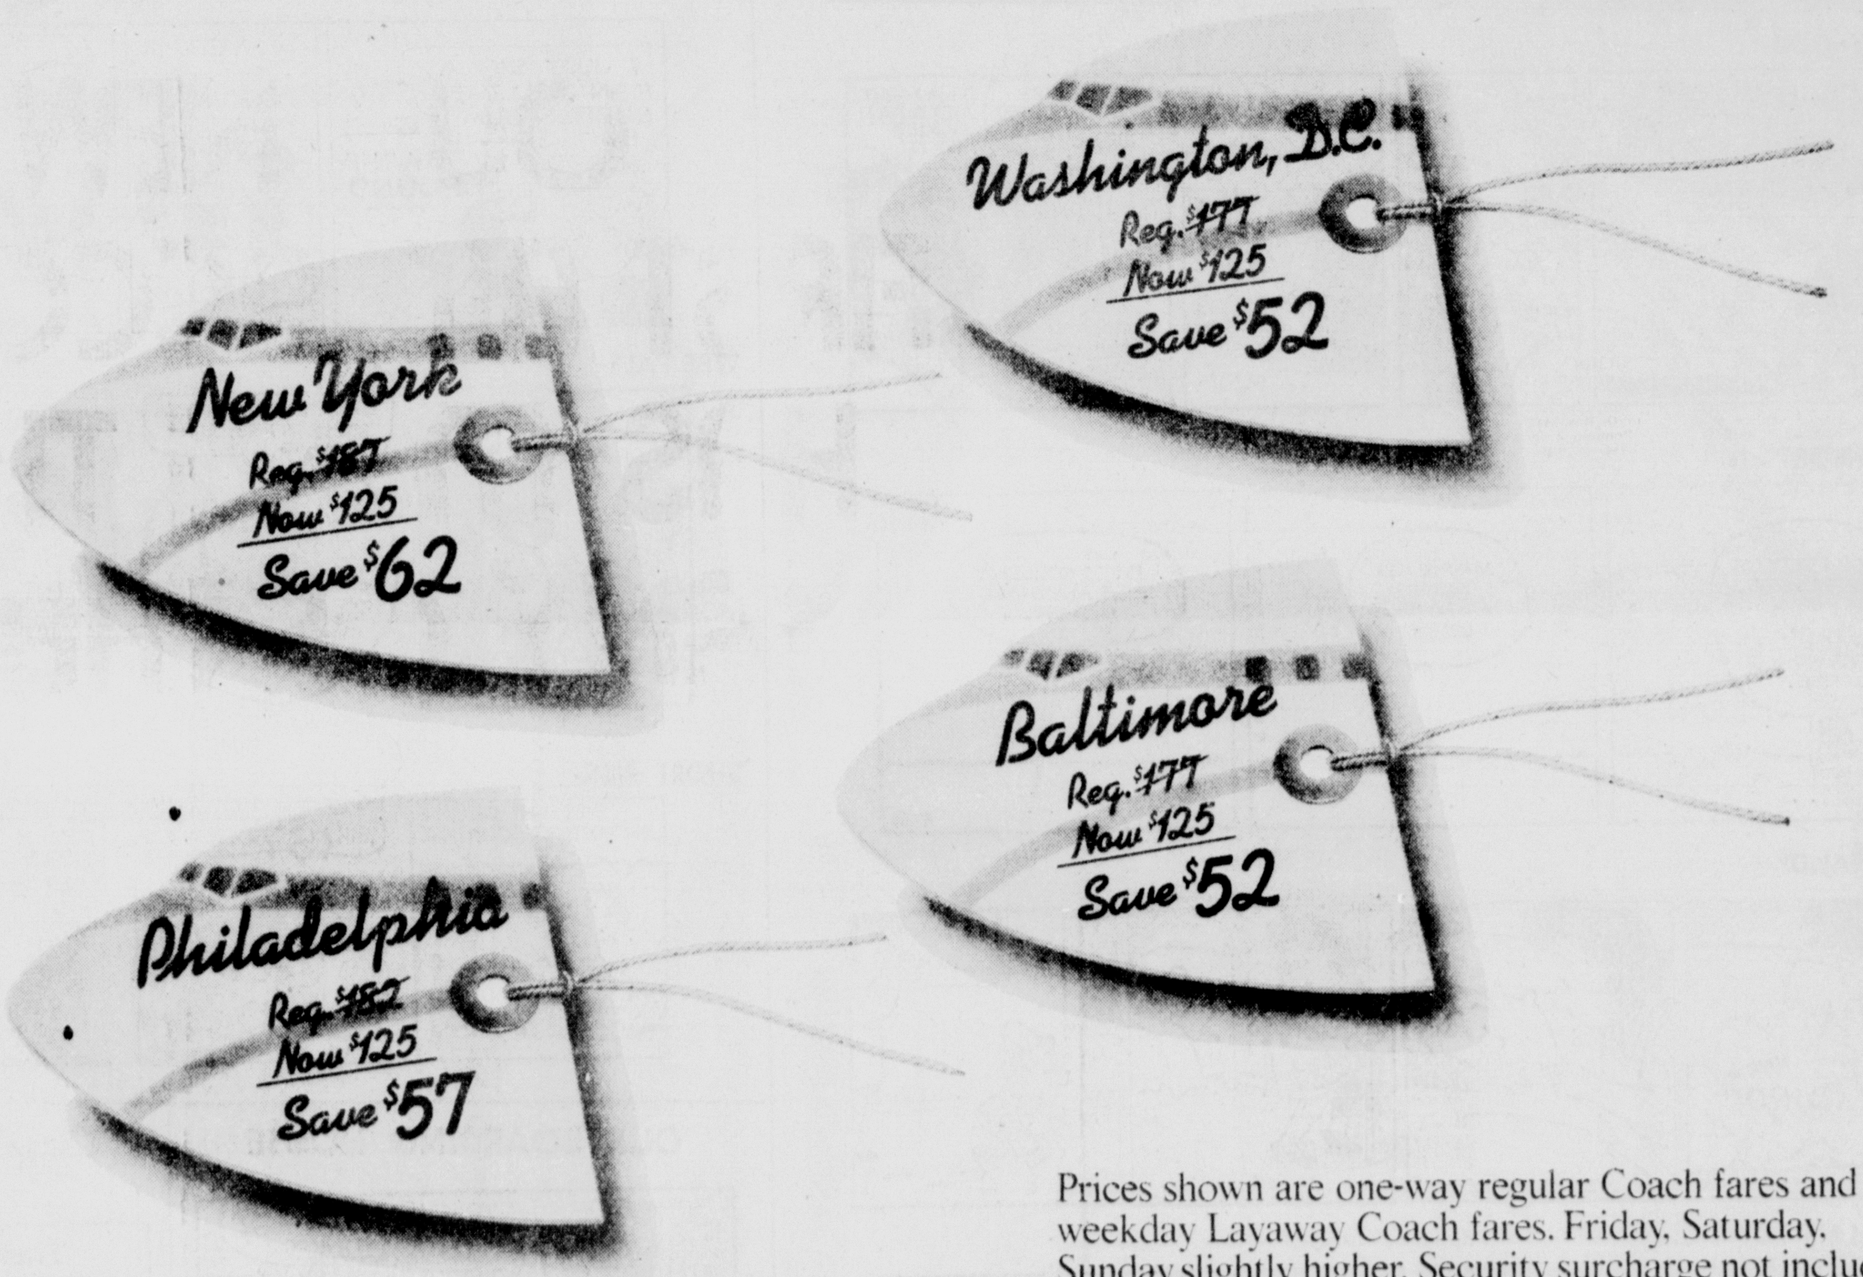
United announces "The Layaway Fare."

$20 down holds you these bargains.



Prices shown are one-way regular Coach fares and weekday Layaway Coach fares. Friday, Saturday, Sunday slightly higher. Security surcharge not included. Tickets valid only on United Air Lines. All fares subject to CAB approvals.

Think of it as a 90-day layaway. By planning ahead you can save 20 to 33% over regular Coach fares to the East Coast.

United's "Layaway Fare" can do more than just save you money. You can take care of all of your travel arrangements well in advance of your trip. And there's no minimum or maximum time you have to stay.

"Layaway Fare," one-way to the above cities, is only $125 Monday through Thursday and $140 Friday, Saturday and Sunday. And you can make round-trip arrangements, and save twice as much.

Here's how it works.

By making a $20 non-refundable deposit for each flight at least 90 days in advance of when you want to leave, we'll confirm your date of departure.

Then you have to pay the balance of your fare at least 45 days prior to departure. We'll tell you your exact flight and departure time within 30 to 45 days before you leave. Whenever possible, we'll fly you nonstop. Otherwise, it will be a convenient one-stop or connecting flight.

That's all there is to it. And if you want to, you can use your United Air Lines Travel Card to charge it.

"Layaway Fare" seats available on any given day are limited. Fares quoted are high season, effective July 8 through September 30, 1974; even lower October 1st through March 31, 1975 with certain dates unavailable during this period, subject to CAB approval.

So don't delay. Contact your Travel Agent today. Or call United at (714) 983-1721. Plan ahead and take advantage of United's "Layaway Fares" to the East Coast.

Marquetry Plus

New art gallery to open in Pomona Sunday

POMONA — Marquetry Plus, a new art gallery at 240 S. Main St., will open with a reception, exhibition and open house from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free.

Marquetry, the Old World art form of producing pictures with inlaid woods of varying tones and textures, is the media practiced by the gallery's artist-owner, Ina Penner. The "plus" in the title refers to works in various other media that will be exhibited.

As a first show the gallery is featuring Ben Carre, a man who holds many 'firsts' in the motion picture art world. Carre now devotes his time to painting pictures for at-home enjoyment, but for 64 years of his creative life he worked in the motion picture industry designing art backgrounds that made the make-believe world become real.

His 'firsts' include acting as art director for the first picture with sound, "Don Juan"; the first all-talking picture, "The Jazz Singer"; the first all-talking western made on location, "Riders of the Purple Sage"; and the first Charlie Chan picture, "The Black Camel."

His credits as art director and scenic designer range from the slapstick of "A Night at the Opera" to "The King of Kings," and include such films as "The Wizard of Oz," "Meet Me in St. Louis," and "Thirty Seconds over Tokyo."

As a scenic designer he was internationally known for his mastery of perspective on architectural backgrounds. Many films were possible only becaue he could be depended upon to reproduce, on backgrounds ranging up to 40 feet high and 100 feet long, famous buildings or structures, such as Notre Dame Cathedral or the dome of the Capitol in Washington. The English village street in "National Velvet" and the quais along the Seine and the panorama of Paris rooftops for "An American in Paris" are examples of his scenic designs.

Carre was a founding member of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences, and was one of the two art directors included in the original membership of 100. He did not cease film activity until his retirement from MGM in 1965 at the age of 82.

Carre's 11 oils and seven watercolors exhibited in the Marquetry Plus show reflect the versatility of his talent, some of the water colors illustrating his skill with architectural perspective and minutely detailed natural phenomena. The oils range from restful landscapes to oriental lanterns, to underwater fantasies of boyhood explorations along the coast near Marseilles where Carre spent summers studying with Jean Baptiste Duffaud of his native Paris.

In addition to the Carre collection and the Penner marquetry, the exhibit includes the work of a young sculptor, Larry Jochai; a spectrum of Mae Augarten's creative fabric techniques, a sample of unique pen and ink drawings by Kathrynne Hyde, and the fine jewelry of Shirley and Gene Phillips.

Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays, and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.. Saturdays.

Composer to lecture at Pomona

CLAREMONT — Composer Ernst Krenek will discuss, illustrate and compare two versions of one of his recent compositions in Thatcher Music Building, Pomona College, at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday. Admission is free.

Krenek will talk about a composition he wrote in 1972 for oboist Heinz Holliger and Holliger's wife, Ursula, a harpist. The work exists in two forms: "Kitharaulos," for oboe, harp and orchestra, and "Aulokithara," for oboe, harp and electronic tape. This unusual composition was premiered by the Holligers at the 1972 Holland Festival, and Krenek will have tapes of this performance to illustrate his lecture.

Krenek, one of the important living composers, was born in 1900 in Vienna, where he came under the influence of Mahler, and later Berg, Schoenberg and Webern. He also became associated with Hindemith in Germany before coming to the United States in 1937.

Krenek achieved international success in 1927 with his jazz-influenced opera "Jonny spielt auf," the story of a jazz fiddler who sweeps the world. The premiere created a sensation, and the opera was soon translated into 18 languages and performed throughout the world. A brand of cigarettes was even named after it.

Krenek's output includes 10 other operas, five symphonies, numerous concertos, six piano sonatas, and music for chorus and chamber ensembles.
